HIGH SPOTS IN AND ABOUT PETERBOROUGH

C.P.R. STATION IS 632 FEET ABOVE THE SEA LEVEL.

MILLBROOK HIGHER.

Usually Government blue books and publications partake of the "dry-as-dust" character, but occasionally one appears of an interesting nature. A publication recently issued gives the altitude (or height above sea level) of almost every city, town, village, and flag station in Canada. From this some curious, and, at times, surprising facts are brought to light.

The C.P.R. station, Peterboro, is exactly 632 feet above the level of the sea; the G.T.R. station 647—a difference of 15 feet. The Nassau platform is 708 feet; Lakefield 770 feet. There is thus a rise of 123 feet in the ten miles.

Figures are also given for the now disused portion of the G.T.R., extending from Peterboro to Chemong Lake. This line has been out of use for a good many years, but those who have had the opportunity of a trip over it will remember the magnificent views to be obtained some few miles out. About four and one-half miles north the roadbed reaches an altitude of 916 feet and a beautiful panorama to the south and east is obtained. From this point there is an easy descent to the shores of Chemong Lake. The old Chemong station, some three miles above Bridgenorth, is given an altitude of 816 feet.

As is well known, the G.T.R. on its way to Omemee and Lindsay follows the winding valley of the "creek," but it is not so well known there is a particularly stiff grade to surmount. Two miles west of Best's station the track reaches an elevation of 936 feet. This is the highest point that the iron horse surmounts in this immediate vicinity. There are, however, higher places in the neighbourhood of Goodwood, and also in the line running from Manilla to Whitby.

Going west on the C.P.R. the railway runs along a high ridge from Pontypool to Myrtle. The highest point reached is one mile west of Pontypool, where it reaches 1,106 feet. This high ridge separates the water flowing south toward blue Ontario from those flowing north toward Lake Scugog, and which eventually find their way down the Trent. The drop from Leeside Junction to the Union Station, Toronto, is 172 feet.

East of Peterboro the descent is practically continuous with the exception of a stretch between Indian River and Havelock.

On the way south to Port Hope it is surprising to find that Millbrook is 120 feet higher than Peterboro, and that we should say "going up" to Millbrook, rather than "down" to that place. At Carmel the track reaches 906 feet, but from there to Port Hope there is a rapid descent of 653 feet.

Peterboro is thus about 400 feet higher than the towns along the lake shore, and this fact, rather than the few miles farther north, doubtless accounts largely for the fact that fruit trees, shrubs, etc., bear more luxuriantly along the lake shore than in this neighbourhood, and are not "killed" by the rigors of winter to the extent that they are here. Some have ascribed the milder conditions to the influence of Lake Ontario, but while the lake doubtless has some influence on the locality, it does not extend to more than a short distance from the shore, as the prevailing winds are from the north-west. As the publication from which these figures are gleaned says, a few hundred feet rise in altitude is equal to several degrees in latitude. It is probable that the height of this section of country is responsible for its less mild conditions rather than its 30 miles farther north. It is also curious that where there is a hill in a section of level country the hill is invariably warmer than the surrounding district; but where the whole locality is elevated it is considerably colder than adjacent territories.

SERVANTS FATALLY BURNED AT TORONTO HOTEL FIRE

Blaze Broke Out in Linen Closet Under Quarters of Female Help---Women Cut off byl Fames.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, April 5.—Fire which started at 3.30 this morning in the female servants' quarters of the Queen's Hotel, according to early reports, resulted in fatal injury to two servants. Two others are suffering from smoke effects. The damage is trifling. Anna Anderson and Thirza Hopkins are in the hospital reported fatally burned and Margaret Burns and Mary Clark are seriously ill. The blaze broke out in a linen closet under the sleeping quarters of the female employes. The flames crossed the stairway, cutting off the only way of escape except by the fire ropes attached to the windows which the women were too terrified to use. Two of them attempted to break through the wall of flame but were forced back and were found terribly burned about the face and body, lying in their rooms. Others remained in their rooms stupified by terror and were eventually overcome by smoke. The fire at no time threatened the destruction of the hotel and was quickly extinguished.

Defective electric wiring is suspected as the cause of the fire.

MARKET PRICES

PETERBOROUGH MARKETS

Easter cattle kept the market clerk fairly busy the first part of this week and some really fine animals were weighed. Most of them will be slaughtered for the local trade.

Hogs are not so strong, and, while the local price was $15.50 on Wednesday a decline was looked for.

Walter Fisher, the new market clerk, took hold on Monday morning.

Eggs are much lower in price in Toronto and Montreal this week.

It is rumored that some of the cheese factories are going to start early this season, owing to the scarcity and high price of cheese.

So far, maple syrup has not made its appearance on the market. In Toronto a quantity came in that sold at $1.75 per gallon.

HORSE MARKET.

TORONTO, April 4. — Toronto's horse trade was not as active last week as has been the case recently, with only moderate activity in the Western trade, and with a falling off in the number taken by the French army inspectors. A number of shippers were advised not to ship as liberally as heretofore, but prospects are good for a broadening out of trade in the near future. There were 325 horses at the Repository last week. Six loads were taken for the West, for Saskatoon, Blucher, Sask., Prince Albert, Moosejaw, Winnipeg, and Verwood. The statement that horses would be purchased for the British Government that appeared in some Toronto evening papers last week has been found to be premature, but such a movement is understood to be on foot, and developments may be expected within a few days. The horses taken for the West brought $110 to $160, made up of cheapish and some sound blocks, 80 per cent. of which were mares.

The Saguenay Solitudes.

Describing his first trip to the now famous region of the Saguenay, in the Province of Quebec, in company with his habitant guide, Willy, Arthus Buies writes as follows:

"The forest is all around us, the forest of pines and firs and birches, which follows the thousand detours of the precipitous Laurentides. At long intervals one gets a glimpse of certain clearings, where meagre crops of grain are pushing up the blade, the struggling attempt of the first settlers who have as yet ventured into these solitudes. . . Here and there a solitary cabin, built of rough wood, scantily covered with a roof of bark, which is pierced by a broken funnel, emerges from the borders of the forest, where we can hear the sturdy blows of the woodman's ax and the crackling of the trees that fall before his onslaught." They presently reach the lake, and we read:

"We were alone in the silence and the endlessness. The unknown widened its mysterious spaces round us. A mirage seemed to envelop both earth and sky. It was as if I could behold the hills gently arising, wreathed with long veils of vapor flooded with light. I looked down at the narrow rock on which we stood. Below me, Willy lay on his elbow along the shore of the lake, watching the little waves that rippled along the pebbles, and on the edges of the crevices that wound in and out at my feet crawled a few lizards, the silent denizens of these regions, where long ago had no doubt resounded the war cry of the Hurons. Companions of the solitude and its half-forgotten memories, they reflected its enduring and changeless repose.

"'If you would like to hear what an echo is like in our mountains,' said Willy, 'you could tell about it afterward in your book.' My companion took my gun and fired it into the air. A sharp report seemed to strike the sky, and, like a rocket that, returning from its topmost point of flight, bursts into a luminous shower, the sound burst in space into a thousand clattering vibrations. The echo, rolling from mountain to mountain, from precipice to precipice, stirring the rocks to their sonorous depths, rising into the air, to fall instantly with a tumult a thousand times repeated in the utmost recesses of the hills and the trembling ravines, suddenly stopped, as if suspended in immensity; then like the last quiver of the note that vanishes from under the fingers of the player, it faded softly away with a plaintive murmur, as if loath to leave the spaces but now so responsive to its voice."

PARIS NOTES.

What the Parisians Are Turning Out For Spring.

What is lost in the width of the new skirts for spring is added to the length in the proportion of a yard to an inch. Skirts are now inches longer and certainly yards narrower. Where they were ten and twelve inches from the ground, they are now six or seven. As if this were not change enough, there is a new silhouette introduced, and that is one that closely resembles a barrel as far as the skirt is concerned. This is probably inspired by the Turkish skirt that was shown by several of the couturiers last spring. At any rate, there are a number of the largest creators in Paris who show skirts of this description.

Paquin uses it in an afternoon gown with a Russian blouse effect in the fastenings of the buttons down one side. Otherwise the frock has straight lines, that is, the waist is not fitted snugly as it is in many of the new spring creations.

[illegible] fashions a coat with this "tonneau" or barrel skirt of light gray broadcloth, made with the trimming of many rows of stitching in a darker shade of gray. The barrel effect is introduced between straight panels in the front, sides and back of the coat.

Even coat suits are showing the barrel skirt, and one sponsored by an expert is of checks of blue and white, trimmed with Roumanian embroidery. The jacket of this suit is hip length, as are many of the suits for spring for this house.

Premet uses this type of skirt in an afternoon frock of two materials. They are joined just below the hips, and at this point the skirt is much wider than at the bottom where it is drawn in considerably.

From these various couturiers it will be seen that there is every chance that skirts of this description will be very much the mode for the early spring frock. They are not unattractive, especially if they are not exaggerated in line. Most of the frocks with such a skirt are sure to have the waist fit a bit more snugly, for the outline then is wider at the shoulders than at the waist, when the line goes in, and it undulates from that point to greater width at the knees and narrows considerably at the bottom.

TIN PAN BATHS NO MORE.

And "Best People" Never Bathe in Water.

In many European countries, "the best people," if you know what that means, never bathe in water, says Julius Chambers in The Brooklyn Eagle.

Spanish matrons have expressed much surprise at my complaints about the absence of bathing facilities in the Madrid hotels. One lady, wife of a distinguished member of the Cortes, told me she "had herself rubbed down in oil once a week, but never had got into a tub of water, and never would!"

It is somewhat doubtful, for example, if Columbus had perfect table manners, or took a daily bath, even in the warm waters of the Sargasso Sea; but he achieved considerable notoriety.

Throughout Hungary, outside Budapest, baths are unknown in hotels or in castles of the nobility. An heiress of one of New York's wealthiest families—the Vanderbilts—married a Hungarian count, and when she reached the ancestral castle, which her family's American money was expected to restore, sought in vain for any means of taking a bath.

My memory of London hotels goes back to 1875, when there was not a single bathtub in any hotel in that city. A tin pan and bucket of warm water was the only "tub"—and you were lucky to get that.

And in that same period in New York City the Metropolitan and St. Nicholas Hotels, supposed to be models of excellence, were totally wanting in bathrooms.

Admittedly, it is as difficult to imagine life without motor cars as without bathtubs; but the former are less than a 20-year-old necessity, while the bath was an institution long before the times of the Roman emperors.

Alexander very nearly lost his life from pneumonia by bathing in one of the chilly mountain torrents of Asia Minor.

Prince of Wales Lives Busy Life of a Soldier At the Front in France

BEING "at the front" is not, as many people think, just one big joy-ride for the young Prince of Wales. The other day a Canadian correspondent met an officer, who for six months had come daily in contact with the heir to the throne, and who threw an interesting sidelight upon the character of the King's eldest son.

"The Prince is a very decent chap," quoth the officer, a sturdy, democratic, independent Scot. "There's no swank or nonsense about him. He was with my department at the front for six months. The Prince had a good-sized job to handle, and he knuckled to, learned the details, and did his work very well. It was just the making of the Prince coming to us.

"You know, the Prince had always been very anxious to get over to the scene of warfare, from the very beginning. So after he had completed his cadet course, the King, whom he had been worrying, told him he had better go and see Kitchener about it. Well, the young chap told Kitchener right off the reel, that he was quite prepared to take his chances of being wounded or killed. 'All right, your Royal Highness,' Kitchener had answered, 'you may go, and good luck to you. Now, I don't mind if you are wounded, or even killed, those are chances anyone who goes to the front must take, but for heaven's sake don't let the Germans capture you.' And, my! how the Prince hates and loathes the Germans."

When the Prince first arrived at the front he was never allowed to stray beyond the watchful eye of his personal escort, a certain estimable but fussy staff-major, who felt the responsibility of his royal charge most keenly. The worthy major's efforts for the comfort and safety of his young protege irritated everyone, not even excepting the personage in whose behalf they were expended. The Prince chafed under this "personally conducted" existence and yearned for some real work.

PRINCE OF WALES.

Finally the royal "sub" requested a transfer. "Our general replied that he would be glad to have his Royal Highness," continued the Scotsman, "but on condition that he leave the major behind. He flatly refused to have that fussy gentleman about. The Prince would just have to come on his own hook, take a regular job and go about his work unattended, like any other young subaltern. In due course, and quite unknown to the rest of us, the Prince turned up and the general put him to work looking after the ammunition supplies for the —— Corps.

"One morning I got for countersignature, an order for ammunition signed 'Edward, second lieutenant.' I couldn't understand it, and wondered who this new officer was, and what he meant by signing only his Christian name. I refused to sign it and [illegible] to the general. The general just laughed, and nodded towards the end of the big room to where a youth in khaki was sitting at a desk checking off what looked like invoices, remarking quietly: 'There is Edward; didn't you know that the Prince of Wales had joined us?' "

Up at six o'clock every morning and often coming into the Scotch captain's room for instructions before the officer had crawled out from his blankets, the Prince had no easy task.

"Although most informal in most ways," stated the narrator, "the Prince is, of course, hedged about by etiquette. There is no 'Royal Highnessing' expected from his officer associates for the time, and he is required to salute his superiors; but on the other hand, although I met him every day, he never shook hands with me. In fact, I only saw him shake hands a few times during his entire visit. Shaking hands is an attention that royalty, whatever their personal inclinations, are constrained to bestow only on certain occasions and not promiscuously. I was never allowed to introduce any officer to the Prince. Etiquette forbade. If he wished to know anyone, he merely asked, 'Who is that officer?' That was the introduction, and thereafter, if the officer was with us, the Prince called him by name."

HERE'S EGG LORE

How to Test Eggs Before You Break Them.

CLEVER WAY TO BEAT ONE.

Every Household Uses Them, but How Many Housewives Know the Simplest Things About These Commonest Ingredients of All Cookery?

Are the eggs for which you pay 40 cents better than those which cost 30? Test them to see.

Much handling makes eggs shiny.

Those direct from the farm are dull.

If an egg is stale some of the water of its composition has evaporated through the porous shell, air has entered, and the egg is light.

To test, put in a deep pan of water.

First.—If bad it will float.

Second.—If stale it will be light enough to slant away from the bottom of the pan or stand on end.

Third. If fresh its weight causes it to sink.

This test will make you wish eggs could always be bought by the pound, as in some places, instead of by the dozen.

Because the eggshell is porous and readily absorbs impurities from a dirty shell or the air eggs should always be washed before being put away.

Second test: Hold egg before a candle or gas jet behind which is a dark background.

Around the yolk of an egg is a thin tissue, which holds the yolk together. When decomposition occurs the yolk breaks this membrane and becomes mixed with the white. By holding the egg before a strong light the yolk can easily be seen as a large dark spot.

If bad, the yolk has broken its membrane and this dark spot cannot be noticed.

There is also a tissue around the white of an egg which, in beating the whites stiff, must be broken into infinitesimal pieces before the egg will become light and fluffy.

A few grains of salt dropped into the white before beating will at each turn of the beater help to cut this —

The whites then "beat up" much sooner than if the salt had not been added.

Table for cooking eggs without keeping time or temperature:

One egg, one-half pint of boiling water. Two or three eggs, a pint of boiling water. Three to five eggs, one and one-half pints of boiling water. Five to eight eggs, a quart.

Put the eggs into the water while it is boiling hard and immediately set the dish away from the fire. Fifteen or twenty minutes will be required to cook the eggs. After that time the water will have reached 140 degrees and will do no more cooking, but will keep the eggs warm a long time.

No Colored Eggs For This Easter

Are there colored eggs this year for Easter celebration? If there are they are so carefully decorated that their safety as food is not destroyed. Our experience with eggs during the past winter has given us very practical thoughts regarding them. In spite of their Easter symbolism. And, happily, the Easter spirit springs in our hearts even without the aid of symbols, and in spite of a somewhat wearing extra-carefulness in household matters.

So precious are eggs in England now, needed so much by the invalided men who crowd the hospitals, that many plans and "egg funds" exist to procure their donation. Egg baskets, for instance, are set out, in which one deposits an egg or as many eggs as can be given. That may well be an appropriate form of Easter offering there this year.

With our wounded men coming back to Canada in increasing numbers, with hospital trains bringing them from the sea-board, and with enlarged hospital accommodation being provided, we too shall have plenty of use for some time to come for every fine fresh egg that can be had.

The baking of special cakes at Easter time and through the Lenten season is a very ancient custom, of which representatives still exist in our Hot Cross Buns for Good Friday, and the perhaps less well-known "Simnel Cakes" of mid-Lent Sunday or "Mothering Sunday," so called because in olden times it was the custom for people to visit their Mother Church on that day and make offerings. The old custom long survived in the country, where apprentices and servants visited their parents on Mid-Lent Sunday, taking gifts of money and cakes.

The poet Herrick says:—

"I'll to thee a Simnel bring
'Gainst thou go'st a-mothering;
So that when she blesseth thee
Half that blessing thou'll give me."

The Simnel cake was then considered a most appropriate present, and is still popular in some parts of England.

SOUR MILK AND LONG LIFE

Will the drinking of sour milk tend to longevity? In other words, is there any truth in the common belief that if a person wants to live to an old age, he or she should drink freely of sour milk?

It is surprising how strong this belief is held by many people, while there have been experts, such as Mitchnikoff, who have almost gone the length of vouching for the truth of the theory. Table drinks can be secured, of which the basis is the Bacillus Bulgaricus, bacteria which cause the acidity in the milk, and which probably take their name from the fact that sour milk is used freely in that country.

Many and extraordinary are the claims which have been made for sour milk. The theory on which these claims rest is that the ferments which cause the acidity are not only harmless in themselves, but that they are also extremely militant. Like an army invading a country, these bacteria, when taken into the human system, eagerly attack pathologic bacteria in the intestines, which are said to be the cause of "old age" or decay. By making war on these harmful bacteria, the bacteria from the sour milk exterminate the latter, and so prolong life. In support of this theory many wonderful cases have been cited of long life where sour milk has been the principal diet.

For example, an old woman died some years ago in Bulgaria, who was said to have been 158 years of age, and it is added that she lived for the last ten of these years entirely on cheese and goat's milk. This case loses something of its force, however, as an example of what sour milk will do in prolonging life, from the fact that for 148 out of the 158 years the old lady lived on a general diet.

Another instance is that of another old lady, Thense Abalve, who a short time ago was reported to have reached the age of 180 years. At that time she was able to do much of her own work and to walk with a firm step. She had never taken any alcoholic drink, and her chief food was barley bread and buttermilk.

In spite of these instances of longevity where sour milk formed a large part of the diet, authorities appear to agree that the theory is not old enough to have been properly tested. That sour milk is a wholesome and to many a palatable diet is generally conceded, but whether it will prolong life has still to be proved.

SCALLOPED PARSNIPS

Wash, pare and cut parsnips into rounds; there should be four cups. Cook in boiling salted water until tender. Drain well. Make 2 cups of white sauce as above. Butter a baking dish, sprinkle with buttered crumbs. Add a layer of parsnips, then a grating of cheese and white sauce to cover. Repeat until all is used. Cover top with bread crumbs. Bake until a golden brown in a quick oven. (Cheese may be omitted).

PRESSED CHICKEN

A country housekeeper offers this simple recipe for pressed chicken, which she finds successful. Boil the chicken until quite tender. Even tough poultry can be made tender if cooked in a fireless cooker. Remove all the bones and the skin, chop the meat fine and add one egg well beaten and salt and pepper to taste. Melt a lump of butter as large as an egg and add that. Mix all together well and put it into about a pint of the broth which has been strained. Cook until the broth is evenly absorbed. Remove from the fire, put into a mold and press under a weight until cold.

DYE IN SUGAR SAMPLES

In a report upon 175 samples purchased as sugar the chief analyst of the Laboratory of the Inland Revenue Department summarizes the results as follows:

Found genuine refined sugar, 143 samples; found genuine brown sugar, 25 samples; found adulterated, as containing a dye, 6 samples; passed, as being very close to the standard, 1 sample; total, 175 samples.

The six samples in question contained a blue dyestuff (apparently ultramine) and in that respect violated standard requirements. Only one of the dyed samples was found in Toronto district.

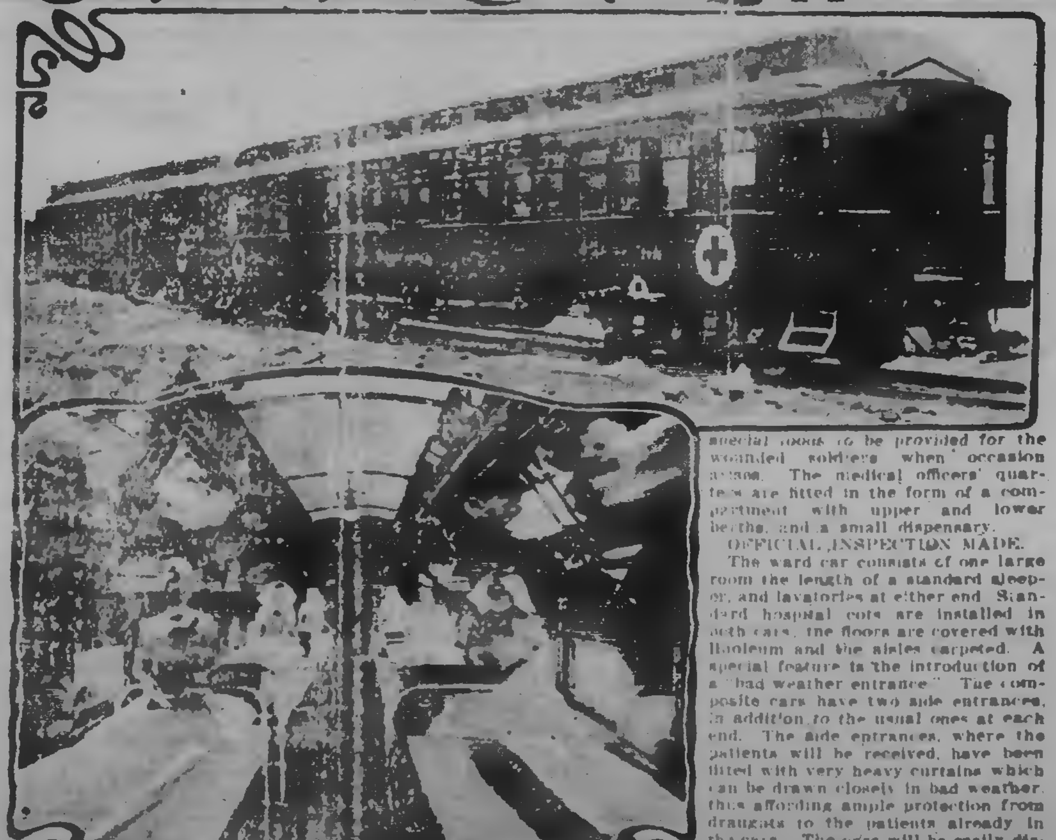
RAISIN BREAD

Cream two tablespoonfuls of sugar with butter the size of a walnut, add one beaten egg, one cupful of milk, one teaspoonful of salt and about three cupfuls of flour in which has been mixed one rounded teaspoonful of cream of tartar and one-half teaspoonful of soda. Lastly add one half cupful of raisins. Let it rise in a warm place about twenty minutes, and bake for one hour in a moderate oven.

SCALLOPED MEAT

Into a baking dish put alternate layers of macaroni or rice and chopped meat. Pour over it tomato sauce. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake until dish is heated through and the crumbs browned.

Comforts for Returning Heroes



THE idea of providing hospital cars for invalided members of Canada's expeditionary forces originated with the Canadian [illegible] way over two years ago [illegible] plans and interior arrangement [illegible] hospital cars were submitted to the Director-General of Supplies and Transport. At that time it was considered that the time was not [illegible] them. However, it was later found advisable to provide the greatest comfort possible in the [illegible] tion of returned invalided [illegible] The Military Hospitals Commission therefore agreed to the Canadian Pacific Railway building some hospital cars, fitted up on the most up-to-date lines from the point of view of hygienic and medical efficiency. All the necessary points for comfort and easy transport have been considered as well as the facilities for rendering every medical assistance to the men while travelling. The cars, which were [illegible] by the Hospitals Commission, were turned out on lines very similar to the original plans submitted to the Director-General of Supplies and Transport, with, however, certain innovations found valuable by the French and [illegible] railways in transporting men [illegible] There are three [illegible] of two cars each, making six cars in all, and the direction of the [illegible] rests with the Hospitals Commission. Each unit comprises what is known as a composite car and a ward car. The former contains six [illegible] in addition to the quarters for medical officers and nurses, while the latter has accommodation for fourteen patients. Everything has been provided, not only for the comfort of the returned invalids, but for those in charge of the patients. The accommodation for the nurses is equivalent to that of a drawing-room [illegible] sleeper, with a toilet room annex upholstered in leather and all possible train comforts. Facilities have been provided for the [illegible] of baggage, and there is also a kitchen attached, such as is contained in a tourist sleeper, to enable special foods to be provided for the wounded soldiers when occasion arises. The medical officers' quarters are fitted in the form of a compartment with upper and lower berths, and a small dispensary.

OFFICIAL INSPECTION MADE.

The ward car consists of one large room the length of a standard sleeper, and lavatories at either end. Standard hospital cots are installed in both cars, the floors are covered with linoleum and the aisles carpeted. A special feature is the introduction of a "bad weather entrance." The composite cars have two side entrances, in addition to the usual ones at each end. The side entrances, where the patients will be received, have been fitted with very heavy curtains which can be drawn closely in bad weather, thus affording ample protection from draughts to the patients already in the cars. The cars will be easily distinguished by the large Red Cross painted on either side of the words "Military Hospital."

Lt.-Col. Walter Maughan, representing the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, received Col. Dr. Alfred Thompson, Chief Medical Officer of the Military Hospitals Commission; Col. J. J. Sharples, Officer Commanding the Military Hospitals Command; and Col. Ernest E. Clark, Assistant Director-General of Supplies and Transport, and conducted the party on a tour of thorough inspection through the composite cars and the ward car. The party came from Ottawa expressly to make the inspection, and subsequently expressed themselves delighted with the accommodation, which they said was so perfect in every detail that they could offer no suggestions for any alterations. Later Captain Symonds, Architect of the Military Hospitals Commission, and Mr. S. A. Armstrong, Director of the Military Hospitals Commission, made a similar tour of inspection. The cars go into operation immediately.

AMMONIA BISCUIT.

Dissolve a teaspoonful of baking ammonia (powdered rock ammonia) in a tablespoonful of milk. Beat to a cream one cup of sugar, and one-quarter pound of butter. Add the egg beaten in the "ammoniated milk"; stir in two cups of flour, roll out and cut into shapes, square or oblong wafers, or as desired. Bake on a floured tin in a quick oven, but watch carefully as they burn easily. The above recipe can be varied by adding extract of lemon, vanilla, cinnamon or any preferred flavoring.

Missionaries From Peterboro Meet in Chengtiu, W. China

Missionaries from Peterborough have met in Chengtu Sze, West China. Mr. J. H. Taylor, 580 Bolivar street, has received a letter from his daughter, Mrs. (Dr.) A. E. Best, who writes of having had supper with Rev. Stanley and Mrs. Annis. Mrs. Annis was Miss Aggie Davis, a nurse at Nicholls Hospital and a prominent worker at George Street Church.

Mrs. Best asks about Mrs. Harold Robertson, who is now in Peterborough on furlough and visiting with her mother. "There is a conference or council of missionaries of several churches, and a large crowd of foreigners are gathered here," she writes. "It is a very inspiring assembly, I must say, and I think I will go home with a lot of new inspiration for the next term's work among the Chinese women. It certainly is a treat to be here.

A Romance.

"A rather interesting thing happened lately. 'Ted' (her husband) and I, and Mr. Bridgman, who boarded with us, started out together to come to Chengtu. We reached Chingking, where we spent Christmas, and where a nurse just out from Canada joined us. She was a Miss Modeland coming to Chengtu for language study. Well, she and Mr. Bridgman were engaged inside of three weeks after they met. They intend being married this summer, and may come to Fow Chow to live. We all think it quite a joke. The mission has lost a valuable nurse, but Mr. Bridgman will have a lovely wife, and everyone is glad for him. They will be a very nice couple. So the sensation of the season has taken place right in our own town.

MR. HARRY STOCK FOUND PEOPLE IN ENGLAND OPTIMISTIC.

MAKE NO COMPLAINT.

HIS SON, LT. STOCK, WITH FIRST DIVISION OF CANADIANS.

Mr. Harry Stock has arrived home after spending several weeks in England and at the same time visiting his son, Lieut. Percy Stock, of the 93rd Bn., but now of the 1st Canadian Division somewhere in France. Percy was in England for a short time, and was in good health except for a cold. He told his father there were very few Peterborough boys in the unit to which he is attached.

Mr. Stock says that the people of England are very optimistic, business is good, and food seems to be plentiful. The hardships which they undergo are treated indifferently. Money is plentiful owing to the women now earning as much as the men. On the voyage home the ship which Mr Stock was on was ordered back to Plymouth, as a hospital ship had been torpedoed. Later the ship was seen settling, and was to be seen with funnel and masts exposed when the voyage was resumed. New York was reached the day on which President Wilson gave his message to Congress, and Mr. Stock says that the display of flags was magnificent.

"The Americans are great flag-wavers," he remarked.

WILL UNSETTLE GERMANS FAITH IN THE KAISER

United States Will be Big Factor in the War.

OTTAWA, April 7— "More than all, the entrance of the United States into the contest marks the unanimity of the world democracy in defence of liberty and right and equality marks the downfall of autocratic Governments and all the menace they hold for the peace of the world," said Sir George E. Foster, Acting Prime Minister of Canada, last night in a statement in which he commented upon the action of the United States in declaring war upon Germany. The United States, he said, would first be able to aid the Allies by the co-operation of her fleet in the measures to combat the submarine peril and to drive enemy commerce raiders from the seas. Before long that nation would, moreover, be able to develop a string force of the finest quality and in large numbers, which would be a determining factor, taking into account the growing exhaustion of the man-power of the Central Powers.

Sir George Foster said: "The entrance of the United States into the war is an event of far-reaching importance and in the end has been drastic to a degree. The fact that for nearly three years a great liberty loving and humane people, despite all that German ruthlessness had done, kept clear of hostilities, though under circumstances which tried their pride and offended their sensibilities to the utmost, is proof of the great reluctance with which she regarded the final appeal to force.

Effect Wide-Reaching

"Now that they have taken the fateful step, the rapidity of movement and the unanimity of accord have surprised the world. The effect will be immediate and wide-reaching.

"Morally the accession to the allied cause of the last great neutral democracy will put fresh heart into the Entente nations, wearied and wasted as all are with the gigantic struggle.

"Equally will it spell complete disaster to the Teuton combination already practically balked of its objective by the long and heroic efforts of the Allies on all fronts. Nothing that has yet occurred outside of the swift deposition of the Romanoffs by the democracy of Russia will tend to unsettle the mass of the German people in their stolid belief that the Kaiser was invincible and that the present regime was the best for Germany.

GERMANS REFUSED TO SURRENDER AND BLOW UP THEIR GUNBOAT

Lieut. Dunsford Reverts for Service With 247th Battalion

Lieut.-Col. Ackerman, his officers and men are anxiously awaiting the order to entrain for Ottawa. Everything is in readiness for a hurried departure, but it is not anticipated that the first draft will leave here before noon on Monday.

The officers selected to accompany the drafts are Lieuts. Harry Lattimer, J. F. Strickland and A. H. Cameron.

Lieut. S. J. Dunsford resigned his commission and enlisted as a private in order to accompany the 247th men overseas. He was later appointed sergeant provisionally.

At the last moment a recruit was taken on the strength in the person of Pte. Willie LaRue.

Pte. W. A. Primeau has been promoted to be sergeant.

Capt. T. Kidd, A.D.C. to General Hemming, and Major Ponton were visitors to the Armories today.

All of the officers, non-coms. and men who have been on recruiting duty or at the training schools have returned to headquarters.

LOST BARN AND TWO HORSES

FIRE AT HOME OF ALEX. REID IN EARLY MORNING.

Alex. Reid, the local expressman, suffered the loss of his barn and two horses about 5 o'clock Friday morning, when wire trouble started a fire in the barn. Mr. Reid and his son Eddie, awakened by the fire, hurried to the stable, but the flames prevented a rescue of the horses.

Mr. Reid, Sr. received a slight shock of electricity.

The loss is partially covered by insurance.

The wind and snow did tremendous damage all through this district. Telephone, electric and telegraph lines, the fire alarm circuit, shade trees, shrubs and awnings all paid toll before the severity of the weather man.

All day yesterday it was a case of "no tick" with the telegraph offices, with the result that it was impossible to get news in or out of Peterborough and the Bulletin services were nil as a result. It was late in the evening before the Review received the news that Congress had passed and President Wilson had signd the war resolution.

The awnings of several stores fell under the weight of snow. Turnbull's, Pierson's, Woolworth, and Joplings were the most damaged. It was only prompt action on the part of the police that others did not suffer a similar fate.

The Utilities Commission suffered greatly. Wires were down in all directions and in some places crossed and tangled, doing considerable damage to fuses and transformers. For a great part of the day it was a case of lights out. General Manager Fisk and his men worked hard all day repairing trouble.

Travellers coming from East and West reported that all along both the G.T.R. and C.P.R. lines poles and wires were down in numerous places.

Manager Cameron of the local telephone exchange says that there are at least 200 telephone poles down in this district and about 200 instruments out of commission in the city alone. The rural and long distance lines are out of business for the present.

Duty Called and He Was There

INDIAN SOLDIER'S TRIBUTE TO FALLEN COMRADE.

Alfred McCue of Curve Lake has received a letter from Pte. A. Johnson, a member of the 93rd Battalion, who sends word of the death of Pte. A. Beaver, also a 93rd man, previously reported killed in action. Pte. Johnson writes:

France, March 8, 1917.

Dear Friend:

I have found the time to write a few lines to you. I am well and still alive, but it makes my heart sore to break the sad news about your brother. He was killed a week ago last Saturday. It was his fate to fall in the strife. Duty called, and he was there to do his bit and take his share. His heart was good, his spirit brave, his resting place a soldier's grave. He lies beside his comrades in hallowed grave unknown. A word cross marks where your brother fell. The bugles may sound and the cannon may roar, but he will be found in the conflict no more. When all alone, you sigh and shed a bitter tear for the brother you loved so well. It is hard for me to tell you all of the chum that was good to me. We had been together for the last four months. There is nothing left to answer but the photo I am sending you. It will leave me lonesome, as it is the only one I had. But hope it will help to relieve you from sadness to see his face, if it is only a photo all that is left to tell the tale. I guess this will be all for this time. I will close with a little verse:

"A brother from your home is gone,
A voice you loved is still;
A place is vacant in your home
The world can never fill."

I remain, your affectionate friend,

Seven Members of the Crew Killed in Explosion.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, April 7. — The interned German gunboat Cormorant at Guam has been blown up. The Cormorant refused to surrender to American forces which went to take possession of her, and was destroyed by her crew. Two German warrant officers and five men of the crew were killed by the explosion. Twenty officers, twelve warrant officers and 321 men were taken prisoners.

GOOD FRIDAY AS PER USUAL

TWO YEARS IN 25 WHEN THE DAY SAW NEITHER RAIN OR SNOW.

The heavy wet snow of Thursday night, while disagreeable, was not unseasonable, as we usually have a similar experience during the first half of April, and sometimes much later. It is a curious fact that practically without exception there is rain or snow on Good Friday. During the last twenty-five years we have discovered but two years on which there was not rain or snow, or a threatening of the same, on Good Friday. These years were 1912 (five years ago), when Good Friday was an ideal spring day, and 1898, when the conditions were good. Easter Sunday, on the contrary, is generally bright and sunshiny, although there have been exceptions then also, but not many more than the exceptions pertaining to Good Friday. The precipitation during Thursday night in the form of heavy snow, and yesterday in rain, totalled 1.20 of an inch altogether. W. P.

HYDRO LINEMAN MEETS DEATH WHILE AT WORK

Line on Which Allan Casson Wa, Working Early This Morning Was Supposedly "Dead."

A. Casson, aged 26, an employe of the Peterborough Utilities Commission, was almost instantly killed at the Peterborough Lock Co. this morning. He had been sent to the Lock Co. to repair a line and was engaged in connecting a supposedly dead wire in the lane between the two buildings of the plant. He wore leather gloves and was using his knife to bare the wire when he received the shock which killed him. An employee of the Lock Co. noticed him fall and at once went to render assistance. The pulmotor was summoned and also medical aid, but their efforts were in vain. The body was removed to Comstock's undertaking parlors.

Before the men went to work on the line it was found that the fuses were burned out so that it must have been a crossed wire that carried the current into the wire on which he worked.

The deceased was unmarried and lived at 576 Homewood Ave.

An inquest will be opened by Coroner Greer at 4 p.m.

Wm. McKenzie of Roxton road is a step-brother. His father and one sister, Mary, reside at [illegible] Homewood avenue. Two other sisters are Mrs. Wm. Beachy, of Toronto, and Mrs. F. G. Huffman, Trenton.

He had been working here since last November.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, APRIL 7, 1917

THE MEETING APRIL 17TH.

PROVINCIAL SECRETARY McPherson and Attorney-General Lucas will be the leading speakers at the mass meeting to be held in the Grand Opera House on the evening of April 17th, and no better selection could possibly have been made short of the Premier himself. It was intended to have Sir William Hearst visit Peterborough, but, owing to the nature of his engagements, it was impossible for him to accept the invitation.

Messrs. McPherson and Lucas are both outstanding figures in the Ontario Cabinet and both are excellent speakers. Each is in charge of a department that has to do with some of the most important questions now before the people, and they can be depended upon to give a satisfactory account of their several stewardships.

To make the oratory complete, Miss Boulton, one of the leading exponents of equal suffrage, will address the meeting, and the newly enfranchised women of this city will be given an excellent opportunity to hear their new duties and responsibilities clearly explained.

The gathering cannot fail to make the Hearst Government stronger and more popular than ever among the various classes of the community.

THE SESSION OF THE LEGISLATURE.

THE SESSION of the Legislature now in progress will always live in history as the time when the women of Ontario were given the franchise on the same terms as men. It will be remembered, too, for the handling of the nickel problem and for the amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act where actual experience has shown that that measure was defective.

Acting on the recommendation of the commission appointed to investigate the question, a rate of taxation on nickel has been fixed which will result in an addition to the provincial revenue greater than any increase ever made by a fiscal measure. No taxes have been collected for the past two years, as the fixed rate of $40,000 a year was regarded as inadequate in view of the tremendous amount of business done by the nickel companies on account of the war. The report of the commission is of further value as it has shown that in mineral wealth the Dominion of Canada is second to no other country in the world.

The Administration that took its life in its hands when it gave Ontario a prohibitory law, has not made a single concession to the opponents of that measure, although they have offered the standard hotels every possible inducement to remain open and every chance to make a profit in their business. There is on the part of the friends of the measure a disposition to let well enough alone. Further restrictions, such as making liquor contraband under all circumstances, would only antagonize thousands of supporters of prohibition. You cannot make the world either moral or religious in a day, either by legislative enactment or by moral suasion. Such reformation is a slow process, extending over a long period of years.

The Ontario Temperance Act has, in actual operation, worked out more satisfactorily than the most hopeful of its supporters looked for. Its success has been largely due to the rigor with which it has been enforced. No magistrate in Ontario has shown a disposition to wink at offences. The License Commissioners are responsible to a great extent for these conditions, and the temperance party will be pleased to learn that the Board is to be left intact.

Perhaps the most important amendment to the Act is that which restores the "Indian list." Liquor can be declared contraband for a person who abuses existing facilities for securing it. Any justice of the peace or license inspector can place an offender on the prohibited list, and liquor found in the possession of such a person or purchased or intended for him can be confiscated.

The matter of advertising is to be left, it seems, with the License Commissioners. This is the only amendment to which any objection can be taken. The Legislature should deal directly with such an important phase of the question, and not relegate their authority to a board, the members of which are not directly responsible to the people.

Other important matters dealt with at the present session of the Legislature include the amendments to the Workmen's Compensation Act, the suspension of the Dairy Act for one year, and the Act extending aid to agriculture by making it easy for the farmers to borrow money from the Province for permanent improvements upon easy terms. All things considered, the Hearst Government will pass through the session stronger than ever in the confidence of every section of the community.

MILITARY RECORD OF THE U. S.

THERE IS A SURPLUS of officers in Canada, the number of men who held commissions being out of all proportion to the number of enlisted men, but it is likely that the former will find places in the military service of the United States now that war has been declared. Military officers across the border may be well trained and competent, but the number has always been limited in proportion to the 100,000 men allowed by the Constitution as the maximum for a standing army. If a fighting force of one million men is raised now there will be some difficulty in finding the necessary complement of officers.

It has always been the general belief that if the Americans entered the war, General Sir Sam Hughes would be appointed to an important position in the service. Like so many other prophets and public men, that doughty general is not without honor abroad. His administration of the war department in this country has always been eulogized by military men and newspapers across the border. Getting 33,000 men under arms and across the seas in the space of six weeks, this, too, in a country unused to war, is regarded as a masterstroke of military enterprise, an achievement never before equalled. It is almost certain that the United States will avail itself of the genius for organization that it has always admired in Canada's ex-Minister of Militia.

The United States has been slow in the matter of opening hostilities, but the chances are that now the country is in the war in earnest, effective aid will be rendered the Allies. The Americans have always enjoyed an enviable reputation among the leading military authorities of the world. Attaches of European governments who watched the operations during the Civil War, pronounced the officers in that conflict, especially those in the Southern army, as the equals of any in the world. General Grant has been called a butcher, even by the men of the North with whom he fought, a leader who won simply because he recognized no barrier to success and ruthlessly drove his troops into any danger, but, the Lees, the Wheelers and the Edwardses are still regarded as the greatest exponents of strategic warfare that the world has ever seen, and their systems have been adopted and taught in the military colleges of Canada and Europe. Any graduate of such a school in this country will say as much.

The hands of the Allies will be strengthened by the United States. The people appear to be behind Congress in this move, and the entire resources of the country will be taxed to the limit. It must be said, too, on behalf of that nation that the leaders, in hesitating so long on the brink of the war maelstrom, were true to the teachings of the founders of their country to avoid all interference in European affairs and to endeavor to live at peace with all the world. This war has been forced upon them instead of being a conflict of their seeking. And the relations between Americans and Canadians, amicable for a century, will now be closer than ever, as the soldiers of each fight side by side in a common cause.

No laws of humanity will be violated by the United States. There will be no lust of conquest in their operations. The proud boast of that nation is that since its independence it has never acquired one foot of territory by force. In the Civil War it formulated a code that has since been adopted by the other powers to regulate the conduct of civilized warfare. Germany was one of the nations to subscribe to these rules of war, and the only one to violate the agreement in the present conflict.

WHY FORCE AN ELECTION?

THERE COULD BE no fair verdict of the Canadian people recorded in a general election unless the soldiers overseas were given the right to vote. Recent events have shown the difficulty of getting an expression of opinion from the men in the trenches. Premier Borden, on his recent visit to the front, was impressed with the impracticability of anything of the kind. So far as the men in training in England is concerned, the work would be comparatively easy. With the men on the fighting line it is an entirely different problem.

The soldiers overseas voted in the British Columbia election, and now the air is filled with charges of irregularities which were unavoidable and for which the men themselves are in no sense responsible. No vote could possibly be fairly and completely taken under the circumstances. Unless the soldiers are heard from, any opinion recorded by the civilian portion of the electorate would necessarily be incomplete.

Then why an election until this war is over and the soldiers are home again?

THE WARNING TO FARMERS.

IF ANY FARMER in Ontario meets with a serious loss on account of smut in his grain crop of 1917, he will have no one but himself to blame. He has certainly been sufficiently warned. District Representative McRae has time and again told the farmers how to prepare their seed so as to avoid this danger, speaking through the press and from the platform. The Government has sent out information on the same subject, and the newspapers have aided in the missionary service by devoting columns of space.

It is all a matter of a little care. Good seed must be selected, and, to make assurance doubly sure, the seed should be treated by a scientific process, every step of which has been fully explained and the cost of which is trifling.

THE WOMAN IN CONGRESS.

THERE IS ONE WOMAN in the Lower House of Congress in the United States, Miss Rankin, elected in one of the constituencies of the State of Montana. She was supposed to be an independent, and her course was closely watched when the House recently assembled in special session. The first vote taken was for the election of a Speaker, and Miss Rankin, by supporting the Republican nominee, Congressman Mann, proves herself as devout a partisan as the best of them.

But, partisan or not, Miss Rankin is a patriot, and, when the vote was taken on the declaration of war, hers was recorded on the side of the majority. This should dispose of the contention that women with the franchise would vote for peace, no matter what the justification for hostilities.

KEEP A HOUSEHOLD INVENTORY

A carefully compiled inventory of household goods is not an inducement to fire, and in case such a disaster does occur, the inventory is a great help in getting a just and fair settlement.

The compiling of such an inventory is perhaps the duty of the man of the house; yet if accurate records are to be kept, it will be advisable for the housekeeper to be frequently consulted as to the value of certain articles, in case they should have to be replaced.

In many of the large cities it is customary for furniture dealers to supply their customers with printed inventory blanks, bound in booklet form. These little books also contain valuable information and suggestions regarding both fire and burglary insurance, lists of articles commonly used in the house or apartment and a resume for totals.

There are pages in the book for a complete record of articles in living room, library, dining room, pantries, kitchen, bedrooms, bathrooms, laundry, cellar and attic. Special pages are provided for an inventory of books, linen, pictures, clothing, silverware, jewellery, china and glass, with a full page of miscellaneous articles. Columns are also provided on each page for the number and names of the articles, date of purchase, cost and description.

Where these printed inventory books are not obtainable, it will be easy, from the description given above, to make such a book and as a further help the following suggestion is given:

Purchase a blank book with thirty ruled lines on a page; or, better still, buy a loose-leaf book, which will allow of frequent revision of the inventory, and so keep it strictly up to date. With the aid of a ruler and marking ink, divide each page into columns to suit your individual requirements.

You will be greatly surprised, if you do the work systematically and put down carefully every item of your possessions, at the amount of the total, and you will readily realize how much ready cash it would take to replace even the most modest furniture and clothing—with the result that very probably the amount of your present insurance policy will be increased.

Of course it is always advisable to keep such an inventory with your insurance policy in some safe place other than the property covered by the policy. Then in case of fire, when possibly you might be suffering from a severe nervous strain, there will be no racking of your brains to remember what you have actually lost, for it will be down in black and white, where you can instantly refer to it.

While nothing can replace heirlooms, or even certain cherished personal possessions, it is at least some comfort to recover their equivalent in cash if you are so unfortunate as to loose them by fire.

A "SUFF" COLLEGE

Would Be Voters Will Train Women to Speak.

IS TO BE NO "PINK TEA."

Miss Byrns, a New York Lawyer, is Starting Up State Schools to Teach Women How to Be Spellbinders and Good Canvassers.

A peripatetic suffrage college is the latest move in the 1917 votes for women campaign. The object, says Dean Elinor Byrns, one of New York's active women lawyers, is to seek out local talent and train it for the task of converting the voters of the districts to woman suffrage.

In January Miss Byrns opened her first suffrage college at Buffalo. The original plan was to devote five days to this institution, but so many of the students were found to be women from the outlying country districts who could not be away from home so long that it was decided to compress the dozen sessions into three days.

MISS ELINOR BYRNS.

"It's no pink tea we are planning," says Miss Byrns, assuming the role of stern schoolma'am.

"There are to be reviews after each lesson and examinations at the end. Nobody need expect just to sit still and be entertained by pleasant speeches. Every pupil will have to learn to make a good speech on every subject studied. Oh, yes, there are to be home lessons also to be prepared outside of this twelve hour day. Each woman will be assigned a certain topic, will receive literature concerning it and told to prepare a speech upon it for the next day. I'm sure I don't know how they are going to manage it," she added.

"Much of the suffrage work done in the past by untrained workers lost effectiveness because of that very lack of training. Now we are going to find out those who are good at public speaking and train them for that

SPRING TIPS.

A Few Points About Silhouettes and New Bags.

Notwithstanding the plaits in the new skirts, one notes with interest—and who will not say gratification as well?—that the silhouette of the feminine figure is once more changing. Not a serious or injurious change of actual figure lines, necessitating an uncomfortable corset, but a very reasonable change in the length and width of skirts.

A welcome change, for surely we have had quite enough of the short skirts, many times so unkindly and grotesquely displaying fantastic shoes, a too generous proportion of gay stockings and not infrequently legs unfortunately not so straight and beautiful as legs should be.

Bags as a pre-eminent dress accessory are holding their own, despite the advent of many interesting novelties in both garments and accessories of dress for spring.

The variety of shapes and materials in new bags is no more varied than the purposes to which they are to be put. For one to be thoroughly in fashion must have a bag for every costume and for every business and social occasion.

There are shopping bags, outing bags, sport bags, party bags, porch sewing bags, little bags and big bags—all useful, all pleasing and many unique.

Bags are made of the suit or dress material, of ribbon or crochet and of braid.

Bags of straw and satin matching the hat are not unlikely, and bead and floss embroidery will be used on virtually all of the bags of plain material and many of those made of fancy material.

Two charming bags are to be found, one of satin shaped by rows of shirring at the bottom and finished with a band made tassel of silk floss; the other of a brilliantly striped silk cut on the bias and with colorful beads used effectively as a tassel and to trim the ribbon drawn string handles.

Too Expensive.

Two little sisters, who were taken to see "Othello," were much impressed by the death scene. "I wonder if they kill a lady every night?" said Lucy.

"Why, of course not, Lucy," said her sister. "They just pretend to. It would be altogether too expensive to really kill a lady every night."

ORANGE CHARLOTTE

Soak 1 1-2 tablespoons of granulated gelatine in 1-3 cup of cold water, and dissolve in 1-3 cup of boiling water. Strain, add 1 cup of sugar 1-4 cup of lemon juice, 1 cup of orange juice and pulp. Chill in a pan of ice water; when the mixture becomes quite thick, beat with a wire whisk until foamy. Add the stiffly beaten whites of 3 eggs, then fold in the whip from two cups of heavy cream. Line a mold with very thin slices of peeled oranges, turn in the mixture, spread evenly, add chill thoroughly.

Those of us who claim Scotland as our home perhaps remember the bright yellow-dyed eggs prepared with the beautiful golden bloom of the whin or gorse; and anyone who lived near the ancient and beautiful "Brig o' Balgownie" may, long ago perhaps, have rolled eggs down the steep hill-side, toward the beautiful stream that flows under the bridge.

WISDOM OF BABES

Richard, aged 4, accompanied by his mother, was watching a regiment of soldiers headed by its band, marching by. "Mamma," he asked, "what's the use of all them soldiers that don't make music?"

Henry, aged 5, had ben sent to a store to purchase a pair of stockings. "How long do you want them?" asked the clerk. "I don't want to borrow them," replied Henry. "I want 'em to keep."

Egg-rolling is a yearly delight for the children in Washington, an Easter pastime provided for them by the succeeding occupants of the White House. The grounds are opened yearly at this time to the children and their pleasure is doubtless enjoyed by the Presidential household.

MOTOR TRUCKS SAVED VERDUN FOR FRANCE

How Twentieth Corps Arrived in Nick of Time—A Strange Journey From Paris

A correspondent writes: From Paris to Chalons-sur-Marne the journey was comparatively uneventful. We encountered columns of convoys going in various directions, three military motors, and in the towns and villages, perhaps a dozen civilians all told and a few hundred soldiers. Dusk and the mystery of night in the zone behind the front overtook us at Chalons. Once we had to shut off our headlights, and feel our way slowly through the darkness for a space, because somewhere on our left—north of us—German eyes were peering continually at that road through telescopes. And presently a long line of moving light, an illuminated avenue, which resolved itself into an endless procession of motor trucks loaded to the gunwales with troops.

How Soldiers Travel

They were moving along at fair speed, eighteen or twenty miles an hour, I should say, and there were fully 100 of them in that first lot, which was merely an inkling of what was to come. Each truck carries from eighteen to twenty-four men, so there could not have been more than one regiment, although it seemed as if there were an entire army corps at least.

Saved the Day

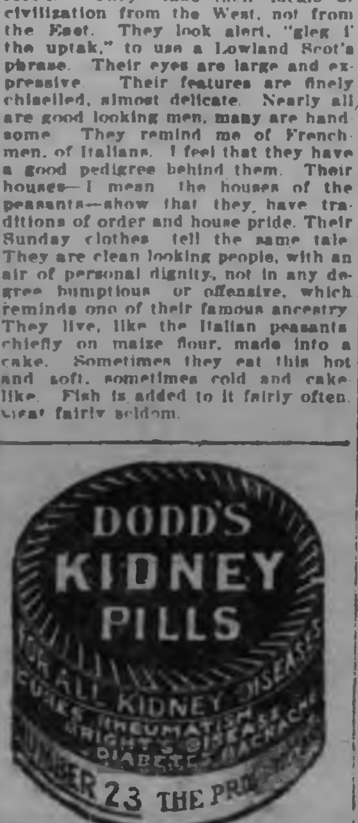
My staff officer guide told me that a special section of trucks transports fresh beef to the immediate rear of the firing line every day, another section carries the daily quota of shells of all sizes, still another stands ready to shift an entire army corps from one point to another, literally at a moment's notice.

"It was the trucks which brought Gen. Balfourier and his famous Twentieth Army Corps to the Douaumont front in time to save the position," I was informed. "When the general arrived the commander of the corps which he was to relieve said to him: 'You are doubly welcome, general, because you did not arrive six hours later.' If it were not for the trucks Verdun might have fallen, for without them the Twentieth Corps could never have arrived in time."

TOMMIES OF ROUMANIA

Some Facts Concerning the Handsome Race of Roumanians

An English writer says: One knows of course, however little else one may know about Roumania; that these people are a branch of the Latin family of nations. Their name tells one that. They are "Romans." Their language is a dialect of Latin, much complicated certainly by Slav and Romany words, but not very difficult to read when once the main differences between it and Italian have been mastered. They take their ideals of civilization from the West, not from the East. They look alert, "gleg i' the uptak," to use a Lowland Scot's phrase. Their eyes are large and expressive. Their features are finely chiselled, almost delicate. Nearly all are good looking men, many are handsome. They remind me of Frenchmen, of Italians. I feel that they have a good pedigree behind them. Their houses—I mean the houses of the peasants—show that they have traditions of order and house pride. Their Sunday clothes tell the same tale. They are clean looking people, with an air of personal dignity, not in any degree bumptious or offensive, which reminds one of their famous ancestry. They live, like the Italian peasants chiefly on maize flour, made into a cake. Sometimes they eat this hot and soft, sometimes cold and cake-like. Fish is added to it fairly often, meat fairly seldom.



LANDS FOR RANCHING

Big Industry Developing in Near Future—Mines Rich Harvest

That ranching on Crown lands in Ontario, now in its infancy, will grow to large proportions is the belief expressed by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines. The success attained by ranchers in the province in the past few years has demonstrated the possibilities of sheep and cattle raising on an extensive scale. During 1916 four ranching leases were issued, the lessees being given large tracts of land at a rental of 5 cents per acre, on condition that they maintain stock, cattle or sheep to a number determined by the size and capabilities of the land leased. Ranching is encouraged on those areas of land that have been partly burned over, denuded of timber, and untillable in the general acceptance of the term. There are large tracts of this land both in New and Old Ontario that have lain waste for years. The war's effects are shown upon settlement in Northern Ontario. Sales of farming land amounted to only two thirds of those in the previous year. A large percentage of the men who would ordinarily have gone North to take up land are in the army. Already over 400 actual settlers have been granted protection against loss of their holdings by reason of enlistment.

Ontario's mineral industry has developed tremendously in the past few years. Good mining, although practically still in its infancy, showed an increase in the value of the output of nearly two millions, the total standing at $7,513,000. Nickel matte jumped to first place on the list, the value of the output for the term being given as $15,528,000, an increase of ten millions over 1915. Copper matte showed an increase from $2,024,000 to $5,286,000. The pig iron production increased in value from $4,510,000 to $6,688,000. The production of silver fell off during the nine months, but the advance in the price of the metal made the output worth $1,370,000 more to Ontario.

MANY ARE THE HYMNS

Several Writers Produced Thousands Apiece—His Last Best

Charles Wesley has the amazing record of 6,000 hymns! This works out at about fourscore hymns for every year of his life, including babyhood! Of course, hundreds of them have gone into oblivion, but some, such as "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing!" are sung round the world, and have been translated into both classical and barbaric tongues. A woman comes next on the list with but a few less. This is Mrs. Crosby who was blind from early childhood. The hymn she lives by is "Safe in the Arms of Jesus."

These amazing hymn writers are followed afar off by James Edmeston, an architect, who wrote 2,000 hymns, many of them of great merit; Bedune, who wrote 830; an Irish clergyman, who composed 765 (his name was Kelly); James Montgomery, who wrote some of the finest hymns in the language, 400; and Dr. Watts, whom some consider the greatest of the hymn writers, who penned 400 also.

Charlotte Elliott comes next. She wrote 150. One of these is world wide, "Just as I am." Following her come Bishop Wordsworth with 120, and Dr. Bonar with a similar number. And lastly there is Francis Lyte, the author of that great hymn, "Abide with me," who wrote 110. Strangely enough, the hundred and tenth was the one all the world sings.

WORLD NOT OVERCROWDED

World Not Overcrowded—London's Parks Very Capacious

Working on the fact that in an average crowd there are four persons standing on each square yard, a scientist has calculated that the whole of the inhabitants of the earth could almost be accommodated on the ground occupied by the County of London. All the inhabitants of Canada could find room in the four hundred acres of Hyde Park, while Battersea Park could easily stow away the whole population of Australia—men, women and children. King George could give a garden party—though a distinctly crowded one—to the whole of New Zealand, for the population of New Zealand could be got into the house and grounds—fifty acres—of Buckingham Palace. The whole French nation could stand in Richmond Park, while Epping Forest might, with careful management, be made almost to accommodate the population of Russia.

TO EXPORT LIVE FISH

The feat of freezing live fish and reviving them several weeks or months later has been achieved by the Swiss scientist, M. Pictet. The scientist put twenty-eight live fish in a box that contained water rich in oxygen, in which several pieces of ice floated. The temperature of the water was then reduced slowly until it froze. At the end of about two months the cake was gradually thawed, and the fish, it is said, were found alive. In such an experiment, the scientist reports, it is essential that the water be gradually frozen, and that it shall have contained pieces of ice for from fifteen to eighteen hours before the whole mass is frozen. The process of thawing must also be slow. Through this process it is believed that Siberian sturgeon and Alaskan salmon can be exported alive to distant markets.

KEEP MORE GOOD STOCK

Quality and Care Are Important to the Nation

Farmers are being repeatedly urged to keep more live stock on their farms. Many reasons why they should do so are given, chiefly that stock farming is profitable and that it will increase the fertility of the soil. Certain points are often insufficiently emphasized in the discussion of this question. If stock farming is to be profitable, the stock must be of good quality, and must be given proper and intelligent care. Scrub stock never did and never will yield the profitable returns which are to be derived from pure bred or high grade stock. Those who are in the stock business, or who contemplate going into it, cannot afford to overlook this consideration. Canada has too much poor stock; what we need is more good stock.

To the farmers of Ontario

Your farm help problem!

The Ontario Government appreciates the patriotic efforts of the farmers of Ontario, who are making a noble contribution to the cause of victory by responding earnestly to the appeal for increased production. It realizes that these efforts are limited only by the shortage of farm help, and it desires to afford every possible assistance in order to increase the number of workers on the land this season.

Let the Ontario Government Help You

The Department of Agriculture is making appeals through the press, and in other ways to men and boys who cannot join the army, to retired farmers and business men, to men who have spent the winter in the woods, and even to men outside the province to help on farms. Many have already promised to help the farmers this season.

BOYS—Many city, town and village boys made a success last year as helpers on the land under proper direction. The Government is endeavouring to enlist large numbers of industrious boys for farm service. Men are visiting many Collegiate Institutes and High Schools to find those boys who are both willing to work and have ability and application.

It will be necessary for the Government to have exact information about the kind of help a farmer wants, the length of time for which help is wanted, and the amount of wages the farmer is willing to pay.

Cut out of this advertisement the application form which appears below. Please fill out all the blanks carefully; put the form in an envelope and mail at once. Address your letter to the District Representative of the Department of Agriculture for your county or to "The Ontario Government Labor Bureau, 15 Queen's Park, Toronto."

If you want to apply for farm help, all you have to do is to fill in the application below, cut it out and mail it to Ontario Government Public Employment Bureau. (Address below.)

Mr. Stevens Has A Word to Say

WITH REFERENCE TO REPORT OF MEETING OF TRADES COUNCIL.

Mr. W. Stevens, secretary of the Trades and Labor Council, with reference to the article in Thursday's Review, has something to say.

On referring to the records of the meeting, he finds that having written his report of Mr. Elliot's remarks from memory, while the Review's report was substantially correct, yet some of the incidents were not stated just exactly as he stated them.

Re the statement that Mr. Eliot expected to meet rabid people in the Trades and Labor Council, Mr. Elliot has many warm friends in the Trades Council, some of them almost lifelong friends, — indeed Mr. Stevens is himself.

He very naturally knew of the high standing of the membership of the labor representatives and would not express himself in this way.

And, of course, with reference to Mr. Elliot stating that the merchants were going to work to elect a labor mayor and labor aldermen, as the merchants have not yet had a meeting to discuss these matters with the labor representatives, and as Mr. Elliot never prophesies except when he has a sure thing, he has no mandate from the merchants to speak in their behalf. Very naturally this part of Mr. Stevens' article relates rather to his hopes.

WEAK AND STRONG.

There are men of strength and men of weakness. We meet them both in every walk of life. Their birth or education or general surroundings may be the same, but a notably sharp line divides those who govern their inclinations from those whose inclinations govern them. On the one side we see strength, accomplishment and value, on the other weakness, spasmodic and ill directed effort and inefficiency.

HORSE KILLED

SNOW PLOWMAN'S STEED IS SHOCKED BY ELECTRICITY.

Daniel Mullen, who has the snowplowing contract for the west ward, lost a valuable horse yesterday. He was making his rounds with the plow and had turned on to Weller street near the Monaghan road, when the horse made a jump and fell. It was soon evident that in some way an electrical ground had been made. Before anything could be done to relieve the animal it was dead.

CHAPLAINS AT THE FRONT

Have Proved Themselves to Be Members of the Church Militant.

Writing on the work of the Canadian chaplains in France, Captain Charles G. D. Roberts sends an article to the Minister of Militia, in part as follows:

The work of the Canadian Chaplain Service has been so successful, so rich in results, and conducted along such broadly human lines, that it is impossible to do it anything approaching justice within the space of a newspaper article. . . . The cement of the whole structure has been a unity of purpose and a harmony in effort which are a constant influence for good among our men, and which may well serve as an example to the Churches at large. The representaives of each Church or creed are supreme within their own fold. The organiaztion of the Canadian Chaplain Service, as a whole, guards the interests of each communion, and guards them impartially. I have seen an energetic young Jewish rabbi coming to a canon of the Church of England for assistance to enable him more effectively to minister to his scattered Hebrew flock. All rivalries are strictly eliminated, except the high rivalry of zeal, self-sacrifice, and courage.

It is not, by any means, to matters spiritual alone that the tireless energies of the C.C.S. are devoted. The service looks after the comfort, recreation, and entertainment of the troops, by means of a highly-organized system of soldiers' institutes, canteens, and cinema shows, which keep them out of mischief or boredom during the period when they come back from the trenches, to the rest camps. This system is run on strictly business principles, but on a merely nominal margin of profit, and the accounts are officially audited by the Paymaster's Department. Narrow as is the margin, it yields a handsome profit, which is returned to the men again in whatever form may seem to be most needed. No small part of it goes to the provision of free coffee—hot coffee—at all hours of day or night, for the men who are entering or leaving the trenches.

But it is when a battle is on that the Church militant peculiarly justifies its title. Where the wounded and dead are falling, there you will find the "padres." They are by no means confining themselves to their spiritual functions. They are helping and inspiring the stretcher-bearers, the ambulance men, the surgeons. Their activities are limited only by the needs of the situation. For instance, during the second battle of Ypres the padres in different quarters of the battlefield organized voluntary stretcher-bearer parties, guided them up into No Man's Land, and worked with them night after night in finding and bringing out the wounded. In this task one of the padres was taken prisoner. At the Somme, too, one of the padres organized a rescue party, led it up under deadly shell fire, and brought back ten wounded men who had been lying in a trench for four days. The trench was one cut off from our lines and occupied in part by the Germans. Another of our padres was wounded, while rescuing Australian wounded at Mouquet Farm. Suffice to say that three C.M.G.'s and five Military Crosses have been awarded among the padres, while many more such honors have been amply deserved. It is significant to note that of the thirty padres who left Canada with our first contingent in September, 1914, there are now only nine remaining in the field.

Serve Canada at Home if You Cannot go Overseas

If circumstances have prevented you from serving in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, you can still play a man's part in winning the war by enlisting in the Canadian Defence Force.

To provide adequately for home defence, and release for the Front the Overseas units held here, men are still needed. The term of enlistment, training, clothing, equipment and subsistence are the same as for overseas service. Separation allowances for married men in addition to pay.

If you are between 18 and 45, physically fit, and keen to serve as best you can, enlist now in the

A CONSPICUOUS CALL FOR MEN

PAYMENTS BY EMPLOYERS TO ENLISTED MEN

PATRIOTIC FUND SEEKS INFORMATION IF PAY IS STILL GIVEN.

Beginning and for some time after the enlistment for service in the war was taken up in this city, employers made certain allowances of pay or part of wage to be continued to men who went into service. It is now desired by the Patriotic Fund at Ottawa to know if such payments are continued, to and for what amounts. Of course, several of the public service corporations, railways, express companies, etc., made to employes these payments, but generally for a period of six months, which has now elapsed. There are other patriotic employers who have done so, and who may be continuing payments.

It is asked that information in this regard be supplied to the Patriotic Fund Office in this city. The information will be treated confidentially. Only the fact is desired.

Economy

Many women think they are saving money by buying cheap tea, forgetting that it is not the cost per pound but the cost per cup that determines a tea's economy.

You may pay 5 or 10 cents more per pound for Red Rose Tea than for common tea. But because Red Rose Tea is a blend of Indian-Assam teas with Ceylons, consisting of the choice tender shoots and buds—the parts of the tea plant that yield the largest amount of liquor and the finest flavor—one-third less is required in the pot to make the same number of cups.

The cost per cup between Red Rose Tea and common tea is then practically the same. But the flavor—what a difference!

And this distinctive and delightful flavor and rich strength is protected by the Red Rose sealed package. No air, odors or dust can get in to injure Red Rose Tea's splendid quality and economy.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

BRIEGEL—MOWRY.

In Murray Street Baptist Church at 10:30 this morning Rev. J. R. Webb officiated at the marriage of Miss Bessie Mowry, youngest daughter of Mr. M. Mowry, Charlotte St., and Mr. Walter O. Briegel, son of Mr. F. Briegel, Gilmour St.

The bride wore a chic suit of pussy willow taffeta with touches of gold, a gold tagel straw hat, grey shoes and gloves and carried a bouquet of Marguerites. She entered the church on the arm of her father, the wedding march being played by Miss Sanderson, organist at the church. Her cousin, Miss Vera Mowry, of Toronto, who wore old rose crepe de chine, was bridesmaid. The groomsman was Mr. Fred. Briegel, of Montreal.

During the signing of the register Mr. Asa Huycke, choir leader at the church, sang "Because."

Mr. and Mrs. Briegel left for the East on the 11:27 C. P. R. train, and after spending a honeymoon in Montreal will take up residence at Knowlton, Que.

The best wishes of a host of young friends follow them. Among the wedding gifts received by the bride was a set of sterling silver flatware from the staff of the Normal School, where she held the position of secretary.

The Social Class will meet Tuesday evening at the Conservatory at 8 o'clock.

DARKNESS FOR CRUCIFIXION

PRESENTATION BY LAMPLIGHT AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.

"Darkness" that could be seen if not felt made a questionable welcome to all who were on hand last night to take part either as singers or in the congregation at St. John's, where the nineteenth presentation of Stainer's "Crucifixion" had been announced to commence at 8 p.m. Lamps were kindly lent by the manager of the Oriental, and the service commenced half an hour late in the presence of a numerous congregation. What threatened to be disastrous was the sudden departure in the morning of Mr. Walter Hutchinson for Guelph, and he was to have sung the tenor solos. That difficulty was overcome by Mr. Devey taking the recits in the opening of the work and Mrs. W. G. Perks the solos "How Sweet Is the Grace" and "King Ever Glorious," at a few hours' notice, which numbers were very finely sung. Mrs. Perks thoroughly deserved the hearty congratulations for her splendid work bestowed after the service. The bass solos were effectively rendered by Mr. Taylor and Mr. Ward, and the choristers are proud to have such singers in their ranks. The quartette and chorus work was all good, the unaccompanied "God So Loved the World" and the "Messia" numbers in particular. The quartette parts were doubled; the singers were Mrs. R. J. Deve, Miss Ruby Quartermaine, sopranos; Mrs. G. Evans, Master Turner; altos; Mr. Alf Marshall and Mr. Robert Helderman, tenors; Mr. Tom Ward and Mr. Harry Flowers, bass.

Mrs. A. L. Amys sang beautifully in Gradler's Hosanna after the cantata, and Mr. Cyril Devey played the organ accompaniment with marked ability.

"DO IT NOW."

A Tip For the Girl Who Wants Success In Business.

"I think that the best advice any young woman can get when she goes into business life is contained in these three words, 'Do it now,'" said the woman manager of an interior decorating establishment. "I have more trouble in my business over that one sin of procrastination than all the rest put together. It's incredible the amount of follow up I have to do, and it takes time that I ought to give to important work.

"For instance, one young woman here who has taste and sound training in the principles of decoration, could be invaluable to me. I would give her a position that any girl could be proud of except for the fact that I cannot depend on her.

"She had some special velvet hangings to make up last week. They were to be trimmed with an edging that could only be bought in one place. It was her job to get this, to have the velvet ready for the worker, properly measured, to make a visit to the house where the hangings were to be put up, and to get the final word from the owner as to which of three different linings was to be used.

"She should have done all these things in one morning. Well, it took her four days and then she hadn't seen the owner about the linings, and the work had to be stopped. While the worker's time was being paid for, she went up there. She hadn't learned the simple little rule that you cannot put tomorrow in the place of today with success. I shall have to ask her to resign."

One procrastinating, behind the hour employee can play havoc with an office or a business. Things are so closely fitted together, one bit of work depending for its accomplishment on the fact that another bit has been done promptly, and the lagger and the time waster will not long be tolerated in an up to date concern. Not tomorrow, but today, is the rule of the successful.

Hose In Plaid Patterns.

Lisle stockings come now in the soft Scotch plaid patterns so fashionable for sport wear with dark brown sport boots of glazed kid, and these stockings are more comfortable—to the idea of many wearers—than the wool woven stockings sold for winter sport wear. The knowingly got up sport girl wears a loosely cut, belted coat of colored material with a cap to match. On its reverse side this material, which has a smooth, waxed, waterproof finish on the outer side, is of silk or cloth, and sometimes the two sides contrast in color. A good many of the best looking winter sport coats are so put up, and always there is the becoming, rakish little hat to match.

Take a Deep Breath.

Early morning breathing is one of the best aids to health and beauty.

Start to breathe deeply the minute you open your eyes. Jump out of bed, slip on a good warm robe and stand in front of an open window. Empty the lungs of all that sleepy air. The first thing to learn in breathing is rhythm.

Stand erect, hands on hips, shoulders square, head up and breathe in fresh air, counting from one to three on the intake and with the same regularity in the exhalation. Begin now and you will feel like a new person when you start out on your day's labor.

Co-operation of Fleet.

"The first aid will come to the Allies by co-operation of the fleet of the United States for the protection of the sea routes and the restriction of the activities of the submarines and the raiders. The financial strength of the United States and her capabilities of supply are enormous factors at this particular juncture, when the resources of the Allies have been so drastically called upon for both army and civil population.

"And it will not take very long to develop a striking force of the finest quality and in large numbers which, should the war be prolonged another year, would be a determining factor, taking into account the growing exhaustion of the man-power of the Central Empires. But, more than all, the entrance of the United States into the contest marks the unanimity of the world democracy in defence of liberty and right, and equaly marks the downfall of autocratic governments and all the menace they hold for the peace of the world.

"Sad that liberty can only be bought by such sacrifices, but so it has been through history, and so it will be in this instance. But the guarantees of enduring peace are greatly strengthened by the active intervention of the United States in this great world quarrel."

THE WAR IN BRIEF

Resolutions declaring a state of war exists with Germany passed the United States House of Representatives by 373 to 50.

Collectors of customs at different American ports began seizing German steamers interned since the war began, number 91.

The Brazilian steamship Parana was sunk and a despatch from Rio Janeiro says this has caused violent excitement and the government may try violent measures.

The French by means of grenade attacks recovered further elements of trenches north-west of Rheims.

Germans penetrated the Russian line south of Riga but were later driven out.

Reports to the U.S. Treasury Department say virtually every interned German ship has been damaged.

President Wilson signed the war resolution on Friday afternoon.

The Berlin War Office announces that Germans in a recent attack on the Russians on the Stokhod River took over 9,000 prisoners and fifteen guns.

A police guard has been placed over German and Austrian Consulates and business houses at Rio Janeiro.

The War Office announces British and Russian advance detachments came into touch on Monday on the Diala River in Mesopotamia. The Turks are retreating.

The President of Cuba sent a message to Congress asking for a declaration that state of war exists with Germany.

UNITED STATES IS AT WAR ON SIDE OF LIBERTY AND FREEDOM

Resolution Passed by Congress Signed by President.

Berlin Notified

WASHINGTON, April 7 — The United States is at war with Germany. It was formally declared at 1.13 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

At exactly that hour President Wilson signed the joint resolution passed by the House and Senate, declaring a state of war between the two countries. An hour before the resolution was signed by Vice-President Marshall, at 12.13.

These were the last formalities necessary to make the United States an ally of Britain, France, Russia and the other Entente nations in the world war of democracies against autocracy.

As the President affixed his signature to the document, Lieut.-Commander Byron McCandles signalled across the street to the navy department that war was formally on and orders were flashed out from the government wireless to the ships at sea and to all the forts of the United States.

Simultaneously every steam whistle in Washington and on the Potamac river nearby was opened wide and their screeches could be heard in every corner of the nation's capital.

While the ink was still wet on the historic war resolution messages to all the countries of the earth were sent notifying them of this government's action.

Germany Notified

The State Department informed the Swiss Minister here, representing German interests in the United States of this country's action. The minister will communicate the word formally to Berne by cable and thence to Berlin.

President Wilson signed the war resolution while alone in the library of the White House two minutes after it had reached the executive mansion from the Capitol.

From the White House, the engrossed resolution was sent to the state department, there to rest as one of the most important papers filed away in the government records.

It bears no outward mark of difference from hundreds of thousands of other state papers in the department files. But it marks the beginning of a new war of civilization, according to President Wilson — a war the end of which must determine whether democracy or Hohenzollernism shall rule the world.

The Proclamation

Immediately after signing the joint resolution for war, the president issued a proclamation to the people of the country, declaring a state of war exists between the United States and the Imperial German Government.

He asked all American citizens "in loyal devotion to their country, dedicated from its founding to the principles of liberty and justice," to uphold the laws of the land and "give undivided and willing support to all measures adopted by the government in prosecuting the war to a successful issue and in attaining a secure and just peace."

At the same time he warned all aliens to conform to strict regulations which he outlined in the proclamation.

ACTION BY UNCLE SAM

The House voted 373 to 50 for war against Germany; Senate, 82 to 6.

President and vice-president sign war resolution.

Budget of $3,401,000,000 asked for army and navy.

Bond issue of three and a half billion proposed.

German ships in American ports seized.

32,000 industrial plants offered for government service.

Army bills call for: Regular army full strength, 287,846 men; National Guard full strength, 440,000; two half million units by draft under universal service plan, 1,000,000. Total, 1,727,846.

Authorized strength of navy increased from 87,000 to 150,000 men; marines from 17,500 to 30,000.

Laws are only as good as people make them.

Fortunately for the average man, his brain is not on exhibition.

Coal Prospects for Next Year

It is with extreme satisfaction we announce to our trade that our order for the coming season's supply of Hard Coal has been again placed with the D., L. & W. Coal Co., whose excellent service to the Province of Ontario was so marked during the past winter months and who, when the Canadian railways found themselves unable to grapple with the existing conditions in transportation, were able to arrange with the D., L. & W. Railway, who in turn supplied for several weeks sufficient engines and train crews to deliver in D., L. & W. cars to Toronto and Brantford for distribution in these and outlying centres two solid train loads of 51 cars each per day of hard coal.

This action modified and relieved largely what was probably the most difficult situation the Province has ever faced.

Competitive companies have attributed this action to the fact that Mr. D. E. Russell, general sales agent of the D., L. & W. Coal Co., is a Canadian by birth, as is also Mr. E. H. Read, the assistant sales agent, and the Ontario trade being in the hands of Mr. W. A. Martin, born and educated in the coal business in London, Ontario.

Whether or not these facts prompted such a generous spirit to the Ontario trade, it has at least placed in us the maximum of confidence that we will be able during the coming year, as we did in the past, to fill every order and every obligation we undertake.

It might not be out of place to say in this connection that we distributed during the past year about 3,000 tons more coal than under normal conditions. Our only regret is our inability, through lack of equipment and stock, to supply every demand made on us.

We are unofficially advised that a reduction in the price of hard coal shipped from the mines will be effective this month, which we will later announce.

Spring Impurities In the Blood

A Tonic Medicine Is a Necessity at This Season.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an all year round tonic, blood builder and nerve restorer. But they are especially valuable in the spring when the system is loaded with impurities as a result of the indoor life of the winter months. There is no other season when the blood is so much in need of purifying and enriching, and every dose of these pills helps to make new, rich, red blood. In the spring one feels weak and tired—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give strength. In the spring the appetite is often poor. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills develop the appetite, tone the stomach and aid weak digestion. It is in the spring that poisons in the blood find an outlet in disfiguring pimples, eruptions and boils—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills speedily clear the skin because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood. In the spring, anaemia, rheumatism, indigestion, neuralgia, erysipelas and many other troubles are most persistent because of poor, weak blood, and it is at this time when all nature takes on new life that the blood most seriously needs attention. Some people dose themselves with purgatives at this season, but these only further weaken themselves. A purgative merely gallops through the system, emptying the bowels, but it does not cure anything. On the other hand, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood which reaches every nerve and organ in the body, bringing new strength, new health and vigor to weak, easily tired men, women and children. Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills this spring—they will not disappoint you.

Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Niagara Falls Wearing Away

THE world-renowned "Horseshoe Fall," at Niagara, is no longer a horseshoe. For years it has been wearing down into an acute angle until the waters at its sides forms cataracts that almost face each other and mingle in a great welter of foam and spray. Moreover, this part of the fall appears to be delivering now a much smaller volume of water than it did a score of years or more ago, as is the testimony of many observers. The responsibility has been almost universally laid upon the diversion of the water for power development. Based on this theory, public opinion has been arrayed against the proposition to divert additional water; and in recent years attention has been directed to schemes for obtaining power from other sources such as the Whirlpool rapids. John Lyell, Harper, a well-known engineer, has just published a pamphlet entitled "The Suicide of the Horseshoe Fall," in which he maintains that the diminution in flow is only apparent, and is due to the changes in the contour of the precipice, the effect of which is to concentrate the flow in the centre so that a smaller proportion is discharged at the sides. We quote from a review of Mr. Harper's pamphlet in Engineering News. Says this paper:

"The visitor at Niagara who views the fall from Goat Island now sees a huge mass of solid green water plunging over the precipice at the toe of the horseshoe, while only a thin veil of water flows over at the sides. It is obvious that with the concentration of the flow in the centre of the stream, erosion there tends continually to become more and more rapid, and the concentration of flow at that point becomes still greater. Mr. Harper says:

"'An entire cessation of the diversion of water from the river for power would not retard the self-destruction of the horseshoe form, but would rather tend to accelerate it. No negative action can preserve the horseshoe, but positive action must be taken with courage and intelligence, and as soon as possible, so that the greatest scenic spectacle in America may not be allowed to commit suicide.

"'It should be the policy of those controlling the falls at Niagara to have constructed in the bed of the river, above the Horseshoe Fall, invisible current deflectors which would make impossible the gathering of the whole river into a deep narrow gorge, and would again deflect the water over to the sides and beds of a re-established horseshoe.

"'This would not only improve the present spectacle, but would cause the whole contour of the fall to wear uniformly, so that coming generations in viewing its beauty may also have before their eyes the emblem of good luck.'

"Mr. Harper further points out that the American Fall, on the eastern side of Goat Island, delivers only five per cent. of the total overflow of the river, yet it forms at least a quarter of the total scenic spectacle. If the flow of the river in the Canadian channel were spread around the whole length of the horseshoe, as it is along the crest of the American Fall, Mr. Harper believes that not more than 35 per cent. of the total discharge of the river so distributed would cover the entire precipice at the Horseshoe Fall with a cascade more than twice as deep as that of the present American Fall, and would produce a scenic effect equal in grandeur and greater in extent than the present fall.

"Mr. Harper is chief engineer of the Hydraulic Power Company of Niagara, and is a member of the American Societies of Mechanical Engineers, Civil Engineers, and Electrical Engineers, and the Electrochemical Society. He makes no suggestion in his pamphlet as to the methods by which the invisible current deflectors which he proposes could be constructed in the bed of the river above the Horseshoe Fall. Those who have visited Niagara and witnessed the wild torrent of water which sweeps down the rapids above the falls can form a conception of the heroic task that would be involved in building any structure in these seething waters which could withstand them.

"The importance of the matter brought forward by Mr. Harper, however, certainly challenges attention. No one will seriously question the desirability of utilizing Niagara's power as a great national or international resource, so far as it can be done without serious interference with its beauty as a spectacle. Even an amateur in hydraulic engineering can see that Mr. Harper's diagnosis of the chief cause of the lessening in beauty of the Horseshoe Fall has every element of probability in its favor; and it is evident that the deterioration of the fall is likely to proceed at an accelerated pace unless something is done to restore the conditions of a century ago."

ECONOMICAL POWER

POWER—Power is the very life of your car. It is the energy that makes the car leap forward in the instant get-away. The energy that carries you swiftly and smoothly on high speed without effort. It is the energy that takes you over the hills, through the deep sands, through the snowdrifts of winter.

POWER makes your car easy to drive on the Road or in Traffic. Power makes you forget the mechanism of your car. It meets the emergencies of travel and traffic without noticeable effort, without faltering. That is the way Studebaker has made Studebaker cars the most powerful cars on the market in ratio to weight.

They have made them powerful by perfecting design—four years Studebaker Engineers have concentrated their skill improving, refining and perfecting Studebaker motor designs, until today Studebaker is the most powerful car on the market, in ratio to size or cost.

At the same time it is economically powerful. It gives you great power with very reasonable gasoline consumption.

Fighting a Railroad

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

When the surveyors for the B. and B. railroad reached within a mile of the town of Scoville they were stopped by the owner of a farm, who threatened them with an action for trespass if they set foot on his land.

It was old Ransome who had lived on that farm since he was born and was now over sixty years old. Boy and man, he had been known as stingy and mean, and no one had ever dealt with him a second time. His wife was about like him in her disagreeable way. The two seldom or never disagreed with each other, but they disagreed with everybody else.

The town of Scoville wanted that railroad and wanted it built at once, but there was old John blocking the way and his old wife backing him up. It must cross his eighty acre farm to reach the town. The surveyors argued and coaxed, but it was of no use.

The railroad finally guarded its surveyors and the line was run, but that was only the beginning of the fight. It collected its forces and began the grading. Old John was out there with his gun and his wife was there with a club, but the lusty men laughed at them and carried them off the scene, and in a few weeks there was the shooting and tooting that the old couple dreaded to hear. They would not sell, and the railroad waited for them to propose some sort of settlement.

There was a highway about a quarter of a mile to the south of the Ransome farm, and the new railroad crossed it at a level. The soft earth was soon gullied out by the wheels of the wagons, and this left the tracks three or four inches above the surface. When old John observed this he yoked up his oxen and hitched them to his wagon and went after a load of wood. When he returned with it to the crossing he stuck there. The oxen could not pull the wagon across the rails. The old man sat down to patiently wait for a train to come along. One appeared in sight in about an hour and found its progress blocked. It took all the train hands and some of the passengers to boot to get that wagon across the track. There was fuming and threatening, but old John was very quiet and calm. He repeated this performance once a day for a week. Then the railroad put down planks and the scheme was defeated.

"Well, we'll have to try some other trick," said the old folks to each other. And as a result of their planning they went out at night with a big pail of soft soap and smeared the rails for a distance of thirty rods. The next train that came that way did not whizz past; it stood still and whizzed, and it took the best part of an hour and a barrel of sand to make the wheels go round again and have a grip on the rails.

Old John was arrested for this soapy trick, but they could prove nothing against him, and he was discharged from custody. After this a new attempt was made to bring about a settlement, but it was doomed to failure from the start. Then came another adventure. Old John cut the grass in his meadow, and while drawing it to the barn to store away he drove across the track at a point on his own farm and a wheel somehow came off the wagon and dumped hay and vehicle in a grand heap. There was just time to get the oxen out of the way when a locomotive of a freight train plunged into the mess. Hay and splinters flew over half the county, and the whole train was derailed at a cost of many thousand dollars to the company.

There were two lawsuits begun immediately, one by the company to make the old man pay damages and one by Old John to collect the worth of a wagon and a ton of hay. The railroad folks could not show any scheme on his part and was the loser in its suit. A jury also held that an engineer who would slam bang into a load of hay in broad daylight should be held responsible, and Old John got about three times the value of the property destroyed.

By and by when the pumpkin season had come old Mr. Ransome kindly permitted a passenger train to run into a wagonload of them—that is, his oxen stopped to rest when the wagon was halfway over the track. He was heard shouting at them at the top of his voice and seen to flourish his gad in an excited manner, but he was forced to escape to save his own life. Pieces of those pumpkins were picked up miles away, and a week after the wagon was wrecked again, and one of the oxen was converted into fresh beef. Here was groundwork for another lawsuit, and the jury decided that any railroad that would strive to lessen the pumpkin crop ought to pay for it right smartly.

It is very probable that the old couple might have returned to the soft soap trick if they had been given more time, but fate willed it otherwise. They were coming home from a call on a neighboring farm, and it was a gusty, rainy night. As they approached the crossing they saw the light of a locomotive approaching, but defiantly kept on their way and were struck and hurled into a field and both instantly killed. No one in Scoville was mean enough to say they were glad of it, but the B. and B. railroad saw its chance and moved quickly. Before it could be sued by the heirs it went into court against itself and was legally permitted to settle the claim for $5,000.

They say that the ghosts of old Ransome and his wife haunt the farm.

LATE PREMIER HELPED TO MAKE CYCLING POPULAR

Sir James Whitney Rode a Wheel Even After Friends Presented Automobile.

An evidence of the economical and healthful advantages of cycling is contained in the fact that probably a majority of the clergymen in Canada are bicyclists. In every city in the country preachers make their parish calls by means of the reliable wheel, and many times they are to be seen taking an early morning spin as a bracer for clear thought before engaging in deep study.

A short time ago a Toronto minister was ordered by his physician to ride a bicycle for his nerves. He did so, and a few weks later he purchased a second wheel for his school boy son.

It is also interesting to note that one of the most ardent cyclists in Canada for years was the late Sir James Whitney, Premier of Ontario. On many occasions Sir James rode to Parliament on his bicycle, and it was an unbreakable rule to take a bicycle ride in the early morning every day during the spring, summer and autumn. Sir James had a rugged constitution, and he attributed his continued good health to the exercise he obtained through the bicycle. Even after his colleagues presented him with a costly automobile, Sir James persisted in his cycling habits.

BICYCLE BUSINESS IN CANADA IN MILLION DOLLAR INDUSTRY

The holding of the second annual celebration of Bicycle Week in Canada, from March 31st to April 7th, as the official opening of the 1917 season, announcement has been made by the trade that the bicycle business in the Dominion is a million dollar industry. This means that the assets of the manufacturers in the way of plants, factory branches, equipment, etc., throughout this country, easily reached the million dollar mark in value.

Last year more than 60,000 bicycles were sold in Canada, but this year it is expected that no less than 100,000 will be sold. This represents a turnover of $4,000,000 for the present year alone. It is also estimated that more than 5,000 Canadians are directly interested in the sale of bicycles. Of this number, approximately 3000 are dealers or sales managers. The number of workmen engaged in the manufacture and assembly of bicycles in Canadian factories or warehouses runs up to 12,000 it is declared. The latter are entirely in addition to the 5,000 mentioned above as engaged in the retail end of the business. Thus, the total number of people in the bicycle business in the Dominion exceeds 7,000.

It is interesting to note that a fine large factory near Toronto, built specially for the making of bicycles, was completed and occupied last winter. Hundreds of mechanics are employed in this new plant alone.

These figures are somewhat startling and they show that there is considerable size to the bicycle industry in this country. It may surprise a great many people also to learn that a conservative estimate of the total number of bicycles in use in Canada is 400,000. The half million mark will be passed this year, judging by present activities in the cycle field.

Curious Old English Law.

It is interesting to recall in connection with railway accidents that only a few years back any instrument which by accident was the immediate cause of loss of human life became in English law "deodand"—that is, became forfeit to the crown, to be devoted to pious purposes. This law applies to locomotives, but in course of time coroners' juries, instead of claiming the forfeit, inflicted a fine. In the year 1838 a locomotive on the Liverpool and Manchester line which by exploding caused the death of its engineer and fireman was fined £20, while the following year another engine on the same line was fined £1,400. —London Mail.

An Arab Legend.

"There is none so poor but there is one poorer."

A poor Arab spent his last bara on a handful of dates and went up on a high cliff to eat them and die. As he threw the stones over a lean hand shot out below and caught them.

"Ho!" said he. "Why do you catch my date stones?"

"Because, O brother," answered a weak voice, "I have not eaten these three days, and Allah has sent these stones to save my life."

"Praise be to Allah," answered the first man, "for he has saved me also, for here is one poorer than I."

And both men went into the city.

Why She Was Pleased.

"Do you mean to tell me that you actually overcame that ancient antipathy of yours for Mrs. Muggsby and called on her this afternoon?" said his wife's husband.

"That's about the size of it," replied her husband's wife.

"And she was glad to see you?"

"There isn't any doubt about it."

"Why do you think that?"

"Well, I had on that old dress I've worn three seasons and a hat that is entitled to a prominent place in some museum for antiquities, while she had on a new gown just from Paris. Oh, yes, I'm sure she was tickled to death, figuratively speaking, when I called!"

The Difference.

"Where's the young actress you were so interested in last year?"

"She's starring."

"And how about the young fellow who wanted her to marry him?"

"He's still mooning."—Exchange.

"Sad affair about Jones having concussion of the brain, wasn't it?"

"What was the matter?"

Just His Way.

He had some crackers listed,
But he brought pretzels back, poor pop.

Incongruous.

"But why did you break off the match at the last moment?"

"Oh, the color of his hair killed everything in my trousseau."

Tiger Superstitions.

In India the people believe in very many old fairy tales. One of these is that the ghost of a man killed by a tiger rides on the head of the beast that slew him to warn him of danger and to guide him to new victims. It is declared that Providence provides for the tiger's daily wants to the amount of 1 rupee (2 shillings) a day—that is to say, if a tiger kills a calf worth 6 rupees he will not be allowed another victim for five days. Eating the flesh of a tiger is supposed to give one great courage and alertness, but the whiskers must first be singed off the beast or his spirit will haunt the man who fed off him, and he is likely to be turned into a tiger in the next world.

Superficial Impression.

"That man looks as if he had something on his mind."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne, "but his conversation doesn't sound that way. He is a walking optical illusion."

Well Named.

Count Zeppelin Became Chief Hero of Germany And Then a World Joke

THE report from Geneva that the zeppelin works at Friedrichshaven have been closed down and are being dismantled may be untrue. It is interesting, however, as a new evidence of the growing opinion in Germany that the "zep" as an instrument of war is a failure.

It is undeniably a fact that the record of the monster aircraft, which were once Germany's pride and reliance, has been one of repeated failure. Even in the constructive period before the war some malign fate seemed to pursue these ships. Of the twenty-five zeppelins completed before the war thirteen were so badly wrecked by accidents of one kind or another that they had either to be abandoned altogether or rebuilt at costs narrowly approaching the original expenditure. It was always pointed out with a certain degree of plausibility that as a rule these accidents were not of a sort to bring discredit upon the design of the ship or the theory of her construction. In at least one case, immediately after undergoing the most rigid military tests successfully, the ship on the way back to her mooring place collided with a tree to her complete disaster. In another, being brought to earth at points where no zeppelin shed presented itself for her shelter, a mooring in the open air was essayed, and an unexpected storm coming up swept the ship away to be dashed to pieces against obstacles or carried out to sea, there to perish.

COUNT ZEPPELIN.

The huge bulk of these ships made them peculiarily liable to disaster of this character.

The ship "L-1," largest of those completed by Count von Zeppelin prior to the war, after a cross-country flight in which she amazed and delighted all Germany, was taken out to sea near Heligoland for a marine test—she had been planned as a naval auxiliary. A sudden storm descended upon her and she was helpless. Her engines refused to work in the sudden disturbances of her stability. She became the plaything of the wind. Like a drifting soap bubble she was hurled into the sea, becoming a complete wreck and carrying down fifteen of her twenty-two officers and men. "L-11," her immediate successor, exploded in mid-air, sacrificing all of its crew of twenty-eight men, among whom were members of the German official board charged with the duty of observing and making the test.

Exposed to the hazards of war the "zeps" have shown their vulnerability even more clearly. In the last raid on London two were brought down, and it has been noticed that, though months have elapsed, no more raids have been undertaken. Early in the war the impossibility of effective raids on Paris was tacitly admitted by the Germans.

If indeed Germany has abandoned the great dirigible it leaves the Count von Zeppelin one of the most ridiculous figures of history. For forty years he has with indomitable courage pursued inflexibly his determination to perfect this airship for the military glory of his country alone. Though passenger zeppelins have been built, in them the Count took no interest. His mind was concentrated upon the task of giving his country a military engine that would make it as invincible in the air as England has been on the sea—and he never disguised the fact that it was against England that he expected his invention to be utilized. He has seen all Germany acclaiming his name as the result of some specially successful test of one of his earlier machines, and forty-eight hours later has been brought to bankruptcy by an accident that wrecked at once his ship, his popularity, and his hopes. He has seen his own fortune vanish in his experiments and the Government for which he was working turn upon him the cold shoulder. Once at least his disappointment was so poignant that only the earnest encouragement of his wife and daughter induced him to give further thought to his invention or to life itself. He has known at once the favor and the coldness of monarchs. The Kaiser has kissed him upon the cheek and proclaimed him the "most eminent of all Germans," and again in a moment of pique has rebuked him coldly because a zeppelin failed to appear in Berlin when his Majesty expected it.

NOTED MUSICIAN OF MONTREAL

Advises The Use Of "FRUIT-A-TIVES", The Famous Fruit Medicine.

MR. ROSENBURG
589 Casgrain St., Montreal.
April 20th, 1915.

"In my opinion, no other medicine in the world is so curative for Constipation and Indigestion as "Fruit-a-tives". I was a sufferer from these complaints for five years, and my sedentary occupation, Music, brought about a kind of Intestinal Paralysis—with nasty Headaches, belching gas, drowsiness after eating, and Pain in the Back. I tried pills and medicines of physicians, but nothing helped me. Then I was induced to try "Fruit-a-tives", and now for six months I have been entirely well.

I advise any one who suffers from that horrible trouble—Chronic Constipation with the resultant indigestion, to try "Fruit-a-tives", and you will be agreeably surprised at the great benefit you will receive". A. ROSENBURG.

How a Bullet Drops.

In what position does a rifle bullet return to earth? In order to solve the problem, a special stand was erected in Europe recently, and experiments were carried on along the shores of a lake, the surface of which was frozen. The ice was covered with strong planks. It was shown that an infantry rifle bullet shot upward in a vertical direction passes downward in the same position in which it passed upward—in other words, it came back again to earth with its bottom first. Why was it not upset at its culmination point? The answer is that the propelling force ceases to act at the culmination point. But the twist has as yet not stopped, and therefore it starts its fall with a twist. Even on impact the twist has not stopped, as was indicated by the warping of the wood fibres in the planking on the ice.

Buffalo Bill's Joke.

The Westminster Gazette is authority for the statement that upon one occasion when the late Buffalo Bill was exhibiting his Wild West show in London, the Prince of Wales was so delighted with it that he took four royalties staying in London with him to see it, and not only that, but succeeded in packing the whole four into the famous Deadwood coach for a ride around the arena. "Now," said he to Cody, whom he much liked, "you have got something bigger inside there than you ever had out West." "Well, I rather guess I have," responded the Colonel. "Biggest hand I ever did hold yet—four kings and a joker."

Toy Industry Here to Stay

TOYS are gaining an added prominence these days by reason of the fact that many soldiers returned from the front, to say nothing of many artists, are resorting to their manufacture. The toy industry has been established in Canada since the war began, and it shows every evidence of healthy growth. It might almost be safe to say that the majority of Canadian children are now playing with toys manufactured in the Dominion, and it is inconceivable that the toys manufactured in Germany, the country from which practically all of them used to come, will ever be purchased again by the citizens of our land. For that reason, "the most loveable of industries," as Sir George Foster called it, ought to continue to prosper after peace is declared.

Toys have a long history. Indeed, their history must coincide with the history of the human race, for it is safe to say that wherever a child is found there also is to be found a toy of some kind. And it matters not at all how simple it is, or how lacking in all pretensions to beauty or adornment, the regard for it, in all lands, is much the same. It may be a youthful Berber, sitting outside his father's tent amongst the Atlas foothills, playing with a rag girt bone, or a small Pueblo Indian squatting outside an adobe house amidst the sage brush of New Mexico, playing with a clay rattle, or a future British admiral, causing "Beatty" and "Jellicoe" to hold wonderful converse on the floor of a Mayfair nursery. It is all the same anyhow and anywhere.

There is everywhere the same supreme disregard of all impediments to the freest imagination. Indeed, in his frank requisitioning of the properties around him and making them do service in whatever country his scenes might be laid, the most ingenious Elizabethan playwright was nothing to almost any child, from Tralee to Timbuctoo, by any route one may choose to take. The child does not need to study naval matters, or even secure "an atmosphere" in order to deal, with perfect assurance, with such matters as, for instance, a naval engagement. There is no need for such superfluities as naval strategy and tactics. If "Beatty" decides that a ship belonging to his opponents is to be sunk, and he always does so decide, why, it is sunk, and it does not need even to be sunk to be sunk. It is probably just digged in its ribs by another ship, and laid on its side whilst everything on board retains an entirely horizontal position for such period as the boat shall be required so to carry itself. Then there is no trouble with salvage operations. If a ship is to be saved, at the last moment, after "lab'ring into port through a heavy sea," it is just saved by a flick of the finger.

Now, naturally enough, the returned soldiers and sailors before mentioned are specializing, in their workshops, in soldiers and sailors, and in such things as appertain to the callings of both; but they are not confining themselves to this branch of the work. Other and more peaceful scenes and themes are being provided for, and much ingenuity and no little art are being displayed. The Boer prisoners interned on St. Helena, sixteen years ago, fashioned many wonderful toys, but it is questionable if any were more wonderful than the bungalows "constructed on the modern plan," the half-timbered Cheshire cottages, the whole villages, church and inn and all, which are being fashioned at these toy workshops.

One-half of the world, according to the old saying, does not know how the other half lives. And so few people, perhaps, have realized what an immense trade the toy trade is, or what a useful trade it is. Every child must have a toy, and many have large numbers every year. And so the great supply goes out, and spreads itself over all lands; innumerable armies of "wooden Jemimas," and innumerable battalions of soldiers and sailors, in cardboard boxes or wooden boxes, according as they are fashioned of lead or of wood. And who shall speak of the shops, and stables, and telephone exchanges; the wooden horses, rocking or otherwise, all the way from wonderful stuffed masterpieces to plain flatbacked "nightmares," they of the stony stare and the uncompromising rectangles? But above all, of course, there are the dolls. The real rulers in this kingdom are the commoners, fashioned of rags, with strange and unwonted features, or else of wood, round of countenance and sleek and black in the matter of hair. Great ladies and great gentlemen are allowed to ride in their carriages, and to have all in the way of finery that the heart of a doll could desire, yet are they liable at any moment to be cast in company with some notable and greatly honored survivor of humble origin. But when so much is said, only the fringe of the subject has been touched. Toys are, after all, like many other things of a like nature; there is no end to the "talk there is to them."

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash the poisons and toxins from system before putting more food into stomach.

Says inside-bathing makes anyone look and feel clean, sweet and refreshed.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food and drink taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste material is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it which is a harmless way to wash these poisons, gases and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on inside bathing. Men and women who are accustomed to wake up with a dull, aching head or have furred tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, sallow complexion, others who have bilious attacks, acid stomach or constipation are assured of pronounced improvement in both health and appearance shortly.

A Tragic Case.

Pte. Jack Smellie, a Canadian soldier, was found in New York City recently suffering from loss of speech and memory. He is a nephew of Mr. Robert S. Smellie, Toronto. Three times within a year has Pte. Smellie been a victim of amnesia as a result of shell shock received in the trenches. He is now on his way to Trinidad, where it is hoped that the complete change and rest will result in a complete recovery.

At the outbreak of war, George, Jack, and Robert, three sons of Mr. Parker Smellie, of Russell, Man., enlisted for active service. The three were wounded together at Ypres in June. Jack, with three companions, was imprisoned under a fallen trench by a bursting shell. Two of the men with him died immediately and the remaining man was thrown across Smellie's chest, pinning him down. They remained in this position for six hours, unable to move, and then his pal died.

The sole survivor of the little party, Smellie lay for 34 hours until he was discovered and released by a "listening patrol." His wounds in the thigh and shell shock caused a complete loss of speech and memory. His mind was gone and when he came to he found himself in a padded cell in a London hospital. He had been in the institution for five weeks before recovering his memory. One arm was paralysed and he was the first patient treated by hypnotism, which resulted in regaining the use of his arm. During convalescence he was visited by the King and Queen and Queen Alexandra, who were much interested in the treatment. After three months' treatment he was discharged from the army. He returned to Canada, and shortly after reaching New York suffered a relapse upon hearing the noise of a steel rivetting gun. After arriving home in Russell at Christmas he received an offer as overseer of a plantation in Trinidad by a gentleman who became interested in him on the voyage from England. On his way to the steamer in New York Smellie again lost his speech and memory at the explosion of a tire on the motor in which he was riding. He was taken to the Brooklyn Hospital, where he recovered and was able to continue his journey. The two brothers have now returned to France.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story About a Very Interesting Creature.

HOW A BIRD LIVES IN WINTER.

Little Feathered Cold Weather Resident of the Woods Stores Up Food For Hard Times—How Its Nest Is Safeguarded Against Attack.

Well, said Uncle Ben to Little Ned and Polly Ann, I am going to tell you about the TREE MOUSE.

No doubt you think you can do wonders since you've learned to turn hand springs, Master Ned, but there's a little white breasted bird that hops about on our trees every morning that can give you or any little boy I know of points in exercising.

The name of the bird? Well, some people call him a tree mouse and others call him a nuthatch. He is part bluish gray, part black and part white. He does not look much like a mouse to me, but the way he can run up and down the limbs of trees, hanging now to the underside or running along head downward, makes one think of a fly.

The little nuthatch is one of our winter birds, for he does not leave us when cold weather comes, as so many of our birds do.

You see, his food can be picked up nearly all the year round. He is one of those birds that get the worms from under the bark, and grubs and insect eggs are delicious morsels to him.

The little nuthatch is a thrifty bird. Like the squirrel in the fall, he lays away a store of food for hard times. When cold weather comes he goes to the tree in a crack of which he may have stuck the little nuts of which he is so fond and draws out a nut. Beech nuts are favorites. He can crack the shells of these with his long, sharp bill in a short time. Then, cocking his little head on one side, he bolts the nut meat with the greatest enjoyment.

Put some kernels of dried corn out for him on a feeding board or some cracked hickory nuts and see how pleased the nuthatch will be.

This lively little bird likes hazelnuts, chestnuts, sunflower seeds and grains. In the winter one sees him in the company of the chickadees, the juncos, buntings and winter wrens, the downy woodpecker and the winter sparrows.

In spring these nuthatches build nests in the hollows of trees. Perhaps they fear the red squirrels, the snakes or the mice in the neighborhood. At any rate, they gather pitch and sticky balsams from the trees and smear it about the outside of the holes in which they make their nests and lay their eggs.

Often when the nuthatches are in a hurry they forget about this sticky doormat and go flitting carelessly over it so that it catches on their own tails, and before they can get loose they have to wrench out some of their feathers.

Just the same, the little nuthatch is one of the nimblest little creatures you will ever see and is well worth watching.

The New Paint Box.

Little artist, here is an idea for you. Isn't it troublesome to keep brushes clean when you have to color the little girl's dress blue, her hair brown and her shoes black? Make yourself a blotting ball out of crushed blotters sewed up in a piece of cheesecloth. When your brush is touched on this ball the color is quickly absorbed, and it is clean for the next shade.

Fun on the Ice.

Now is the season for the lovers of winter sports, which include all boys and girls and a goodly percentage of grown folks. One of the most healthful of outdoor exercises is that of skating.

and it is highly enjoyable. Happy lads and lasses throng the ponds and feel the thrill of gliding over the smooth ice. Skating promotes grace of movement, as nearly every muscle is brought into play. Care should be taken, however, not to exercise until exhaustion comes, because that takes away all the good of the sport.

A GALLANT SERB.

Serbian Army Mourns Death of "The Wolf."

The whole Serbian army mourns the loss of Voyno Popovitch, familiarly known as Voyvode "Vouk" or "The Wolf," commander of the Corps of Volunteer Irregulars, of Komitajis, which has played such an active and glorious part in the five campaigns that Serbia has waged since the autumn of 1914, says The London Times. Only 32 years of age, he established and maintained such a rigid code of drafting that his corps are to-day "irregulars" no longer but in name. Their drill and discipline are unsurpassed in any branch of the regular army.

It was in one of the desperate encounters that took place around Grunishta, while rallying his men against an overwhelming onset of the enemy, that this gallant warrior met his death. Though already wounded in the arm, with the wound yet unbandaged, he threw himself into the wavering line of Serbs and restored their courage by his example. But he was mortally hit by a Bulgarian sniper firing from behind a rock. His last words were: "Dead or alive, do not leave me to the Bulgarians." His dying wish was faithfully obeyed, and Voyvode "Vouk" was buried with all due honors by the victorious Serbs.

Australia's Trees.

One readily understands why the Australian loves his trees. The groves of giant eucalyptus form pictures never forgotten, and the scent of the wattle brings a homesick feeling like the smell of sage to the westerner. The flora is not only beautiful, it is unique, and has no counterpart in other lands. Of the 10,000 species of plants most of Moving Too Quickly.

A good story is told regarding a certain medical officer back from the Somme front. Out there, as may well be imagined, hospital stores and accessories are liable to get a trifle mixed on occasion, and one day the P. M. O. in question had this fact brought to his notice in an indirect, but none the less forceful manner. Going his morning round, he put the usual formal question, "Any complaints," to the patients under his charge. "Yes, sir," answered a voice feebly but none the less clearly. "Well, my man, what is it?" he inquired, bending down. "Well, sir, it's like this," explained the badly-wounded soldier, "I don't like to be hustled." And, turning down his sheet he exposed to the P. M. O. a corner marked "The Mortuary."

Help Old Trees.

One who has tried it declares that old trees of all kinds may often be rejuvenated by digging a trench at a considerable distance from the tree in a circle, to a depth of one to three feet, and filling this with new soil made very rich with barn manures.

What He Says About His Wife.

To his neighbor: "You will find my wife, sir, extremely fair and just in all matters, I assure you."

To his butler: "Your mistress will direct you in everything. She is a perfect housekeeper."

To his partner: "Yes, my wife is extravagant, but how can I help that?"

To his doctor: "You know her better than I do."

To his sister: "She is a wonderful manager, is Adele. I never saw a woman who could make a dollar go so far."

To his friend: "Yes, old man, all women, as you say, are alike, and I guess my wife is no worse than the rest of them."

An Established Standard

For sixty-five years the Heintzman & Co. piano has been the established standard of high art in piano making. It is not merely for their beautiful and artistic cases that these instruments are renowned, but because of their fine and particularly sympathetic tone. It is because of the wonderful tone of the that Tetrazzini and Ruffo chose it to sing to on their Canadian tour; that De Pachmann chose it for his Canadian concerts; that Nordica, Albani, Sembrich, and many other world-famous artists became enthusiastic in its praise.

Heintzman & Co. Art Piano Grand or Upright

The Heintzman tone is permanent—it is built right into the instrument—there for a lifetime.

GARDEN CLUB PUSH GREATER PRODUCTION; 300 LOTS ARE LISTED

Committee Try New Drive to Make the Scheme Success.

Friday night, despite the very inclement weather, a few of the members of the Peterborough Garden Club got together to push along the details of lots allotment. This included a thorongh going over of the properties as laid out from the assessment rolls, such as available for use and not occupied.

Nearly three hundred separate lots were listed. The owners of these lots, both in the city and outside, had been communicated with by letter asking that the use be allowed. So far very few had consented, probably more through carelessness than unwillingness. So it was up to the committee to go at the thing in another way.

The list of resident owners was gone over thoroughly. Street address of these were written out on slips of paper. In all it was found that over fifty of these would have to be seen personally. The names were set out in wards, and by street and number. Then Mr. J. Crowe, for the men of the Trades and Labor Council, agreed to take the slips, and as ten men of the council had offered to do some useful work in furthering the project, to see that they would be delivered—that is the slips, not the men. The bunch will divide up to about five for each man to attend to. The slips will go to Mr. Crowe this afternoon, and he will arrange to have the work taken up.

Along with the slips is a brief form of consent to the use of the property, stating that the owner allows use of it subject to the rules of the club. It is proposed that a form of personal agreement shall be prepared to be filled in by the owner, as a personal arrangement, and to ensure that friction shall not develop.

As soon as the slips are returned, and consent of owners has been secured, the properties will be listed and defined as to street and number, and the list will be printed in the local papers. Then those who wish to have the use of lots can look the list over and make selection. Due and ample notice will be given of the publication so that men may be on the look out for it.

A good number are arranging for use of lots for themselves. In fact some properties listed with the committee have been taken up in the interval. And people who have a surplus of lands in gardens are giving the use of portions. So that the movement is fairly under way, and from the protestations that never again will the users be obliged to pay $4.50 per bag for potatoes it looks that, barring an absolutely bad season, home production will to some extent regulate the market prices.

Further particulars of the scheme will be given to the press as soon as available.

FORMER PETERBORO MAN WANTS HIS CHILDREN

Taken by Children's Aid Society in Detroit.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, April 9. — W. Dunnette has appealed to the authorities for assistance in recovering his four children from the Children's Aid Society of Detroit. Two of them have already been placed in Michigan families, the oldest boy with a German farmer. Two younger children are advertised in Detroit street cars for adoption.

Until five years ago Dunnette resided in Peterborough, where he left his family to obtain work in Toronto. He was soon afterwards injured by falling from a building and spent three months in the hospital. His wife in the meantime broke up the home in Peterborough and took proceedings twice against him for non-support, once in Sault Ste. Marie and once in Toronto, but each time the case was promptly dismissed.

Two weeks ago Dunnette learned his children were being offered for adoption, and hurried to Detroit, where he met a further surprise in the fact that his wife had secured a divorce in Michigan. His estranged wife is willing that he should have his children again, but this fact makes no difference to the Detroit society. Neither does the fact that all the children and their parents were born in Canada.

If local civil authorities cannot help him, Dunnette will make application to Ottawa for assistance.

LABOR STRIKES BARRED IN WAR

AMERICAN WORKINGMEN AGREE TO HELP THE GOVERNMENT.

WASHINGTON, April 9. — No strikes or labor disputes of any kind during the war is the program of the labor committee of the council of national defensive advisory commision, headed by Samuel Gompers, president of the A. F. of L.

In a report unanimously adopted by the council and commission, the committee declared:

"The defence and safety of the nation must be the first consideration of all patriotic citizens," and proposes that whenever emergencies arise requiring a change of standards, such changes should be made only after investigation and approval by the council of national defence."

Since the labor committee membership includes both leaders of organized labor and representatives of influential employers interests, its action is interpreted as giving the United States promise of complete freedom from industrial disputes such as hampered England early in the war.

CONSTABLE DICKSON'S SON FATALLY HURT IN FALL FROM FREIGHT TRAIN

The remains of Fred. Dickson, son of Constable Dickson of Westwood, reached the city last night en route to Westwood, where interment will be made. Deceased, who was a brakesman on the Pere Marquette, was fatally hurt when he fell from a freight train running out of St. Thomas, one arm and one leg being severed.

To engineer and fireman noticed the brakesman's lamp go out and stopped the train. On finding Dickson mangled by the wheels of the train, they summoned a doctor, and an ambulance met the train at Welland, where everything possible was done to save the young man's life, but the loss of blood was too great.

He was 26 years of age, and had been on the railroad for three years.

ALMOND EYES DAZZLED BY STERN MAJESTY OF LAW

17 Natives of Celestial Kingdom Arrested On Charge of Gambling and Opium Smoking---Case Enlarged.

Seventeen Chinamen were gathered in by the police last night when they raided a Chinese store at 385 Water street. Suspicion has been in the minds of the officers of the law that gambling and other evils were being practised in the rear of the new store. When the stage was all set about 10 o'clock the officers swooped down on their prey and the catch was great.

Gambling devices of several kinds, opium sets, a quantity of the weed, the lamps for cooking the pill, two jars of some distilled product of China, knick-nacks and about $238 in cash were taken by the police and made a great layout before Police Magistrate Dumble in court this morning.

Two Charges.

Jim Hum and Hum Hoy were charged, first with running a place where opium was smoked and with gambling on the Lord's Day.

Lee Web, Hum Moon, Tom Foke, Hum Fan, George Lee, Lee Hill, Jack Lee, Chin Young, Cher Pong, Yee Yuck, Joe Tom, Ching Ling, Tom Lee, Hum Suit, Tom Son, were all charged with being inmates of an opium shop and gambling on the Lord's Day.

At the request of the chief, the cases were enlarged until Wednesday, bail being accepted for the appearance of the prisoners.

HOW A "JOINT" IS RUN.

Possibly today's trial, in which was displayed the complete outfit of an opium joint, would be more interesting in the telling should the reader take a mental trip to a place where opium is smoked.

One who is known to the Chinaman in charge, and he must be known to gain admission, generally enters a Chinese laundry and buys "a card of hop." For some unaccountable reason opium is invariably sold stuck on the back of a playing card, at ten to twelve "fun" for a dollar. Opium for smoking is intensely bitter, and in appearance resembles thick treacle. It is smoked in a room surrounded by bunks, as a smoker invariably reclines as he smokes poppy extract. Beside the bunk is placed a table on which are the pipe, the lamp and the yen-hock. The pipe has a stem of bamboo about two feet long. The bowl of stone is about two inches in diameter with an aperture the size of a pea.

The lamp, burning peanut oil, has no chimney. The yen-hock is a thin steel rod a foot long. Our smoker takes a dab of the opium on the yen-hock and cooks it in the flame until hard. By the fingers this is rolled into a pill, placed in the bowl and over the lamp. A long pull, a strong pill, and the fumes are taken into the lungs. A seasoned smoker will consume from 12 to 20 pills to cure his "yen-yen" or craving

In a box at the police court was what resembled brown toast crumbs of a very bitter taste. This was "yen shee" or scrapings from the opium pipe stem, like tobacco is taken from a pipe bowl. It is boiled down and smoked again as opium "seconds."

GENERAL SPRING OFFENSIVE SO LONG LOOKED FORWARD TO, HAS BEEN COMMENCED IN EARNEST

British Make Advances at all Points and French Renew Successful Operation in Belgium---Land in New Russian Republic May be Turned Over to Working Classes.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 9. — The Britisch early this morning attacked the German lines on a wide front from points south of Arras to south of Lens, thus opening what is believed here to be the general spring offensive move looked forward to eagerly for some days. The offensive of the British flying corps in the latter part of last week, the attack on Zeebrugge on Saturday night, and the activity of the French in Belgium as shown in yesterday's official communication from Paris, were considered a prelude to important military operations.

The British commander, General Haig, whose reports are always modest, says the German lines have been penetrated everywhere and that satisfactory progress was made in the direction of Cambrai and St. Quentin, two important positions in connection with the new German line. The extension of the attack northward in the direction of Lens doubtless was intended to give the British more elbow room for their operations from Arras to the point of juncture with the French around St. Quentin.

BRITISH ADVANCE AT ALL POINTS.

LONDON, April 9. — (Official Statement.) — "We attacked at 5:30 o'clock this morning on a wide front from south of Arras to the south of Lens. Our troops have everywhere penetrated the enemy's lines and are making satisfactory progress at all points.

"In the direction of Cambraid we stormed the villages of Hermies and Boursies and have penetrated into Haverincourt Wood. In the direction of St. Quentin we captured Fresnery-le-Petit and advanced our lines south of Lverguier. No estimate of the prisoners taken can yet be given but considerable numbers are reported captured."

LAND FOR THE WORKINGMEN.

PETROGRAD, April 9. — The congress of constitutional democrats has declared in favor of the principle that the land ought to be handed over to the working classes.

GERMAN ATTACK REPULSED.

PARIS, April 9. — Between the Somme and the Aisne patrol encounters occurred during the night, says today's war office announcement. Notwithstanding bad weather there was active artillery fighting in several sectors. Northwest of Redims a German attack on our positions in front of Courcy was repulsed by our fire. South of this point two German detachments were repulsed after a heavy counter-attack with grenades. In the region of Maisons-de-Champagne we made some progress in grenade fighting.

There is nothing to report from the remainder of the front.

RUSSIANS REPULSE HUNS.

PETROGRAD, April 9.—On the Russo-Galician front there were minor attacks in the Carpathians in the region west of Dzemdron, in the direction of Marmaroch and Siguet, and to the west of the town of Tomnatik. They were repulsed. On the Roumanian and Caucasus fronts scouting reconnaissances and rifle firing occurred.

ITALIANS, TOO, SCORE.

ROME, April 9. — Reporting military operations on the Austro-Italian front, the Italian official statement says: Our artillery, hampered by bad weather almost all along the line, was active yesterday in Guidicaria and Adige Valleys, where our guns fired and damaged enemy military works. On the Carso reconnoitering parties disturbed the enemy on defensive positions.

BERLIN CLAIMS AIR VICTORIES.

BERLIN, April 9. — Seventeen airplanes were brought down yesterday on the western front, the war office announces. The statement says the battle of Arras, begun this morning, after several hours' strong gunfire, continues.

AUSTRIAN VESSELS SEIZED.

NEW YORK, April 9. — The Austrian steamships Martha Washington and Himalaya, detained in port here, were today seized by the Customs authorities, following the receipt of advices that Austria had severed diplomatic relations with the United States. Similar steps were taken at Philadelphia, Boston and Newport News.

WOMEN'S FRANCHISE.

The women's franchise meeting under the auspices of the West Riding Conservative Association in the Opera House on April 17th will mark a new era in public meetings in Peterborough. If the business of a municipality necessitates public meetings, much more does the business of a nation require them. All are welcome.

RUSSELLISM IS AGAIN BARRED

UNNDER THE BAN BECAUSE OPPOSED TO ENLISTMENTS.

TORONTO, April 9.—Hon. T. W. McGarry today cancelled the moving picture license of the International Bible Students' Association. This is the direct result of the visit here yesterday of Judge Rutherford, of New York, and an address he made to the Bible Students' convention at the Royal Alexandra Theatre. The films produced by the association have been shown from time to time on Sundays at local theatres.

Judge Rutherford said, among other things in his address yesterday, that the teaching of the Bible Students' Association was entirely opposed to enlistment.

RUSSIANS LAND FORCE.

PETROGRAD, April 9.—Russians have landed a force west of Trebizond.

GREATEST SPECTACLE IN THE WAR

With the British Armies in France.

The British today delivered a strong blow against the Germans from the regions south-west of Cambrai to a point south of Lens. They swept over German positions from South of Arras northward on the famous Bimy Ridge, fighting for the possession of which cost the French one hundred thousand casualtise earlier in the war.

Once before the British gained the crest of this ridge, but under tremendous concentration of German guns they were compelled to give it up. All winter long Canadians have held main lines looking down on them.

All the fighting today was against dominating positions on high

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, MONDAY, APRIL 9, 1917

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

REMEMBER the meeting in the Grand Opera House tonight. Do not let the good work started by Mayor Duffus come to nothing. Peterborough can be made bigger and greater in every way, but it will take united effort to accomplish the end in view. It is proposed to perfect the organization tonight, and every man and woman who attends will be just that much inspiration to those who have the active work in hand.

CITY HELPERS ON THE FARM.

A MEETING arranged for between the farmers of the County and a committee of the Speakers' Patriotic League, to be held in the Council Chamber last Saturday afternoon fell through for the simple reason that there was not a single farmer in attendance. Col. A. Stevenson, Mr. Joseph Wearing, Mr. J. A. Aylmer, City Clerk Armstrong, Mr. C. E. Adams, Relief Officer Miller and other members of the committee were promptly on hand, but dispersed without doing anything after waiting an hour for a representation from the farmers.

It was a disappointment for the members of the committee. Col. Stevenson had corresponded with the reeves and other county officials, and from the replies received it was expected that there would have been a large deputation from the rural districts.

It must be said on behalf of the farmers that they know their own needs better than the altruistic and other public-spirited residents of the city who have volunteered to find them helpers in the campaign of production. Labor is scarce in the country, but the relief proposed is open to question. It is possible that the very enthusiasm aroused in the city has had a tendency to arouse the caution of the farmers. From what they have read in the papers, they are justified in concluding that farm laborers are to be chosen indiscriminately from among the urban population and dumped upon the tillers of the soil. The farmer is naturally disinclined to make a summer resort of his home and take his chances with unskilled workmen.

A local paper in its Saturday's issue intimates that any man can drive a seed drill, ride a plow or a reaper. Is it any wonder that a farmer, on reading such stuff as that, becomes resentful? Not every man can drive a seed drill, or horse, either, even apart from the machine. Not every man can ride a plow, and all plows are not furnished with seats, neither do they all run on wheels. Not every man can operate a binder, any more than every novice can run an automobile. The paper that thus makes light of the farmer's needs and describes his duties is the same journal that a few weeks ago was demanding the Government to make it a criminal offence to supply the foreign market with food, and would further cramp the farmers of Peterborough County by ruining the dairy trade and calling upon the State to ignore the law of supply and demand by seizing all the potatoes in the possession of the farmers and compel them to accept a stated price. This was the paper that only five years ago, in the face of a general election, was posing as the friend of the farmer by an advocacy of wider markets for his produce.

There are plenty of men in the city who could help the farmers out at this time, but all of these are men who have spent their earlier years on the farm. They could take up the work again, and, after a few days of training would be as useful as ever. The man who never worked outside of a store or office, who never drove, much less harnessed, a horse, would be dear to any farmer at the cost of his board and lodging. Send such a man out in the boiling sun to pitch hay, and his tender hands would blister in half a day seriously enough to put him out of business, even if the heat of the sun did not compel him to seek the shade.

The city man would not entrust his team and carriage or his automobile to the care of a novice. Is the farmer unreasonable when he refuses to put his horses and machinery in the care of an amateur?

The farmer finds himself confronted with a serious condition, not a theory. That condition cannot be remedied except by furnishing him with fairly efficient help. For this he is willing to pay liberally, and a laborer on the average farm will be fed and lodged better, have, in short, a better home, than will the man who works for the same rate of pay in the city.

There are men in Peterborough, raised on farms, who can take up the old work again and be all the better for a few weeks of actual duty in the field. The bank clerks and the men behind the dry goods counters who never worked at anything else should be left out of consideration. Newspaper farmers, too, only spoil the kettle of broth when, from the wealth of their inexperience, they essay to offer advice as to easy operation of wheeled plows and binders.

NEWS MATTER AND EDITORIALS.

AN INDEPENDENT Labor party has been organized with headquarters in Toronto, and the man who has acted for years as Labor's attorney is to be nominated in that city for the Dominion Parliament, the object being to have him eventually appointed Minister of Labor. Organizers have been sent into every riding in Ontario to work up the movement. These organizers visited Peterborough and held a public meeting.

All of which was published in The Review as a matter of news. It was a question in which every politician, irrespective of party, was interested; one, too, in which the workingmen of the city were peculiarly so. To give currency to the movement was the duty of any newspaper. Editorial approval, however, was an entirely different matter, but no one will deny the right of Labor to take such a stand if the majority so decide.

The Examiner received its first intimation of this new turn of affairs when the facts were published in The Review. Last Saturday it would appear that someone called at that office and succeeded in arousing one of the seven sleepers there long enough to hand him a statement concerning a meeting of the Trades and Labor Council, a full report of which appeared in The Review. The article was published with an introduction and with a couple of passages reproduced in type as black as the malice which inspired its use, all tending to discredit the account which appeared in The Review, especially with regard to a coalition of business and labor men to work hand in hand at the next municipal election.

The Review is willing to leave it to any delegates present at the Trades Council meeting as to whether or not its report was correct. The Examiner simply attempts to discredit an important matter of news that it had missed simply because no one carried the news to it. That is puerile journalism beyond all manner of doubt.

If any person interested in this matter was misquoted The Review was not the offender. An invitation was brought to the Trades Council to appoint a committee to work with the business men to elect a labor man as mayor, and to send at least two wage-earners to the City Council. President Hartley would have appointed that committee Wednesday night if there had been a larger attendance, but finally decided to wait until the next meeting.

These are the unvarnished facts in the case. No more significant move was ever made in municipal politics, and we can easily believe that our contemporary was chagrined at missing so important a matter of local news. The policy of the paper, however, has always been to put an extinguisher on anything that originates in the ranks of the workingmen.

NO APOLOGY DUE.

AN ILL-ADVISED CONTEMPORAY that succeeds only in making matters worse when it agitates the pool with its pen, says that an apology is due a certain body of men who returned from Europe rather than get into the fray. Those who criticized their action are called upon for an apology, as, according to the newspaper, these men are going back to Europe as combatants.

The unsupported statement of the newspaper champion is hardly conclusive evidence. Its case is weak. A few months ago it put up the claim that these men enlisted for one particular line of duty and did not choose to take up another. Anyway, it continued, they were too old or otherwise physically unfit for actual service.

The public will be surprised to learn that in the interval the men have grown younger and that an ocean voyage and something in the nature of a holiday at home has restored them to the desired physical standard. They may have been unfortunate in their military career, but they certainly have been especially so in their inconsistent and wabbling journalistic apologist.

MEN WHO WIN WARS.

S. J. DUNSFORD, who held the rank of lieutenant in the 247th Battalion, has reverted to that of a private in order to get overseas with the draft that it is expected will be sent to Europe in a few days. Other officers of the same grade, it is understood, will follow his example.

Here is an example for all those who wear stripes and are unattached. These are the kind of men who win wars, not the men who refuse to take such a step when they are on the very edge of the fighting line and who return to idleness in Canada rather than go into the trenches as privates when privates are needed and every chance to get into actual service is given them.

And there is need of such men, too. Advices from England say that half a million more men are needed at once and are to be raised in the British Isles. Why should any Canadian falter while such necessity exists? The war is not yet won, nor is the spirit of the Hun soldier or sailor broken. There was an illustration of this only the other day. A German war vessel interned at Guam was blown up by the crew, a number of whom went to their death with it rather than see the ship fall into the possession of the United States. No higher example of unselfish patriotic devotion could be given. While the Allies have such adversaries to deal with, the end is not yet in sight. Faltering and holding out in a matter of rank makes a sorry contrast indeed to the heroism that sacrifices life rather than see the enemy gain an advantage, however small.

CANADA'S RAILWAY PROBLEMS AND ONE EXPERT'S SOLUTION

In a paper presented to the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers, Mr. W. F. Tye, formerly Chief Engineer of the Canadian Pacific, gives a masterly analysis of the railway situation in this country. From his years of experience thinking and solving railway problems as one of the outstanding railway engineers in Canada, Mr. Tye has had not only the attitude of the engineer but that of the economist as well.

Amongst Mr. Tye's summarized cluusions are:

The National Transcontinental, the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern Railways are unable to earn their operating expenses and their fixed charges. Canada has built, and is operating, the first of these roads, and Canada and the various provinces have guaranteed the principal and interest of most of the bonds of the other two. As the roads are unable to earn their fixed charges, they must, of necessity, be paid by the country.

The failure of these roads is due to the duplication of lines by all the railways, encouraged and bonused by the Government; to the excessive cost of the Grand Trunk Pacific and National Transcontinental Railways; to the failure of the Grand Trunk Pacific to provide itself with an adequate system of feeders in the West, and to the construction, by the Canadian Northern, of the long and unproductive stretches of road across British Columbia and Northern Ontario, without feeders, terminals, etc.

If these railways are to be maintained in two separate systems, it will cost at least $400,000,000. It will be necessary to build five or six thousand miles of feeders in the West, and two or three thousand miles of feeders in the East, and terminals costing many millions.

A consolidation of the Grand Trunk, the Grand Trunk Pacific, Transcontinental and Canadian Northern Railways would give a well-balanced system. Such a combination would not require more than $100,000,000 to put it in proper physical condition.

Including operating expenses and fixed charges, it costs the Canadian Pacific about $70 to do $100 worth of business, and it costs the Intercolonial and the other Canadian Government roads from $200 to $220 to do $100 worth of business.

Canada should follow the wise example set by Sir John Macdonald when dealing with the Canadian Pacific in 1879-80, and form a new private corporation, with sufficient power and the necessary safeguards, to take over and consolidate the Grand Trunk, Grand Trunk Pacific, Transcontinental, and Canadian Northern Railways, and develop another Canadian Pacific.

Such a combination would start with gross earnings of at least $100,000,000 per annum, with a probable average increase of 8 per cent. per annum, and probable net earnings of from $25,000,000 to $35,000,000 per annum, and a net revenue from other sources of about $2,800,000. Its fixed charges at consolidation would be about $35,000,000, and it would be under the necessity of spending, in the first five to seven years, at least $100,000,000 to provide rolling stock, and to put its properties in good physical condition.

In order to control its policy, and to share in its certain prosperity Canada should have an interest in the new company. The Dominion Government should furnish 40 per cent. of the money required, own 40 per cent. of the stock, and appoint 40 per cent. of the directorate, but take no part in the actual management. This would give all the advantage of Government control without any of the manifest disadvantages of Government management.

WHEN THE SEASON ARRIVES TO PLANT ENTHUSIASM MAY WANE

"Every patriot owes it to his country to increase the visible supply of food," declared the man who collected garden seeds all last winter, "but there is always an obstacle in the way. If I could plant a string bean grove about where the City Hall stands I could sell my stuff to the rich and make a little money. Where I lived when a boy there was plenty of room to plant spinach, but there was no market. There was no real cities there. There was about a dozen oldest towns, but an oldest town doesn't appear to eat as much as a young metropolis. Carrots were a drag on the market and the drug stores refused to consider them. There was no encouraging demand for fresh vegetables except when a fierce pale blizzard was raging, and a radish could not grow without an oil stove at the foot of the bed.

"In fact a three-cornered east wind is the greatest promoter of gardening enthusiasm. A while back, when the mercury was about eight yards below zero, I planned a tropical Eden in our back yard, but I am no opportunist. When the snow is on the pavement I can think of nothing but alfalfa and calabash gourds, but when the weather is propitious I always contract that sticky feeling and scorn to take advantage of a mere circumstance of climate to plant celery.

"It was about Christmastide that I got a bright gardening idea—and it turned out about like the usual city gardener's luck. It occurred to me that if I should appear some morning at Jones' back door at about the moment when he was shovelling a snow slide to the coal shed and if I should then utter a huckster's glad tune about 'fresh greens,' I should be greeted as a benefactor and a sign of flowing sap. It ought to be easy to buck thistles when nobody else has any. But when I attempted to plant the back yard I found it frozen too hard.

"It is nearly spring now, and my wife wants me to plant all the choice varieties of cucumbers. Instead I shall frequent the ice creamy retreats on the shaded side of George Street. No prudent man wants to plant a garden after the nettles have begun to lie in wait like a submarine."

"Well, what are you going to do with the seeds you bought?" the ready listener inquired.

"Oh, I shall save them till next winter—or you can have them," the seed collector answered.

TANK IS "BEHEMOTH" CREW MUST BE BRAVE

Momentum is Great Even at Low Speed, But Novel Warfare Has Trying Dangers

Describing the tanks a London Times' writer says: They are, as you know, armor-clad, but the thickness of their armor I must not tell, although the Germans doubtless know it. For their armament, it may vary as you please, but is of the machine gun type; and the guns, it is needless to say, can fire in all directions.

Each carries its commanding officer and a crew of driver and gunners; and they have at least room enough in their interior to have been able on at least one occasion, as you have been told, to bring home a German battalion commander as a prisoner inside.

Splendid Men Inside

To thrust oneself, cooped up in the beast's steel interior, into the maze of the enemy's trenches and strong positions, must be an exceedingly unpleasant job, but not a man, I believe, on any machine has yet behaved otherwise than splendidly.

Officially, the new craft call themselves his Majesty's land ships ("H.M.L.S."), and every one carries its own name—Delphine, Daphne, Delsie, Cordon Rouge, or Crême de Menthe—as proudly as any ship of the sea. But, whatever they call themselves, the army generally calls them "Tanks," that name, it is understood, being chosen as having the merit of being totally undescriptive.

Needs Little Speed

Even at a slow rate of speed a creature of this size travels with considerable momentum; and neither the brick wall of an ordinary house nor a tree of moderate size, if Behemoth gets a fair push at it, is much of an obstacle in his path. Lesser obstructions are only pleasing incidents in his journey, which he climbs over, as a slug climbs over a pebble, or crushes by his weight and passes on.

BRITAIN SEES HERSELF

Evils Exposed by a London Journal Mercilessly

A special correspondent of the London Daily Mail wrote from Glasgow as follows: Mid-day scenes at off-license premises in the heart of Glasgow's business quarter throw new light upon the inquiry into the holding up of shipping and delay in the shipbuilding yards on the Clyde. There was a wild rush on the licensed grocers' shops for supplies to carry over two holidays. There is not a respectable citizen or responsible tradesman who does not deplore the discreditable scenes. Women poured in by tramway car and even on foot from far outlying districts and besieged the premises of licensed grocers who make a specialty of retailing bottles of spirits and wines at lower prices than are usually charged in the public houses. At a quarter to twelve the ordinary pavement traffic on one side of Renfield street was held up by at least 500 of these pilgrims.

So great was the crowd in front of one of these establishments that the police very prudently made it stand in the gutter, and a queue four-deep extended for fifty or sixty yards awaiting the opening of the doors. Women of all ages, from the tottering, grey haired beldame to the young wife with her baby in her arms, were there, and many were accompanied by children under twelve years of age. Although it was raining, a large proportion had not even shawls to protect their heads and shoulders.

In the line here and there was a man of the lowest loafer type, shabby and indifferently shod, who preferred to spend what money he could scrape together on cheap alcohol rather than on the more substantial bodily comforts of which apparently he stood in sore need. The decent passers-by with one accord exclaimed "How shocking!" and one woman who returned to expostulate and terminated her reproach with the words, "Don't you realize that we are at war?" provoked a torrent of insult and was told to go home, with the suggestion that she had there a bottle of her own.

Saving $2,500,000 in a Day

Public attention has been directed to the urgent importance of greater economy in the consumption of meat, announces an English journal. It is pointed out that the present consumption of beef, mutton, pork and bacon by the civilian population amounts in value to close on $2,500,000 a day. A reduction of one-seventh the equivalent of doing without meat of any kind for one day in each week—would mean a saving of $2,500,000 a week, even if prices did not fall as a result of the smaller demand. It is surely possible for everyone, by substituting other foods, to so rearrange their meals as to reduce the amount of meat eaten by at least one-seventh.

A STORY OF OLD VENICE

By F. A. MITCHELL.

"Signor Antonelli, you are summoned to attend the doge."

The order was given by one Andrea Carpenti, a courtier at the palace. Antonelli had left the dining room of his dwelling on the grand canal and hastened to his drawing room to receive the doge's messenger.

"I will go with you in a moment," he said to Carpenti, and, returning to the dining room, he finished what he had been doing when interrupted. A light luncheon, consisting of a few biscuits and a small glass pitcher of white wine, was on the table, evidently placed there for some one who was expected to partake of it. Antonelli dropped a powder on the biscuit, and since both powder and biscuit were white the former was not noticeable. Then he rejoined Carpenti, and the two passed out on to the porch, washed by the waters of the canal, entered a gondola and set out for the palace of St. Mark.

On the way they met a gondola in which sat a young lady who hailed Antonelli and asked:

"Is your aunt at home this morning, signor?"

"She is," replied Antonelli.

"I'm going to lunch with her."

By this time the gondolas passed without the range of hearing.

"I must go back," said Antonelli.

"Why so?" asked Andrea.

"I have forgotten something."

"The doge directed me to bring you to him without delay."

"Hold!" cried Antonelli to the gondolier.

"Proceed," said Andrea. "Since you must make choice between your betrothed and the doge you must give preference to your sovereign."

"Turn about!" cried Antonelli, now white as a cloth, to the gondolier. Starting up, he was about to seize the pole from the man when Andrea threw his arms about him and held him. Andrea was much the stronger, and in his clutch Antonelli was powerless.

"Come, signor," said the former; "don't forget that if it were reported to the doge that after starting to obey his summons you turned back to be with your sweetheart it might cost you your head. I am befriending you in preventing your bringing misfortune upon yourself and through yourself upon the fair Signorina Marcia Copelli."

Through fear of offending his sovereign, who was one of the most autocratic and terrible doges who ever ruled Venice, Antonelli suffered himself to be mastered and continued the journey, though it was evident that he was racked by some dreadful emotion. When the two arrived at the steps that led up to St. Mark's place they landed and after traversing an interval ascended those steps that led and still lead into the palace. Then, entering an anteroom, they waited till the sovereign was ready to receive them.

Meanwhile Antonelli suffered torture. He was betrothed to Signorina Copelli, but he was without fortune, being dependent on his aunt, Signora Caracola, an old lady who was said to be the richest woman in Venice. Every morning Signora Caracola partook of a light luncheon and goblet of Italian wine, a beverage not much stronger than grape juice. Antonelli, who was her heir and desirous of getting possession of her wealth at once, had dropped the powder on the biscuit she would eat to put her out of his way by poison. He was in terror lest his sweetheart be poisoned as well.

For an hour he waited the pleasure of the doge, then was admitted to his sovereign's presence.

He found the sovereign surrounded by courtiers who were flattering and fawning upon him, for that was a time when the Venetian sovereign possessed almost unlimited power. Even after entering the presence chamber Antonelli was kept waiting for some time before being given an audience, and every moment's delay was one of torture to him. At last, after the doge had listened to a long and very dull story from a buffoon, he received Antonelli.

"Signor," said the doge, "I am told that your aunt owns a dog of the rarest breed in Venice. I have sent for you to offer her through you any price she may ask for it."

"I am quite sure," replied Antonelli, "that my aunt, when apprised of your royal wish, will present the dog to your highness."

"A present that will merit a royal return. You may say to your aunt that I am about to make you a noble and a member of my privy council."

Antonelli was dismissed and, returning to the gondola, joined the gondolier in making as quick time as possible to his home. Before reaching the steps he leaped upon them and hurried into the house. In the dining room he found his aunt and sweetheart mourning over the dead body of the dog that was coveted by the doge.

Antonelli heaved a sigh of relief.

He was told that the dog had eaten the biscuit intended for his aunt. Signora Caracola, if she suspected poison, did not suspect her nephew. Signorina Copelli thought deeper and, knowing the motive for such a crime, treated him coldly.

When the death of the dog was announced to the doge he was furious, believing that it was a ruse to deprive him of the animal. Antonelli was banished from Venice. Signorina Copelli broke off her betrothal to him. The aunt, having become convinced of Antonelli's criminal intent, left her fortune to the church.

THE FASHIONABLE DAY BED.

A New Name For a Couch With Foot and Head Boards.

Every dog has his day, and the ultra smart chaise longue must yield a point to the still more smart day bed, which is just now beauty's favored background. Every woman who has time to sit around in a stunning negligee during the daytime is surreptitiously studying those enchanting Mme. Recamier poses, and a day bed is the piece de resistance of the fashionable boudoir. The modern artist photographer who takes his camera into the home and photographs his subjects against their every day backgrounds in supposedly informal and natural poses is coining a fortune in Recamier like portraits with luxuriously pillowed day beds as the central idea.

For the small apartment the day bed—which can, of course, be used as an ordinary sleeping bed by night—is a most useful and attractive bit of furniture far surpassing in grace the ungainly folding bed of another generation or the folding davenport of recent years, which always had a two faced look about it and suggested hidden bedding by the awkward height of its seat. The day bed may be had in Adam style and made of mahogany, with upholstered velvet cushions, for about $50. In painted wood, with gracefully curved ends and denim covered cushion, it costs about $30. Of course gilded wood or ivory enamel and cane day beds in empire style may add anything from $80 to $200 to the bill for boudoir furnishing.

Laborers for Cuba.

The President of Cuba has granted a concession to a sugar company for the importation of 300 laborers from Mexico as an experiment, the native laborers evidently being either insufficient or inefficient.

SAVE but HOW?

You are daily admonished by Bankers, Cabinet Ministers, Judges, and by all the Press of the Country, to save and be thrifty. In fact, the stamps on our letters are cancelled by the admonition to "Save, Save, Save, etc."

Outside of the Bankers' Association, who have recommended the Banks, very few other suggestions have been made.

Why has no person suggested or recommended the greatest thrift producer and the greatest anti-poverty Institution known to the Public?

For instance, let us suppose two thousand men at say age 25 propose to test this principle for say twenty years, and one-half of them invest a small sum annually in a bank and the other thousand deposit an equal amount annually with this anti-poverty institution. Now, if I can show you that those who deposited with the anti-poverty institution not only received more than those who deposited in the bank, but that the anti-poverty institution paid to the beneficiaries of the unfortunate depositors who were unable to continue their payments, the large additional sum of $159,000.00 which the banks kept for their stockholders, WOULD THAT INTEREST YOU?

The banks are all right, but if I can show you that this anti-poverty institution not only gave better security and actually gave better returns, but in addition they gave a Bond that if anything unforeseen, such as Death, happen you, they would protect you and your estate to any extent desired, WOULD IT INTEREST YOU?

The above facts can be verified to you by calling at, 'phoning or writing the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, 402 Water Street, and such action on your part places you under no obligation whatever.

British Tanks Have Ancestors

THE mysterious British "tanks," described as a car of death resembling a ponderous, slow-moving steel caterpillar, is the current "enfante terrible" in the large family of strange engines of destruction sired by the God of War. The modern fighting man has been so schooled to expect unique and powerful inventions designed to destroy human life that the "tanks" have inspired more curiosity than terror, but far different has been the story of the vast breed of monsters that have engendered panic in the hearts of soldiers in ages past.

One of the earliest engines of destruction whose fame has been perpetuated on the pages of legendary epic was the great wooden horse which the crafty Ulysses left on the plains of Ilium. Warriors hidden inside the wooden animal crept out, threw open the gates of the city and admitted their companions, thus bringing about the destruction of the city of Priam.

An engine of war which emerges from the cloud of legend and takes its place among historical actualities was that employed by Alexander the Great in his seven months siege of the famous Phoenician metropolis, Tyre. This ancient city was strongly situated on an island, and as there were no long range catapults in the fourth century before the Christian era, Alexander conceived the plan of building a mole or causeway from the mainland to the island. This engineering enterprise was hampered by the Tyrians, who launched blazing ships against the assailants as they sunk piles to hold in place the rock and debris that formed a roadway over which the army was to pass. In order to protect his construction corps, Alexander devised as an engine of war great towers covered with green hides. These were set up as shields against the floating flames of the enemy, and the result was one of the memorable victories in Alexander's conquest of the Eastern world.

One of the most terrifying "engines of war" of ancient times was the battle elephant employed by Pyrrhus, Alexander's cousin, in the first of the famous "Pyrrhic victories" over the Romans. Twenty of these huge beasts were used against the enemies of the Tarantines at the battle of Heraclea in 280 B. C. The strange, moving mountains of flesh caused a wave of fear to sweep over the Romans and they fled from the field of carnage, but after one experience with the animals their courage returned and henceforth the war elephant was more of a curiosity than an effective engine.

One of the simplest and yet one of the most effective inventions of ancient times was the javelin with a point of soft iron employed by Julius Cæsar in one of his Gallic wars. The Roman legionaries hurled those weapons against the shields of their enemies. The iron head penetrated the outer covering of bull's hide, but flattened out against the hardwood or metal back of the shield, and thus became hooked to this protector. The shanks of dangling javelins so impeded the movements of the barbarian soldiers that they were forced either to throw away their shields and fight uncovered against the Romans or else stop long enough (a fatal delay in their advance) to disencumber themselves from this unique weapon which may properly be called the dum-dum pilum, the progenitor of the softnose or dum-dum bullet of to-day.

Greek fire is a term which has been applied to various compounds through a succession of centuries going as far back as 424 B.C., when at the siege of Delium a cauldron filled with sulphur, pitch, and charcoal was placed against the walls of the city, ignited, and the flames intensified by a bellows attached to a hollow tree trunk. The most famous of the Greek fires, however, was that invented by the architect Callinicus during the reign of Constantine Pogonatus. This particular engine of destruction was known as wet fire on account of its property of bursting into flame when wetted. Thrown from siphons, it fell upon the ships of the Saracens causing them to burst into flames, and thus Constantinople was saved to the Byzantine emperors for the time being (668).

Probably more far-reaching in its effect than any other engine of war was the introduction of gun-powder on the battlefield. It was one of the most potent factors contributing to the overthrow of the great feudal system, for it destroyed the superiority of the armored knight over the yeoman foot-soldier, and as Carlyle has rightly said, "It made all men of the same height." Following the use of gunpowder in small arms came the invention and development of the cannon, a weapon which was employed with destructive effect against the walls of Constantinople when this historic city finally fell into the hands of the Mohammedans in 1453.

The aeroplane, the zeppelin, and the submarine have been developed gradually in times of peace preparatory for war, and are the products of many minds. Not so the iron-clad Merrimac and the turreted Monitor which appeared suddenly and almost simultaneously on the horizon of naval warfare during the American Civil War.

The poisonous gases employed in trench warfare during the present European conflict may be viewed as a deadly development of the ludicrous stink-pot weapons used by the Chinese for ages.

Hollow Hopes.

"Never despair. Somewhere beyond the clouds the sun is shining."

"Yes, and somewhere below the sea there's solid bottom. But that doesn't help a man when he falls overboard."

BOWSER IN TEARS

Hears of the Death of His Girl Playmate and Others

"I HAVE a boiled ham dinner for you tonight, as you asked me to," was Mrs. Bowser's greeting as Mr. Bowser entered the house the other evening.

He held up his hand in protest, and she noticed that he wore a very serious look.

"Why, what's the matter?"

He heaved a sigh and followed it with a half groan.

"Has bankruptcy come?"

"I—I want to lie down on the lounge for a spell," he replied. "I don't care for any dinner tonight."

"Are you ill? If so, let me telephone for the doctor."

"No, not ill. I've heard bad news. I've heard bad news from three or four different sources today."

"But you shouldn't let it affect you this way. I got the ham on purpose for you. It is lean and nice."

"Ham! Ham!" he wailed. "Do you think a man who is feeling as bad as I am can eat ham?"

"Then have some tea and toast."

"I'm all choked up and can't eat or drink. You can go down to your dinner. Maybe—maybe I can tell you about it when you come up."

Mrs. Bowser went down, but did not eat half a dinner. She came back to find Mr. Bowser stretched out on the lounge and a tear standing on one cheek.

BOWSER'S EARLY SCHOOLMATE.

"Now, then, what is it?"

"Sarah Davis is dead!"

"And who is Sarah Davis?"

"She and I used to play together when we were children. I used to walk with her to school and always had a red apple for her. I met a man from Vermont today, and he said Sarah was no more. She died a month ago."

"Well, what have you got to do with it?" was asked. "I never heard you speak her name before."

"But I used to give Sarah red apples. She was a sweet little girl."

"It seems to me you are making a great fuss over it. You'd better come down and have some of that ham."

"Ham! Ham! Hear her say h-am! Mrs. Bowser, you have a heart of stone. Sarah is dead and you don't care a cent!"

"But I didn't know Sarah, and why should I? What else has happened?"

Deacon Parsloe Also Dead.

"Deacon Parsloe used to live on the next farm to us. He saved my life once when I was a boy and fell into the river. I loved him almost like a father."

"Well?"

"And he's dead too. Died a year ago and I never heard of it till today. Went out to milk one evening, and they found him dead. Died of heart trouble."

"And did you expect he was going to live forever? Died a year ago and you are all choked up over it now! I have some fine cabbage with that ham."

"Cabbage! Cabbage! Hear her talk of cabbage when Deacon Parsloe is dead! He saved my life, and he is dead. I loved him, and he is no more. I wonder if he thought of me when he was breathing his last?"

"I don't suppose he had thought of you for twenty years. If he had heard of your death he wouldn't have shed any tears over it. Why should he? That is a pig ham and very lean and firm."

"Ham again! Ham! Ham! Mrs. Bowser, some terrible thing will surely happen to you. Here I am with a big lump in my throat, and there you sit almost smiling. I didn't know that a human being could be so heartless. What's that noise?"

"It is the woman next door playing 'The Good Old Summer Time.'"

"Great Scott! Playing that tune and Deacon Parsloe dead! Mrs. Bowser, tell her she must stop—stop at once!"

"Any more bad news?" she asked without heeding his command.

"Did you know little Jimmie Snow, the hunchback?"

"Never."

"He was one of my childhood playmates. We used to steal cucumbers together. Once we fought and I licked him. He cried like a girl."

"Well, is Jimmie dead?"

"He is. Met a man from Matteawan today, and he said Jimmie had gone to his reward. Poor Jimmie! I wonder if he forgave me before he died. My licking him has always troubled my conscience."

"He probably didn't remember it three days. I had both carrots and parsnips with the ham."

"Ham still—parsnips and carrots! Poor Jimmie Snow is dead, and yet you talk about such things! Woman—and now what's that?"

Noise by Boys in a Solemn Hour.

"One boy calling to another on the street."

"It must be stopped. It is scandalous. Here I lie all choked up, and out on the street one boy hollers at another. Has the human race no heart?"

"Do you think you could eat a poached egg?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"Poached egg—think of it!"

"Suppose I make you a cup of chocolate?"

"Choco—and what noise is that?"

"It's a little German band."

"A German band playing jigtime on the street when my feelings are all harrowed in this way! Mrs. Bowser, go down to the gate and tell those ruffians to move on. Tell 'em it's sacrilege."

"They will move on soon. Don't you think you could eat a ham sandwich?"

"And now it is ham again! A weeping man eat a ham sandwich, a sorrowing man hog down slices of ham and bread! There—there's another row. What is it this time?"

"Cats on the back fence."

"Cats on the back fence, cats growling at each other, cats ready for a row! Go out, Mrs. Bowser—go out and bump them away!"

"Why don't you go over to the drug store and get something to quiet your nerves?" she asked, knowing that if she got him to stir around he would feel better.

"Do you think I could walk that far?" he queried in reply.

"Yes, if you take it easy."

"Then I guess I'll go. The sad news has broken my nerves all down. I'll ask for morphine to quiet me."

"Yes."

"You don't blame me for feeling bad, do you?"

"Oh, no."

"It shows that I have a heart, doesn't it?"

Foot Race For Hobo as a Cure.

"It surely does."

"You know the news of Sarah Davis' death came upon me so sudden. Poor Sarah—poor little girl! Yes, I'll ask for something to quiet my nerves. When I get back you can hold your hand on my forehead till I go to sleep."

Mrs. Bowser helped him on with hat and overcoat and led him out on the steps. He seemed as feeble as an old old man. She was telling him to be careful and to grab hold of the fences on the way when a tramp came along and opened the gate.

Mr. Bowser stiffened.

The tramp entered the yard.

Mr. Bowser uttered a growl in his throat.

"Say, lady and gent, if I don't get 10 cents to pay for lodgings"—

"Whoop, whoop-ee!" yelled Mr. Bowser as he started down the steps and reached for the weary.

Mrs. Bowser called and called, but it was too late. Through the gate and down the street flew the tramp, and through the gate and down the street followed a whooping man. Mr. Bowser had recovered from his sorrows.

SAUSAGE AND CELLULOSE.

Casings Are Now Made of Wood Pulp Reduced to a Jelly.

From time immemorial the gullet and intestines of the ox and the intestines of the sheep and the hog have been used as containers for sausage meat. Had they not been established as a food staple by generations of use we would shrink from them in disgust as we do from the Chinaman's bird's nest soup.

Now sausage casings are being made out of wood pulp. The material is chemically treated, so that it shows not the slightest trace of a fibrous structure. It is reduced to a jelly like mass of cellulose and then formed into transparent tubes that are no thicker than the usual casings and have a smooth, glossy surface which furnishes no lodgment for mold.

Of course cellulose has no food value, but the casings can be masticated, which is more than can be said of the envelopes of large sausages, such as the bologna. As a matter of fact, in only the smaller sizes is the entire sausage eaten.

For sanitary as well as esthetic reasons the cellulose envelops are a distinct improvement. To be sure, the purity of casings produced by the large packing houses cannot be questioned, but the very process of their manufacture renders the cellulose casings aseptic.—A. Russell Bond in Century.

Memorials to Scientists.

A notable addition to the "science corner" of Westminster abbey is the recent unveiling of memorial tablets to Sir Joseph Hooker, the botanist; Dr. Alfred Russel Wallace, the naturalist, and Lord Lister, founder of antiseptic surgery. The three new tablets were placed close together in the north aisle of the abbey. That to Dr. Wallace adjoins the tablet to Darwin, and on the left is the tablet to Lord Lister. These tablets fit into the space between those of Darwin and John Couch Adams, the discoverer of the planet Neptune. Beneath the memorial to Adams is the tablet to Sir Joseph Hooker. A few yards away are the tombs of Darwin, Herschel and Newton.

WEE ELEGANCE.

What Four-year-olds Wear For Jack Frost.

Old rose will be much used for small garments the coming season. This coat, however, is white velours cloth simply cut and trimmed with beaver, as is the small turban. A white woolly muff accompaniment is almost as huge as the lady herself.

Since man took to flying.
It's really too trying,

"Huh! I bet he took the last measurement just after he won that dinky silver cup he's so proud of."

She left no weeping parents, for
They were an incubator.

YOUNG WOMEN MAY AVOID PAIN

Need Only Trust to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, says Mrs. Kurtzweg.

Buffalo, N.Y.—"My daughter, whose picture is herewith, was much troubled with pains in her back and sides every month and they would sometimes be so bad that it would seem like acute inflammation of some organ. She read your advertisement in the newspapers and tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She praises it highly as she has been relieved of all these pains by its use. All mothers should know of this remedy, and all young girls who suffer should try it."—Mrs. MATILDA KURTZWEG, 529 High St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Young women who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands have been restored to health by this root and herb remedy.

If you know of any young woman who is sick and needs helpful advice, ask her to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Only women will receive her letter, and it will be held in strictest confidence.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

RECIPES FOR BABY FOOD, ETC.

Lime Water.

A TEASPOONFUL of unslaked lime in a quart of boiled water. Shake in a large bottle such as a gem jar and let stand for twenty-four hours. The clear fluid standing on top may then be run off. This is Lime Water.

Barley Water.

Two level teaspoonfuls of Robinson's or Brook's barley-flour. Mix with water to make a paste. Add water to one pint. Boil for twenty minutes in double boiler. Strain through two thicknesses of cheese cloth. Add boiled water to make up that boiled away so as to have one pint.

Gruel.

Oatmeal or Barley. Use either Robinson's or Brook's barley flour or Robinson's oatmeal (groats). Take three teaspoonfuls of the flour. Add sufficient cold water to form a paste and add enough water to make a pint. Cook for twenty minutes in a double-boiler. Add a pinch of salt. Strain through two thicknesses of cheesecloth. The gruel should be thick enough to jelly when cold. If too thin, cook longer.

Whey.

To one quart of skimmed milk, heated to 105 Deg. F. add four teaspoonfuls of liquid rennet. Let stand in a cool place till the curd forms. Break up the curd with a fork and strain through four layers of cheesecloth or muslin. Heat the liquid (whey) to 155 Deg. F. and allow to cool gradually. Keep on ice. One quart of milk makes 24 ounces of whey.

Albumen Water.

To four ounces of water, heated to 104 Deg. F. add the white of one egg, stir with a knife until dissolved. Do not beat or shake. Strain through cheesecloth.

Broth.

Put a pound of meat in one pint of cold water. Add a pinch of salt. Cook slowly for three or four hours. Strain through two thicknesses of cheesecloth and cool. Remove all the fat.

Beef Juice.

Partially broil over coals, both sides of a half pound of the top of a round of beef. Cut in small pieces and squeeze out the juice, using a meat press or wooden lemon squeezer. Add a pinch of salt. Half a pound of beef makes two ounces of beef juice.

Scraped Beef.

Scrape a piece of round steak with a knife and then very slightly broil. Scraped beef is free from fibre and is better than minced beef.

Junket.

To one quart of whole milk heated to 105 Deg. F. add four teaspoonfuls of liquid rennet. Add a pinch of salt and a teaspoonful of granulated sugar. Let stand in a cool place till the curd forms. Strain off the liquid. The balance is junket.

Coddled Egg.

Put the egg in boiling water and immediately remove from the fire. Cover and let stand for seven or eight minutes. The white of the egg should be soft and not liquid.

Prune Juice.

Take half a pound of good prunes. Wash and soak in water over night. Cover with water and add half a teaspoonful of sugar. Cook in a double boiler until the prunes are perfectly tender. Strain through cheesecloth. The resulting liquid is prune juice.

Soap Suppository.

Take a piece of castile or common brown soap and cut out a portion one or two inches long, pointed at one end and about as thick as a lead pencil. This will make a very good suppository. Slightly wet when about to use it.

Boracic Acid Solution (2 per cent.)

Put one tablespoonful of boracic acid crystals in a clean eight-ounce bottle filled with [illegible] water. Shake the bottle. Not all the crystals will be dissolved, but the water will be a saturated (4 per cent.) solution. Some of this diluted with equal parts of boiled water will be a 2 per cent. solution. The 4 per cent. solution should be so labelled and used as a stock solution.

TRIBUNALS THAT KEPT MEN OUT OF THE ARMY

How the Exemptions Boards Work in Rural England.

After a fortnight's tour of the exemptions tribunals of Northern England, a London Daily Mail representative writes: A stumbling-block is the agricultural representative appointed by the Local Government Board to sit but not to vote—on all the tribunals where mainly agricultural cases are dealt with. Nearly every agricultural representative I have met strives with might and main to keep every man he can get on the land and out of the army! He envisages his claims from the point of view of the Norfolk farms, where highly technical and really skilled work is needed, drawing no distinction between them and the rough, happy-go-lucky little farms, say, of Dartmoor and the dales and the moors of Yorkshire. He is armed with a circular from the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries, packed with the most perplexing details which nobody attempts to understand. As a matter of fact he is the fifth wheel in this lumbering wagon of national administration.

The Haunted Man

Sitting between the chairman of the rural district council and the labor man—almost invariably his bitter enemy—is the military representative. Amid the byways where I have been he is not, as a rule, a soldier. He is not clothed in khaki and strapped together with a Sam Browne belt, and it has been difficult to pick him out from the ruck—at first. It has been difficult, indeed, to identify him from his parts of speech or the trend of his arguments. But I speedily found that all I had to do when I entered the sanctum sanctorum was to search among the plump, ruddy, self-satisfied faces for a countenance haggard and woebegone, a head prematurely grey or bald, an eye bloodshot, and a mouth sagging at the corners—the Haunted Man!

"Who is that man?" I would whisper to the nearest somebody at hand. And invariably I fot the same reply:

"Oh, him!—he's the military representative!"

More Cases; More Fees

Another serious blot on the tribunal system is the scale of pay for tribunal clerks, which was surely invented for the purpose of temptation. The clerk of a local tribunal gets 5s. a head for the first 25 cases listed in any one month, and only 2s. 6. a head for the next 75 cases in any one month. The pay of an appeal tribunal clerk is 2s. 6d. a head for the first 25 and 1s. for the remainder. In glancing over the lists prepared it is significant to note that it is unusual to see more than 25 cases listed in a month. These cases can go on and on and backwards and forwards from exemption to exemption, from first court to appeal, and then back again, like recurring decimals. The oftener any one of the 25 cases is repeated the more crowns are due to the clerk.

SCRAP SHELLS

Foreman-Used Forged Die For Stamping Shells

The maximum penalty of six months' imprisonment was passed in Nottingham, England, on an under-foreman named Ernest Rowland for using a forged die to stamp shells. He was formerly employed at a shell factory in Nottinghamshire and in a Government aircraft factory in Worcestershire. It was stated by the Public Prosecutor that the prisoner, while working in Nottinghamshire, had made for himself a stamp with the initials of one of the inspectors and the broad arrow, and with this he confessed to having stamped 800 to 1,000 shells. Many of the shells so stamped were only fit for scrap. Had one of these got into a gun it might have killed the gun team.

Germless Uniforms

Interesting experiments in rendering cloth antiseptic so that when carried into the flesh in bullet or other wounds it will not act as a breeding centre of germs have just been carried out by Dr. Mary Davies, bacteriologist of one of the French military hospitals. She was successful with blue cloth from the uniforms of French soldiers, which she boiled in dilutions of pyaol.

GERMAN POLICE WORST

Complete Control of Opinions and Persons.

H. Thomas Curtin, after spending ten months in Germany for British newspapers returned to England and wrote as follows: The German Government has now, therefore, complete control of speech, the press, the professors and pastors, every kind of public meeting, kinematographs and photographs. All of which are, in effect, under the control of the police, manipulated by the Government. As the German Parliament in no way resembles England's Parliament, so do the German police in no way resemble the British police.

The German police, mounted or unmounted, are armed with revolver, sword, and machine gun, with powers of search and arrest with warrant. They are allowed in their discretion to strike or otherwise maltreat not only civilians, but soldiers. Always provided with great powers, their position since the war has risen to such an extent that the words used in the Reichstag, "The Reign of Terror," are not an exaggeration.

Aided and even abetted by a myriad of spies and agents provocateurs, they have under what is known as "preventive arrest" throughout the German Empire and Austria so great a number of civilians that the German prisons, as has been admitted, are filled to repletion.

HERO FLYING BUT DEAD

Air Wonder of Briton in Fight With Boelcke

Captain Boelcke, the famous German airman who was killed, described an amazing occurrence in the air in a letter which is published in the book of his Field Reports issued in Germany. He describes an encounter between English and German air squadrons near B——. "My antagonist," he says, "tried to get away. But I stuck to him (apparently firing all the time at point-blank range). But I couldn't help admiring his endurance.

"I must have settled him long ago, but round and round he kept on flying as well as ever. It was too much to stomach. I said to myself, 'The fellow's dead long ago, but the 'plane keeps on the level because he's got rubber bands keeping the steering gear right.' So I flew close in and there I saw the Englishman slightly toppled over to the side sitting at his wheel stone dead." The number of the machine, says Boelcke, was 7,495.

Surprised the Dignitaries

A motor car, with a khaki-clad girl, a member of one of the woman's corps, at the wheel, was standing outside the War Office while its occupant was making a call there, when a group of Cabinet Ministers emerged from the building. The fair chauffeur sprang from the car and, to the astonishment of his companions, affectionately embraced the leading Minister. It was his niece, who was using her skill at driving as her share towards the war effort.

Vast Sum to Sailors' Credit

The Admiralty has decided that all such prize money from this war shall be put into a general fund, in which shall participate all those who have been engaged in the work of the navy at the end of the war. It has been reckoned by men fairly competent to judge such matters that there must lie to-day to Jack's credit in this way a total not far short of $20,000,000.

A staff officer, aged 66, has crossed the Irish Sea and the English Channel four times within eight days, during which time he travelled 4000 miles on land and water.

Germany has not permitted inspection of the camps containing British prisoners working in Russian territory.

Forty-two men out of fifty houses in Hampton-on-Thames are serving with the forces.

FRANCE AS A MOTHER

War-Scarred Yet She Cares for Million Refugees.

Henry Wood, correspondent of the United Press of America, says that France has solved the problem of looking after nearly 1,000,000 war refugees in a remarkable manner. The bulk of these homeless victims of the war come from the invaded and occupied districts of France, but many of them are Belgians and Serbians. As far as possible the refugees have been grouped into little colonies or cities in which they enjoy a sort of municipal life of their own. France's army barracks have been adapted to this end. Most of them are empty, as the entire French army is at the front.

In the province of which Nancy is the capital there are 30,000 refugees and each barracks represents a little city providing homes now for about 5,000 war victims. The authorities guarded against the separation of families, and even of neighbors and residents of the same towns and villages.

The bulk of the refugees are women and children, and schools have been established for the latter. A special feature of these are the classes in manual training for boys over twelve. They are taught a practical trade and the pupils are already making the chairs, tables, desks, and other articles of furniture with which to refurnish their homes and schools.

There is a course in domestic economy for girls over 12, and the earnings from the sewing classes can be used to buy little personal luxuries and comforts. It is not obligatory for the adults, but the children must take their meals in the municipal dining rooms. A common social room serves for the aged grandmothers to work and talk together. They are a brave lot, nearly all with grandsons, if not also with sons, at the front. The organization of each refugees' city includes vast municipal kitchens and hospitals and entertainment halls where moving pictures and so on are given several times in the week.

Remarkable War Record

A war record to be proud of is that of Mr. and Mrs. Myles Kennedy, of Stone Cross, Ulverston, who have over fifty relatives and family connections fighting on land and sea, and one a prisoner of war in Norway. The family luck remained unbroken, until Mr. Kennedy's youngest brother died of wounds, a prisoner in Germany, and subsequently a nephew of Mrs. Kennedy died of his wounds.

Threat of Retaliation Useful

A threat from the Russian Government to introduce flogging as a disciplinary measure for German prisoners if the torture called "suspension" was not abolished has had the desired effect.

TRENCH SUPERSTITIONS

Of all the superstitions in the British army—and they are many—the most popular has to do with the jar that contains the ration of rum. German bullets, the men have it, swerve instinctively towards the nearest rum jar. A few stray shots have helped to strengthen the superstition, and the conviction holds firm that the man who carries the rum jar runs a double risk of being hit.

Mascots and talismans hold an important place in the solider's life. One man used to carry in his pack a rosary that he had picked up in one of the streets of Ypres. One day his leg was fractured in two places by a large piece of a trench mortar bomb, but in spite of his suffering he refused to be taken down to the dressing station until his rosary had been produced. "If I don't take it with me," he said, "I'd get hit again on the way down."

Nearly every man at the front has a mascot of some sort, a rosary, a black cat, a German button, a lucky elephant, or a weird sign which is supposed to keep him safe. Their superstitions, too, are many in number. One man is convinced that he will be killed on a Friday; another man would rather waste a dry and therefore valuable match than light three cigarettes; another will think himself lucky if he can see a cow as he marches up to the trenches.

Real Tribute to Nighbor

Here's a real tribute to the ability of Frank Nighbor—and it's one from the heart. In an Ottawa-Canadien game big Bert Corbeau, the blonde backwoodsman, played considerably below his usual standard. He never seemed to get started on those tearing rushes which have played havoc with the other teams. At the end of the second period, Manager Kennedy asked him if anything was the matter. "There's nothing the matter with me," said Corbeau acidly. "I'm all right. It's that fellow Nighbor. He takes the puck away from me every time I get it."

A portable generator has been specially designed to provide electric lights to permit farm work to be done at night.

WHAT A WAR SHRINE IS

A war shrine is a Roll of Honor on the tablets of which the names of those who have gone from the street in which the shrine stands into the navy and the army, and those who have died for their country, are written. The frame contains a form of prayer for the men. There is a canopy of flags, and the whole is ornamented with flowers laid fresh upon the shrine by the women and children, who stand in silent prayer for the heroes for a few moments every day

"HUMANIZE WAR NOW" AUSTRIAN TO KAISER

Exiled Member of Parliament Says War Must be Fought to Finish, But How?

Professor T. G. Masaryk, an exiled member of the Austrian Parliament, writes from London, Eng., as follows: The poison gas attack on the Canadians at St. Julien has burned itself too deeply into the memory of the Canadian people ever to be blotted out by any eleventh-hour contrition. The sea will never yield up its Lusitania dead. The horror of Louvain will go shuddering through the centuries. And yet, knowing the world had irrevocably condemned me, were I the Kaiser I should still deem it not too late to humanize the war.

He Can Change It

With the German Emperor on his throne, for all his immersion in the machine, the power of initiative for good or for evil yet resides with him. Cleansing his soul of evil, he could say to himself and so saying determine: "This colossal thing, this war of fifteen nations, must work itself out; it must be a war to the finish. Fate wills it. But let me try and rob it of some of its horrors and a moiety of its grossness. If we win, let the world say we won because we were strong and brave, not because we were brutally efficient. If we lose, let the world say we fought well, and in the end, for all our sins at the beginning, not dishonorably."

Kaiser Created Hate

To the Kaiser alone it is due that so much hate has been imported into the war that the enemies of Germany loathe her with an intensity of loathing that must be appalling to any thinking German. For the Turk, in spite of Armenia, no such hatred is discovered. Indeed, the allies are never tired of paying tribute to the good qualities of the Turk as a foe. Had the war been humanized, statesmanship might have had an easier task at the end of the conflict.

There are some good-hearted people in England as elsewhere who talk lightly of the possibility of peace and the chance of a compromise. To them I, a stranger in their midst, say: How can there be peace until the war has reached a decision, when already four million men lie dead in the rough graves by the battlefield and naother million men wearily drag on their days as hopeless cripples until death shall bring them merciful release? Dare Europe sully the memory of its millions of slain and its hundreds of thousands of cripples by making peace before the issue has been finally resolved?"

PETS AT SALONICA ARE VERY ANNOYING

The Land of Little Animals and Certain Insects—Tortoise Prime Favorite

A supernumerary writes: Most of them, of course, are not animals at all in the exact of dictionary sense of the word. Some of them are insects, some of them are reptiles, and I suppose a scientist would find fifty other classifications for them. There is no need to say much about the flies. Those faithful little friends of the army accompany us all over the world, and they are much alike everywhere. Yet it may be noted that the fly of Salonica is more affectionate than the fly of England or even of Egypt. It settles on your face and holds tight, and occasionally it eats pieces of you, in a kind of passion for indissoluble union. But it has little originality, and its methods are monotonous.

It is not like the praying mantis, for instance. One of those devout insects came to dinner with us on my first evening in the land, and went round the table for all the world like a tract distributor. Finally it climbed a beer bottle and stood there with arms upraised and addressed the multitude till the owner of the beer took charge of the situation.

Rather Large Spiders

The beetles are not so objectionable, but, having impetuous natures, they are apt to butt violently into one's face as they roar through the air on their twilight errands—and a collision with a half-ounce bettle travelling at full speed is no joke. It is, however, preferable to the sensation which is produced when a spider measuring an inch and a half across crawls thoughtfully over your face.

But these are small fry. The real pet of the army in Salonica is the tortoise. If you have only known the tortoise as the lazy hermit of an English garden you cannot begin to imagine his alert gaiety here in his home. It takes a little while to get used to the sight of a tortoise galloping round the camp with leathery neck outstretched. It seems almost indecent that such a creature should move at such a pace. Also it is perplexing when what you had taken for a clod of earth begins to walk away from you in a hurry, and there is a tendency to heave lumps of marble after it.

Greedy For Souvenirs

As a matter of fact, the tortoise did not have a very happy time in the early days of the occupation. It was not only that the average human being usually tries to kill things that he does not understand; there was another trouble which was entirely due to the enterprise of those manufacturers who fashion things out of celluloid and label them "real tortoise shell." The army has a lust for souvenirs, and it is always trying to find things to send home. A considerable proportion of it made spirited attempts to carve the shell into combs for its lady's hair while the tortoise was still in possession.

That industry, of course, was speedily discovered and stopped, and today the tortoise has nothing to fear.

BUILDING A BOOK

There has been more than one instance in the history of literature of a book being written upside down—that is, its end becoming its beginning or its beginning becoming its end. Probably the most outstanding instance of the topsy turvydom is "The Idylls of the King," Tennyson's great masterpiece. As every poetry lover knows, this great series of poems ends with "The Passing of Arthur," and there can be no doubt that this is the proper and inevitable close of the wonderful pageant of the king's life. But Tennyson wrote that closing passage when he was a youth of twenty, and it was not until forty years later, the whole series was finished and published in one book that the old poem of his boyhood was found to fit into its place as naturally as the broken arm or foot of a classical statue fits the place from which it has been removed. Thus the first became last. A case of double change is presented by the novel "David Harum." The first part of that book to be written by the author constitutes now chapters 19 to 24, that is almost the last chapters in the book. Then, when the author had practically finished his book, he found that two of his main characters were not introduced to the reader at all until he was halfway through the work. He therefore wrote last of all the two opening chapters for the express purpose of introducing these two essential personages to the reader. This is probably a record case of topsy turvy authorship.

CANADA'S FOOD QUESTION

Cause of Shortage is Underproduction of Food

T. L. Church of Toronto, in discussing the question of food consumption, says: "This is a matter in which each individual must judge for himself. I agree with Sir Thomas White that every endeavor should be made to get the people, as a nation, to economise, but that the manner in which they economize should be left to them. People know what they ought to do in this matter without its being pointed out to them.

"It is under-production which is one of the main causes of the food difficulty in this country. We in Canada are the slowest people in the world. You hear some Canadians talk of the English being slow, but look at what is being done in England to-day—conscription, cultivation to the limit, and industrial and agricultural co-operation all in force. While Canada talks, England acts. The producer and the consumer want bringing together. Co-operative methods as employed by the Lloyd-George Government are the best remedy for under-production.

"The power of the State ought to be utilized in all directions to reduce the economic dislocation resultant from the war. The trusts and combines in this country have nobody to regulate them. There ought to be fixed prices in the large centres as part of a big scheme. With all the Parliaments we have not been able to cope with the situation.

Clever Office Boy

The death of Mr. Henry Leslie, who rose from office boy to manager of one of London's best known newspapers, recalled a remarkable story connected with the Franco-Prussian War. One evening Leslie, then office boy to the editor of the "Pall Mall Gazette," was alone in the building when Mr. Holt White, the correspondent of the paper with the German forces, arrived post-haste from the German "G.H.Q." with news of the fall of Sedan. With enterprise that, in an office boy, was remarkable, he kept the printing staff together, got them to work on the war correspondent's "copy," and rushed out editions that kept the presses at work all night. It was not until three days later that the Foreign Office received official information of the great defeat.

TORTURED RUSSIANS; SUPER-MEN AT WORK

Austrian Officers Testify to German Cruelties Upon Russians

Sworn evidence of the cruelties practised by German officers, soldiers, and prison guards upon Russian prisoners is contained in the report of the Russian Commission of Inquiry, issued in English with photographs. Torture by the drawing of nails, cutting of tongues, and tearing of ears has been inflicted upon Russians unwilling to betray their comrades. Men have been burned alive in revenge or for sheer amusement of their captors.

Ingenious at Times

In a camp at Dunaserdagelli, Austria-Hungary, Russians have been punished by being screwed up in a coffin. This has been sworn to by many prisoners, and by a Russian sister of mercy. Elsewhere men have been tied together, back to back, until one fainted and pulled the other to the ground. Some have been shot because they were too wak to work. Tied to a post, with toes barely touching the ground, and beaten with thongs, many have found death more merciful than their captors.

For two weeks, Private Paul Kreshchenko-Kravchenko relates a Georgian prisoner was compelled to live in a dog kennel in which he could neither sit nor lie down. Each time the guard was changed he was dragged out by a chain, struck, and driven back again. His crime was that he attempted to escape.

Austrian Evidence

The Commission states that Austrian officers have appeared before it and have sworn to some of the cruelties inflicted by their allies. Not far from Yaroslav, the inhabitants of a village told one such witness that the Germans drove half a dozen Russian prisoners into a cart shed and set fire to it. When the prisoners tried to get out through the opening they were thrust back by German bayonets. The witness personally saw the remains of this cart shed after the fire and several burned and blackened corpses were visible among the charred beams and ashes, including the burned body of a girl.

BECAUSE THERE'S A WAR

Sarcastic Reply of Soldier to Red-tape Weavers

An English clubman writes: Here is a little story, with a moral not hard to read, from one of our bases over the water. A certain commander thought out certain things which would be to the great advantage of the men under him, and, after perfecting his ideas, sent in indents for what he wanted. Weeks passed. Then things began to happen. There descended on him from various quarters papers of all sizes and shapes, all demanding why exactly he wanted the things he did, and what he wanted them for. He descended to the nearest town, bought the largest pencil he could find, and wrote across all the memos: "I want these things because there's a war on over here." Then he got them—a trifle late, certainly—but he got them.

The Mad Hapsburgs

The Austrian Emperor Charle's father, the late Archduke Otto, was the maddest offspring of the Hapsburg monarchy. He was leader of the "Idiotic Archdukes," as Count Benst, the Austrian statesman, called them in a famous phrase. He was wont to amuse himself in an odd way, such as keeping an ox without water for days, and then watching it die in agony when it had gorged itself with water. On one occasion he appeared on the stairs of a fashionable restaurant, where he was entertaining a party in a private room, in the somewhat inadequate costume, even for a mad Archduke, of a pair of gloves, a military cap, and a sword.

Baron Killed in Ranks

Baron Hubert Julius de Reuter, private in the Black Watch, killed in action at the age of thirty-eight, was the only son of the late Baron Herbert de Reuter, head of Reuter's News Agency. At Beaumont Hamel his platoon of 20 captured 97 Germans and a little later he fell dead under machine gun fire while carrying wounded men into shelter.

TOOK 102 PRISONERS

"Todger" Jones of Cheshires Conducted His Own Campaign

Sergeant Tugg, of the R.A.M.C., who witnessed Private T. Jones, of Runcorn, win his Victoria Cross, described the amazing manner in which the Cheshire soldier took a hundred German prisoners. Here is his story: "We took a village and started to dig ourselves in. Soon bullets began to fly all round. Jones turned to his officer and said, 'Let us get at them or there will be trouble.' The officer declined to sanction a charge. The shower of bullets continued, and the man next to Jones was hit. This [illegible] annoy the man who was destined to win the V.C., who remarked to the officer: 'If I'm to be killed I'll be killed fighting, not digging.' He grabbed his rifle and walked over to the German trenches alone.

"Everyone expected him to go down instantly, and we learned later that one bullet had gone through his helmet and three through his tunic. We gave him up when he entered the German trench, but eight minutes later others of his comrades went across to the German trenches. When they got across they saw a sight they'll never forget. There was Todger Jones standing by a hundred of the enemy in a big hollow. He was threatening them with bombs, and they all had their hands up. Jones told them to put on their coats, and his pals helped to round them up. They included an officer of the German Staff.

"From the prisoners we learned that he had bombarded the door of the dug-out, killing the first three who showed themselves. Then he ordered them to come out one by one with hands up, threatening instant death for disobedience. One by one they came out and lined up until 102 stood before the bomb-thrower in the attitude of surrender."

LUNAR FREAKS ARE WITNESSED SATURDAY EVE

A particularly fine lunar halo was to be seen Saturday evening and was viewed by hundreds. The circle, which was 45 degrees in diameter, had well-defined Paraselenae, or mock moons, on the eastern and western limbs and fainter ones at the top and bottom. From the moon as a centre bright rays shot out to these mock moons. It required no stretch of the imagination to distinguish a cross, as at times it was plainly discernible, and was especially appropriate on the eve of Easter day.

Scientists say that halos are caused by the refraction of light on ice crystals floating in the upper atmosphere. They are altogether different from the ordinary circles around the sun and moon, which are usually to be seen on the approach of a storm. These latter circles vary in size, but the halos proper are invariably of 45 or 92 degrees diameter.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

NO MORE LOOSE GLASSES

When your eye glasses are set in a pair of Dr. Fowler's screwless mounts, the old trouble of screws coming loose is done away with, and the danger of a lens falling out and breaking is avoided. In the screwless mount the lens is both locked and cemented firmly in place, and makes a strong satisfactory job that gives permanent satisfaction. Ask Dr. Fowler to show them.

HIGHER PRICES WILL PREVAIL

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appears in the Canadian Grocer:—

The opinion is quite generally held among wholesalers and others closely in touch with the grocery trade that the entry of the United States into the war will mean higher prices in many lines of commodities. Purchase of large stocks of supplies by the United States Government for the use of her troops would have the effect of sending prices in an upward direction. Beans and dried fruits of all kinds will be in big demand for the use of troops. Flour and cereals of all kinds, together with sugar, are commodities that adapt themselves to rations for an army and the consumption is expected to be heavier in these.

Weather Forecast.

"I do not think," says Edmund Yates in his book, "Recollections and Experiences," "I ever met a man more hopelessly deaf than Charles Kemble at seventy. Some of us were sitting one afternoon at the Garrick club when a tremendous thunderstorm broke.

"It raged with extraordinary fury, one clap exploding with terrific noise immediately above us like a volley of artillery.

"We looked around at each other almost in horror, when Charles Kemble, who was calmly reading, lifted his eyes from his book and said in his trumpet tone, 'I think we are going to have some thunder; I feel it in my knees.'"

A Chest For Her Dowry.

Nowadays the bride to be realizes the necessity of a suitable receptacle in which to lay her dowry of linen and lingerie. Of late she has turned somewhat to the conveniences of a wardrobe with half its interior fitted with drawers, but on the whole she leans to the custom of her grandmothers and great-great-grandmothers for centuries back and selects a chest which, according to its design, may afterward either be converted to storeroom uses or put into the hall or bedroom as a useful as well as an ornamental piece of furniture.

A visit to a museum will afford a glimpse of some of the most beautiful specimens of early dower chests upon which the mediaeval wood carvers expended their art, often supplemented by the insertion of rare paintings done by famous artists.

SPRING HATS.

Tips About the New Millinery That's Visible.

One of the best looking panamas in a notably good collection of sports hats was a rather small model whose rolling brim was edged by buttonholing in black and lemon yellow silks. Long stitches in the same colors formed a narrow line around the crown, and a flower made of white silk braid and black and yellow silks was applied flatly to the crown at the left front. The citron yellow was too pale to give the hat a striking air, but relieved the sharp contrast of white and black.

Much yellow in all the popular tones—citron, canary, gold, mustard, etc.—is in the sports hat showing and is featured both in straws and in fabrics. Crowns of felt and cloth are associated with straw brims, crown tops of fabric are set into crowns of straw and the brims may be all of the straw or partly of straw and partly of fabric.

The mossy rough straws of last summer combine very effectively with plain fabrics for sports hat purposes, and very fine, supple straw braids are used in two or even more colors, the colors alternating throughout the whole hat and giving the effect of narrow stripes running round the hat. A little collapsible hat of this sort in smart coloring with a brim facing of plain silk and a cockade trimming of similar plain silk would be a comfortable and practical possession.

Along with the various forms of high satin turbans come lower turbans innumerable in satin or faille or other silk or in silk and straw combined. Black, the dark browns and the deep blues are, as usual, much in evidence in these small street hats, and there are a good many purples and grays.

Purple and a medium old blue are much combined, and a clever little turban with the narrowest of cloche brims and the highest of crowns is all of purple satin, with its trimming a narrow band of old blue beads running around the high crown near its top and three tassels of old blue beads dangling from this band in front.

A small sailor shape with rather narrow sharply rolled brim is offered in satin and, though trying, is a jaunty and youthful model.

Wide brimmed floppy picture hats of finest crin are among the things offered for southern wear, and many of them seem to be of the turned up back and drooping front lines. One of these models was of the palest sulphur yellow tone with a wreath of camellia-like roses shading exquisitely from the yellow of the hat down through deeper yellows into a fruity reddish pink and a ribbon of turquoise blue. Pure French this coloring and entirely successful.

Tulle hats and hats of tulle combined with straw or crin are always in the southern season showing, and there are quantities of such models in black, with trimming entirely of tulle or great bows of tulle bound narrowly in satin or feather trimmings, such as have been used on the winter's large dress hats—paradise, gourah, imitation egrets and all the other delicate plumage.

Not Paid For.

"There goes Shagley. He must be in debt again."

"Why, he looks quite prosperous. That suit of his seems bran new"—

"Yes, that's why I say he must be in debt."—Catholic Standard and Times.

FOR BETWEEN SEASONS.

Shed Your Velvet Hat and Don One of Satin.

Already spring hats are much in evidence. They mostly appear as black, brown and purple satins on stiff, tall shapes, and wreaths of gayly colored berries, fruits and nuts sit around the narrow brims. This one is of white satin, however.

RUSHING THE SEASON.

Sweaters For the South.

Sweaters that go over the head and are cut in two straight pieces caught at the wrist, without collar or sleeves, are exploited for the season in the south. These sweaters are of gaudy, rough surfaced woolens. They are primitive in outline and material. It is suggested that the American Navajo blanket be used for these sweaters, and if it is done it will create a colorful sensation.

Is It Possible?

"Where's the bird dog you used to have?"

"Oh, the milliner down the street complained that he kept her customers away by obstructing the sidewalk."

"Obstructing the sidewalk?"

"Yes. You see, he spent all his time down there pointing the birds in the window."—Everybody's Magazine.

The Other Way Around.

"Yes, sir," says the enthusiastic man, "down my way we raise strawberries so big that three of them will fill a quart box."

"That may be," replied the other man, "but where I live they have quart boxes so small they will barely hold three berries."—Chicago Post.

HERE'S A NEW MODEL.

The Kind of Garment That Answers a Daily Need.

Fashioned of white voile, embroidered in a touch of color, cut with shoulder tucks and a double collar that also forms a vestee effect, this blouse is also modish with a bow of moire ribbon run through the front to match the skirt, which in this case is maroon serge.

FOR SERVICE.

About Home Lighting.

High intrinsic brilliance of lighting is not necessarily good lighting. We must aim to get away from the staring, high placed fixture, the bulb that makes a blur of light in one particular spot only. What we need in the home is not light, but lighting, two very different things.

Another point is that we should try to have our fixtures bear some relation to the harmony of the room and the furniture. Light has aesthetic qualities, but we seldom are led to believe so except on the stage. Light effect on the stage can be imitated in idea in the home. Even the most sumptuous room will be ruined by a poorly placed, incongruous lighting fixture. Lighting must, first, be comfortable to the eye. It must, second, enhance the objects and furnishings of the room and not mar them. We can learn a great deal from the lighting experts whether they be purveyors of gas or or electricity.

Chemically Self-Extinguishing

What Do These Words Mean to You?

They mean greater safety in the Home. Surely something that interests you keenly!

Perhaps you have noticed these words and the notation, "No fire left when blown out," on our new "Silent Parlor" match boxes. The splints or sticks of all matches contained in these boxes have been impregnated or soaked in a chemical solution which renders them dead wood once they have been lighted and blown out, and the danger of FIRE from glowing matches is hereby reduced to the greatest minimum.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Eczema of the Head.

An excellent remedy for eczema of the head is to shampoo first; then take 5 cents' worth of roll sulphur and dissolve it in a pint of warm water and rub into the hair. When dry, shake or brush out, and then rub into scalp olive oil, after which saturate the scalp with witch hazel. In many cases, it is said, this treatment effects a complete cure.

DIDN'T ACCUSE HIM.

The Witness Quickly Set the Lawyer's Mind at Ease.

In a certain homicide case the witness was relating a conversation he had with the defendant, in which the latter admitted having shot the deceased and stated the circumstances under which he had done so. The counsel for the defendant on cross examination was endeavoring to show that the alleged admission was simply a relation by the defendant of what somebody else had told him concerning the shooting and not a narrative of anything he had done himself.

"Did he," said the lawyer, "in telling of the shooting narrate the facts in the first person or in the third person?"

"There wasn't any third person there," replied the witness. "The defendant and I were the only persons in the wagon."

"I mean," said the attorney, "what form of expression did he use in speaking of the shooting? Did he say, 'he did it' or did he say, 'I did it?'"

"He said he did it himself," was the answer. "He never said you done it. He never mentioned your name. Nobody who knows you would ever charge you with shooting anything bigger than a jack rabbit!"—Case and Comment.

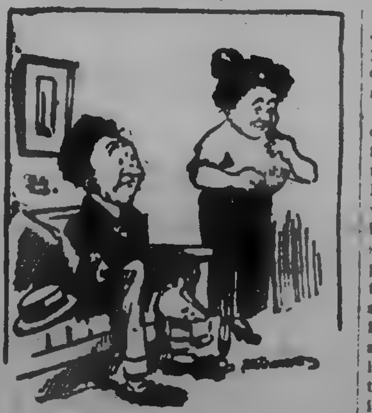
Poked In the Ribs.

Old Flubdub loves to chaff.
His gay and gleeful nibs,
To show you where to laugh,
Will poke you in the ribs.

I do not like a man
To dislocate my joints.
I much prefer the plan
Of picking my own points.

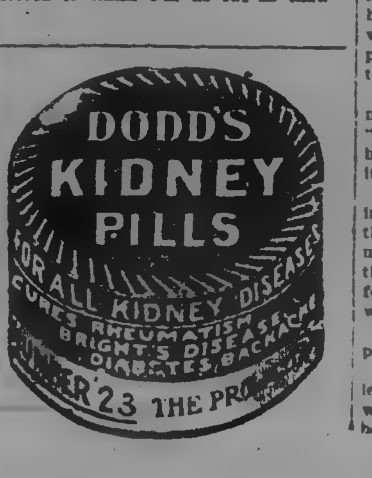
So when you have a joke
That seems to you worth while
Please spare my ribs; don't poke.
I may know when to smile.

Resenting the Implication.



Mr. Spoonmore—Ah, dear, you're worth your weight in gold.

Miss Plumpleigh—You're perfectly horrid to think I'm as fat as that.



THE SHADOW OF GOOD LUCK.

An Overdose of Philosophy Sometimes Makes a Coward of a Man.

It was midnight. The sunshine philosopher was seated in his study writing a few notes for his lecture on "How to Be Happy Though Miserable" when the resounding clang of his front door bell went echoing through the house.

"Humph!" he muttered. "Who on earth can this be at such an hour and on such a night, I wonder? Who's there?" he halloed through the keyhole.

"Your Brother Jim. Hurry up!"

"Why, Jim," cried the philosopher, opening the door, "what on earth are you doing out such a night as this? Come in; come in."

In a moment the two were sitting before the crackling log fire in the philosopher's library.

"I've come over to get a little advice, Bill," said the visitor. "I am in all sorts of trouble."

"Oh, nonsense, Jim!" said the other. "There needn't be any trouble for anybody in this world. What if it is dark here? The sun is shining in the east"—

"Now, hold on a minute, Bill," said the visitor. "I don't give a rap for the state of the weather out in Honolulu; I'm here and I'm worried to death. First place, I have a note coming due for $500 tomorrow morning, and I haven't $7 left in the bank. Second place, Snipperton, the tailor, has served a writ on me for my bill that has been running since 1905, and if I don't pay I've got to go to court on supplementary proceedings and explain why. Third, I got notice from headquarters this morning that after the first of next month"—

"There's no use of your going on, Jim," said the sunshine philosopher. "You might keep on giving me a list of your troubles from now until the crack of doom, but it wouldn't alter the situation one atom. The principle upon which I live is simply that trouble can't exist while the world is full of sunshine. If it doesn't happen to be visible it doesn't make the least difference. It is there, genial, sweet, invigorating, just the same. That marvelous orb from time immemorial has been pouring out its great stores of mellow light upon this earth incessantly, unremittingly. Not once has it taken a day off from the beginning of recorded time."

"Yes," said Jim, "and there have been clouds, too, since"—

"They prove my point," said the philosopher. "You don't mean to say for an instant, do you, that because there happens to be a sky full of clouds therefore the sun in all its glowing majesty has ceased shining? Really, Jim, you know better than that, and you know you know better. The clouds pass away. No day is so dark and gloomy and dismal that sooner or later the sun does not pierce the clouds, dissipating them into thin filmy veils of footless mist. Get your mind in tune with this idea, my boy. Does the night envelop you? Somewhere the sun is shining. Are the heavens black with clouds? Beyond soars the orb of day. Let this be your philosophy, my boy, and all these afflictions of which you speak will pass away, or even if their onward passage is slow you can at least comfort yourself with the thought that calm follows in the wake of the storm and that on the trail of trouble there will inevitably follow the fructifying rays of"—

"Do you mean to tell me, Bill Wimpleton," cried the visitor, "that there is sunshine enough in this world to handle such a case as mine—mine, who must meet that note, who must pacify Snipperton and whose job at the"—

"All of that I mean to tell you and more, Jim," said the philosopher. "There's enough to cover your troubles raised to the nth power of infinity"—

"All right, Bill," said the visitor, rising and putting on his hat. "If that's the case I'll go home and rest my mind. It's after midnight, and I judge that bed is the place for me. But before I go do me just one little favor, will you?"

"Anything I can do, Jim," said the philosopher kindly.

"Go upstairs and ask your wife to lend me her parasol to go home with, will you?" he asked. "I don't want to be sunstruck on my way back."

Canada North a Land of Promise

It is in the consciousness of every intelligent Canadian that the peace which is inevitable, and may even now be on the way, will mean for the Dominion expansion and growth in the next generation far beyond anything this country has known. This, in view of the opening to the plowshare and to civilization of the prairie provinces, is saying a great deal, but when Charles Camsell, of the Geological Survey of Canada, tells us that there are, in Western Canada, areas aggregating 642,000 square miles that must still be considered as unexplored, and in Northern Quebec about 250,000 square miles more, making an aggregate of 892,000 square miles, it will be seen that the opportunities for development, in the light of experience, and with modern tools, can hardly be exaggerated.

East of Reindeer Lake and Kassan River, in Manitoba and North-West Territory, this authority tells us, there are 73,000 miles of unexplored country, or a division of the continent larger than the sum of the areas of New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, and Massachusetts. To some people the term "unexplored" is synonymous with "uninhabitable." Many in Canada used so to regard the areas now included in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta a few years ago. But the statement that territory is unexplored carries with it, to people informed on the subject of settlement, the inference that, assuming ripeness for the times, everything is possible for the prospector and the immigrant within its borders.

On the peninsula between Ungava and Hudson Bay there is an area of 75,000 miles that no man can talk about with authority, and this is only one of several areas around the great inland sea toward which a railroad was building when the war broke out. In ignorance of what these stretches have to offer, many are saying now, as in the past they have said of other unexplored lands, that there is nothing in them to invite adventure, enterprise, or industry. They do not know. Regardless of pessimistic beliefs, energy, and capital united, previous to August, 1914, in a determined effort to open up the Hudson Bay country, and the work was only temporarily interrupted when Belgium was invaded.

Every argument that is used to chill expectation with regard to the Hudson Bay country was employed to turn the early westbound immigrant, south of the line, a generation or so ago, away from Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana, Wyoming, Oregon, and Washington. These territories, it was held with pertinacity and confidence, would "of course" never become habitable, "at least, not to any extent." Later the same discouraging future was outlined for Western Canada, east of the Rockies. Yet people who have made a surface investigation of the Hudson Bay region say that there is no more reason why populations should not exist, and thrive, and prosper within it than that populations should not exist in Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Holland, Finland, and Northern Russia.

A touch of civilization goes a long way toward "warming up" a new country, toward driving from it the atmosphere of the wilderness. The law of probabilities would render it entirely reasonable to assume that the land in Northern Canada, now hidden from the eye of man, contains everything necessary to the maintenance of those who shall delve in it.

When the war is over, the railway that was to be built, at a cost of $16,000,000, in order that Western Canada's great cereal surplus might be carried to Liverpool at a saving of 1000 miles, will be completed. Of this there appears to be no doubt and with communication once established, thorough exploration will follow as a matter of course. Until it is found that, in the vast territory for which Hudson Bay offers an ocean outlet, there is no fertile soil and no mineral wealth, or, in other words, until it is found that Canada North is less favored naturally than any other part of the globe, it would be well enough to reserve judgment. The prospects are that the zone of activity on the North American Continent will move upward a degree or two in the next few years.

Fire Protection Protects.

Canada lost through forest fires in 1916 over nine million dollars, according to information supplied by Robson Black, secretary of the Canadian Forestry Association. This equals more than six times what has been spent on forest protection work from coast to coast. In areas where first-rate fire protection systems are in operation losses of life and property have been held down to a remarkable minimum. Within the 24,000 square miles of Quebec covered by the two well-organized associations of limit holders the amount of green timber burnt was practically negligible.

Early Days Recalled.

Senator W. C. Edwards has erected a real old-fashioned lumberjack's shanty right beside the Ottawa River near his big mills. This is the second one of its kind he has built, the first one having stood in Rockliffe Park for fourteen years. This new one is an exact replica of those that dotted the Ottawa Valley years ago, logs morticed and plugged with mud, the huge fire or "camphose" in the centre, with the opening in the roof for the surplus heat and smoke to pass out, the bunks, the wooden crane tipped with iron over the fire, the wooden latch on the door, all complete—a reminder of the early days.

Feathered Sentries.

A sailor recently stated that seagulls are very useful for betraying the whereabouts of a submarine. When the birds discern a periscope they rise in a flock from the water's surface, and circle round it uttering shrill cries. This performance attracts the attention of the crews of approaching vessels, and ofttimes results in the submarine being discovered.

While seagulls are unconsciously aiding sailors, parrots are carrying out equally useful work for soldiers. It had been discovered that parrots have an extraordinary faculty for anticipating the approach of aircraft. Before an aeroplane has come within range of the human eye, the feathered alarum becomes violently agitated and shrieks incessantly. In France wild birds often provide artillery observers with clues as to the whereabouts of hidden batteries. Birds rise in flocks from trees in the vicinity of which guns are being fired, and when there is a lull in the activities of the concealed artillery many of them return to their former perches. A trained observer can quickly tell, from the erratic movements of flocks of birds, the approximate locality of gun batteries hidden from his view.—Tit-Bits.

Barnardo Boys in Army.

G. Bogue Smart, inspector of British immigration to Canada, writing to the honorary director of Barnardo's Homes, says: "The conduct of your boys in Canada in this national crisis is wonderful. Just consider these young fellows, at one time almost forgotten, coming forward voluntarily, leaving comfortable homes and good and profitable situations, to the number of over four thousand, to answer the call of King and country!"

THE FAIR CRITIC

Homes Are Built to Please the Architect, Not the Housewife.

WHAT ONE WOMAN THINKS.

Sinks Hung Too Low, Coal Bins Near the Laundry Tubs Instead of the Furnace and Doors That Open the Wrong Way Are Breaking Up Homes.

Criticising the architect's plan of most modern houses, one woman says:

"The stove is in a corner—lovely situation!—and right beside the window, so that one either goes without air or has the gas blow out every other minute.

"The sink, which is about six inches too low, is also in a corner, with only one draining board, so that after wiping a dish one has to turn completely around to place it on a table behind. Also, if one wants a combination spigot one pays to have it put in, because I have yet to see a sink that was fitted.

"Why are we afflicted with the beautiful green tiled spaces in the wall under the mantelpieces? I do not care for mantlepieces anyway, and I certainly do not admire the sheet of metal in bronze effect that is supposed to conceal the fireplace that isn't there.

"Why are the washtubs within six feet of the furnace, so that every time one shakes the furnace or puts on a spoonful of coal the clothes are dusted? In this connection why is there no allowance for a coal bin somewhere near the furnace? My bin is at the other end of the cellar, and although I may start from the bin with a shovel of coal I arrive at the furnace with three lumps.

"My gas hot water heater is in the cellar to be near the laundry tubs instead of the kitchen, although I wash dishes three times a day and clothes only once a week.

"I have lovely glass chandeliers for electric lights, but there is no provision for gas in the dining room, living room and front hall, so that when the electricity fails I retire to the kitchen.

"The light in my pantry is so high that I have to climb on a chair to light it. I do not recommend climbing with a baby in one arm.

"Fortunately I have no thresholds downstairs, but upstairs these relics still interrupt me every time I try to make a 'clean sweep.'

"A spigot is placed at the water entrance to the house to enable one to cut off the water, but there is no way to cut it off only upstairs. So that when one has anything fixed upstairs in the bathroom the cook in the kitchen and the laundress in the cellar are left without a drop of water. It should be only a matter of a couple of stopcocks.

"Doors that open the wrong way are ever present. Hospitals have round corners—why not houses? Why is the best place in the room always selected for the radiator?

"My stairs are so situated that one climbs over the hall radiator to get there, and the possibility of a hall rack is absolutely ignored—mine is in the dining room—also they are beautifully wainscoted part of the way down, so that the baby has no banister to hold to for several feet and usually falls that distance.

"It is one reason why so many women after giving up in despair trying to keep domestics in houses go to housekeeping in apartments and then, finding the last state worse than the first, give up wrestling with the domestic labor problem altogether and go to living in hotels. Saving in house planning involves the very saving of the home itself."

SOLDIERS THANKS FOR SOCKS

From a soldier somewhere in France the president of the Kitchener League has received the following letter:

Dear Mrs. Knox:

I am writing these few lines to thank you and the ladies of the Canadian Kitchener League for your kindness in sending me the socks, which I received three or four days ago. As we were in the trenches at the time, I was unable to answer and let you know I received them. I am sure that nearly every woman in Peterborough would be a member of your league if they but knew the great good you are doing the boys out here in France. I am very glad that mother has joined your League. I will close, thanking you once again for your kindness.

A SUCCESSFUL YEAR AT ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

THE CONGREGATION GAVE SPECIAL EASTER COLLECTION OF $698.55

All Saints' congregation has just concluded the best financial year in the history of the new church, and yesterday the rector and wardens asked for $661.50 for three items. The congregation contributed in all $698.55.

At the evening service Rev. R. B. Grobb announced that $150 was required to meet the full amount asked for, and later when the collections were totalled they were found to be $150.05.

The year, which closed on March 15th, was one of the best in the history of the parish. Current revenue from envelopes and loose collections exceeded that of the previous year by $451.14, which met all current expenses and wiped out the current floating debts of 1915.

Through a large amount raised by the Women's Guild and a special contribution from the estate of the late Benjamin Cooney, the building account has been reduced very considerably.

Bishop Reeve of Toronto will preach next Sunday morning and conduct Confirmation at the evening service.

GREATEST SPECTACLE

ground, some of which have been held by Germans for two years, and was lavishly hemmed with wide belts of some of the toughest and longest pronged barbed wire which has been seen in the war.

The preliminary bombardment of the ridges attacked, delivered before dawn, proved to be one of the greatest spectacles of the war. The firing at times exceeded that which marked some of the sturdiest battles of the Somme. The night was illuminated for hours by continuous flash of the guns as the attack was carried out in its several phases. The first lines had scarcely entered when numbers of German prisoners began to come back. Today's attack also hit the northern hinge of the recent German retreat from Arras to the Aisne.

The Germans evidently had expected a renewal of the offensive in the Somme valley, for in making their retreat in that sector they announced they had completely disarranged British offensive plans. Today's blow was Britain's answer.

The departing soldiers gave rousing cheers for Lt.-Col. Ackerman and Lieut. Brittain before they left the Armouries.

KING PRAISES CANADA'S TROOPS

MAYOR DUFFUS MADE PRESIDENT OF GREATER PETERBOROUGH ASSOCIATION AT ENTHUSIASTIC MASS MEETING

Constitution Adopted and Officers Chosen---Addresses by Leading Citizens Optimistic in Tone---No City Has More Promising Future.

The Greater Peterboro Association was formed at last night's meeting in the Grand Opera House, and judging from the representation of the citizens, the success anticipated by Mayor Duffus and his advisors is assured. The constitution as prepared by the special committee, consisting of Mayor Duffus, Messrs. T. F. Matthews, W. H. Denham, Roland Denne, R. N. Turner, J. J. Hartley, and Jos. Begley was adopted, and the officers elected, our worthy and energetic Mayor be[illegible] elected to fill th office of president for the balance of the year.

The Musical Program.

When Mayor Duffus called the meeting to order, seated with him on the platform were Rev. Father Phelan, Rev. J. R. Webb, J. J. Hartley, S. R. Armstrong, and W. H. Bradburn. A short musical program entertained the audience, and it was thoroughly enjoyed. Mr. Walter Evans gave a vocal selection, Miss Sanderson a piano solo, Mrs. Renwick a special vocal selection, and Miss Mignon Telegmann on the violin won rounds of applause. Mr. J. H. Renwick kindly filled the duties of accompanist.

To Messrs. J. J. Turner and Sons, Ltd., who generously gave the use of the Opera House for the occasion, is due a great deal of the credit for the success of the meeting, and very hearty votes of thanks were tendered them, the entertainers and the Opera House orchestra for the part they took in the organization meeting of the Greater Peterboro Association.

Mayor Duffus.

Mayor Duffus was pleased at the way the people had taken hold of the Greater Peterboro movement. His municipal experience had shown that such an organization would fill a long felt want, and by the united efforts of the citizens the welfare of the city was bound to be advanced. The Chief Magistrate pointed out some of the many difficulties that confronted a city council, and he felt sure that the assistance the Association could and would give the administration, would take a lot of worry from the Council shoulders. A general outline of the city's financial condition was given, and how the industrial development of the city could be assisted by co-operation. The Mayor appealed to the ladies to take an active part in the work of the Association, and he felt sure that as they had proved their worth since the opening of the great war, they would be glad to help in the Greater Peterboro movement, and make it an accomplished fact.

Commercial travellers, of whom there are about 200 working out of Peterboro, could do much to keep our city before the public. Conventions and excursions help, and the necessity for a larger exhibition was dwelt on. The completion of the Trent canal, the extension of the street railway lines to Lakefield and other places, with the natural advantages the city enjoyed should be always in the minds of city advertisers.

Mayor Duffus, in concluding, hoped that the greatest success would attend the work of the Association, and pointed out that on July 1st the 50th anniversary of Confederation would be celebrated, and that three years hence the 100th anniversary of the birth of Peterboro would be honored.

The Constitution.

Mr. S. R. Armstrong read the constitution as prepared by the special

TONIGHT'S TEMPERANCE MEETING

An interesting feature of the public temperance meeting to be held this evening in the Public Library hall will be the exhibition of moving pictures. The views were prepared for use at the recent big temperance congress held in Toronto, but were not completed in time. They will be shown tonight. In addition to many slides showing the rapid growth of the temperance movement and the increase in temperance sentiment, there will be a number of views of a patriotic nature, including Canadian soldiers at the front. Quite a few of these views were secured through Government auspices and are unusually fine.

The object of the meeting is to discuss the advisability of enacting national prohibition or submitting the question to the popular vote. In addition to Messrs. J. H Burnham, M P., G. A. Gillespie, M. L. A., Mayor Duffus, a representative of the W. C. T. U., and the Ministerial Association, addresses will be given by Miles Vokes, chairman of the National Prohibition Committee and by a secretary of the Dominion Alliance, Toronto.

PLANT BLOWN UP SCORES ARE KILLED

Over Two Hundred Injured in Terrific Explosion.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

CHESTER, Penn., April 10. — from fifty to one hundred and fifty persons are reported killed and about two hundred injured in an explosion in the Aetna plant of the munition works at Eddystone near here. A fire which followed was confined to the shrapnel building.

CHESTER, April 10.—The first explosion originated in the store known as the 10 F. Building of the Edison Munition Corporation at Eddystone. Immediately there was another explosion in the old F. building adjoining. These two structures were destroyed. About four hundred persons, mostly women and girls, worked in these buildings. At one o'clock, firemen, policemen, and others were still dragging bodies from the wreckage. Shells were found scattered about the scene for a space of two blocks.

Morgue Filled With Dead

Greatest confusion prevails and nobody is allowed approach the plant in which the explosion occurred. The trolley line to Eddystone is not running because its wires were destroyed. Latest reports make the loss of life very heavy between 75 and 150 being the last figures given. The Chester morgue is filled with bodies, and they are piled upon the sidewalk outside the building.

CANADIAN TROOPS BRING NEW GLORY TO THEIR NATIVE LAND

They Hold Most Difficult Place in the Line and Capture the Important Village of Vimy Ridge.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 10. — The British offensive between Lens and St. Quentin, with which the spring operations have been opened and which is still in progress, has proved even more successful than earlier accounts indicated. Sir Douglas Haig today reports yesterday's captures exceeded nine thousand men and forty guns.

NEW HONORS FOR CANADIANS.

The Canadians, who had one of the hardest bits of front to contend with, are now in complete occupation of the famous village of Vimy Ridge. Even the eastern slopes have been cleared of the Germans by Canadians, who have repulsed German counter-attacks. These reactions by the Germans indicate the importance they attach to this position, whence the conquerers look down over the plain of Douai. With Vimy Ridge gone, the whole German line covering the French towns and the industrial districts to the north becomes a wavering one, and any leisurely retreat the Germans may have planned is made uncertain and precarious.

FIGHTING CONTINUED ALL NIGHT.

LONDON, April 10. — A correspondent at the front reports that fighting continued keenly throughout last night with the British offensive gradually extending northward, there being fighting this morning in the direction of La Bassee. Although forty guns captured is the official count so far, the number is expected to reach three figures, besides much other booty. The Germans destroyed a large quantity of supplies at the last moment to prevent their capture.

FIGHTING ALONG ENTIRE FRONT.

LONDON, April 10.—It is officially reported that he British captured over nine thousand prisoners and more than forty guns in yesterday's operations.

Heavy fighting took place last night on the northern end of Vimy Ridge, from which the Germans were driven. The eastern slope was also cleared. Near St. Quentin the Germans have been driven from the high ground between Laverguier and Hargicourt. Fighting continues along the entire battle front.

The British have seized the village of Fampoux, and the neighboring defences north and south of Scorpe River. Germans made a strong attack on a narrow front southeast of Ypres and reached the British support lines. They were driven from the British trenches by a counter-attack.

With the capture of the famous ridge the British made a considerable stride along the road to Douai, while the capture of the high ground northwest of St. Quentin tightens the chain which the Anglo-French forces are drawing around that town.

A German diversion southwest of Ypres, according to Gen. Haig's report, met with no success.

FRENCH TRIUMPHANT AS BRITISH

PARIS, April 10. — A further advance was made south of the Oise by the French last night, the war office announces. The statement says: "North of the Oise the enemy's artillery showed less activity than on preceding days. Patrol encounters and rifle firing in the first lines occurred south of the Oise. We made progress east of the lower forest of Courcy. Artillery fighting was rather heavy in the region northeast of Soissons, and especially severe in the sector of LaFaux. Southeast of Rheims we repulsed a surprise attack against one of our trenches north of Sillery. Fighting with grenades occurred in the Champagne west of Maisons-de-Champagne."

BERLIN ADMITS REVERSES.

BERLIN, April 10. — Regarding the heavy fighting on the Western front, today's army headquarters statement reports:

"The battle near Arras continues." "In stubbornly resisting the superiority of the enemy," adds the statement, "two of our divisions suffered considerable losses. The British succeeded in penetrating our positions on roads radiating from Arras, but did not break through."

BRAZIL BREAKS WITH GERMANY.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 10. — Diplomatic relations between Brazil and Germany have been broken off, according to the Evening News.

THE SLAUGHTER OF THE SUBS.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, April 10. — The Times this morning says persons returned from Europe state on the authority of naval and high military officials that in the month following the declaration by Germany of unrestricted submarine warfare the British sunk thirty-two submarines, and that since that the average has been seven to fifteen per week, with the number running as high as twenty-three in one week.

AMERICAN LINER STRIKES MINE.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WASHINGTON, April 10. — The American liner New York struck a mine at 7:40 last night five miles south of the Liverpool bar. No casualties were reported. The vessel later proceeded to Liverpool.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, APRIL 10, 1917

WHY NOT ADVERTISE?

SEVERAL DRAY LOADS of catalogues were recently received in Peterborough from mail order houses in Toronto, and the postmen were for a few days almost worked to death delivering this bulky matter to the various addresses. An almost equally large number went out by rural delivery to the farmers.

It is hard to estimate or even approximately guess how much money is diverted from this city to Toronto and other points by this class of business. And yet the patrons of the mail order houses are not entirely to blame for their apparent lack of local pride. They are simply falling under the influence of the art of advertising, the art that never fails to sway the masses. The mail order houses make a lavish use of printer's ink and get returns for their outlay. As much cannot be said for the retail dealers in Peterborough.

There are merchants in this city who advertise steadily and extensively. Anyone can see that these are the men whose stores are most up to date and with whom business is brisk. In other lines there is an agreement among the dealers not to advertise. If one broke the rule the others would be obliged to follow the example for their own safety. Suppose, for example, a man wishes to buy a pair of shoes, what information can be received from the columns of the local papers? Can the customer be blamed, can the dealer complain, if the former consults his mail order catalogue and, making his selection, sends his money to Toronto?

An agreement to keep out of the advertising columns has one feature to recommend it. It distributes the depression among the parties to the contract and all suffer the consequences in common.

THE CITIZEN AND NICKEL.

"HOW IS THE REFUSAL of the Ontario Government," asks The Ottawa Citizen, "to take complete control of the nickel industry in this country to be reconciled with the resolutions adopted at the Paris conference, which was attended on Canada's behalf by Sir George Foster, to secure within all the Entente countries those resources essential to the defence of the Allies?"

When the United States took up the work of making munitions for the Allies it was on the understanding that no restrictions be placed on the exports of nickel from Canada. The International Nickel Company offered to turn over the complete control of the metal to the Ontario Government, but after consultation with the Imperial authorities it was decided to make no change during the war.

There was nothing inconsistent in the attitude taken by Sir George Foster and other members of the Conference at Paris. The United States has always been regarded as one of the Entente countries aiding the Allies with men, money, munitions and foodstuffs. Even if there had been a disposition to trade with the enemy, the blockade was sufficiently effective to prevent any such traffic.

UNCLE SAM'S DEBTS.

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE have evidently a long memory, and that carries them back over a space of more than a century to the time they were struggling for their independence. At that time France rendered them aid, sending men to fight for them and loaning them money. The Americans remember all this with gratitude, and they now declare that they are glad of the opportunity to repay the debt in kind. Before the United States declared war against Germany there was an agitation in the former country in favor of making a present of a billion dollars in cash in return for favors received so long ago from France.

France is not the only European power to which Uncle Sam is indebted. She owes Germany something in the way of reprisal for the part the latter took in the American revolution, when troops from that country fought against the colonists. The United States can now discharge two obligations at the same time, the one of gratitude, the other of revenge.

Talking of debts, and coming down to modern times, the United States owes considerable to England for the moral support extended by the latter during the Spanish-American war, support which really confined the conflict to the two original participants and kept Germany and other powers from interfering on behalf of Spain.

The opportunity has come for Uncle Sam to discharge all his debts at one and the same time.

IMMIGRATION FOR CANADA.

A RESIDENT of Minneapolis is concerning himself with the question of Canadian immigration, being engaged in a line of business directly interested in that subject. He writes that, considering the changed conditions and that the free lands within a reasonable distance of the railroads are practically gone, it will be necessary to work along different lines in securing capital and immigration. It is now a matter of getting the capital and people who will buy these lands which have passed out of the hands of the government and put them under cultivation. Heretofore we have been spending time and money, and all your effort has been along the lines of giving land away. What are the plans of the Dominion and Provincial Governments to get capital and the people who will now buy these lands and put them under cultivation?

Canada's greatest need at the present time is capital and people, particularly capital, for where capital goes people will follow. Canada has almost unlimited resources, but needs the people and capital to develop them. It is not a matter of developing one province at the expense of another; it is a matter of everybody getting together, talking matters over, and coming to a common understanding as to what is best for Canada as a whole. Any work that is done, taking people from one part of Canada to another, has little if any merit, for it means nothing to Canada. The work that means something is bringing capital and people from the outside, and the building up and establishing of credit, which begins with the farmer. It is suggested that a meeting be held, to go over the various matters pertaining to the bringing in of people and capital; that this meeting should be attended by representatives of the Dominion Government, of all the Provincial Governments, manufacturers, farmers, grain growers, bankers, loan companies, railway companies, colonization companies, in fact, all the various interests; that this meeting should be held at some central point (Winnipeg would probably be the most central); that this meeting be called not for a day or two days, but for a week, thus giving the representatives of these various institutions and organizations a chance to visit face to face and together work out the best ways and means of establishing credits and encouraging people and capital to come into the country, and if there are conditions existing which are destroying credit and keeping out people and capital, such conditions should certainly be discussed and remedied.

It is not the intention that this meeting shall be affiliated with any political party or with any one class, but rather shall be purely non-partisan and with the one main idea that Canada needs and wants people and capital, and that this meeting is called for the express purpose of getting at the best method of obtaining the same.

DAYLIGHT SAVING ILLEGAL.

ADVOCATES of daylight saving in isolated municipalities will do well to remember the claim that has been put forward to the effect that any merchant or manufacturer who starts work in his plant, if there are children employed therein, before seven o'clock in the morning, violates the provincial statute and is liable for a heavy penalty. The law clearly states that no children under the age of sixteen shall be put to work before the hour referred to, standard time. Putting the clock one hour ahead is an evasion of the law unless those affected by the enactment did not begin work until eight.

Chief Factory Inspector Burke, while in Peterborough last summer, made this point clear at a meeting of the Ontario Conference of Typographical Unions. It is evident that the only legal method of procedure to establish daylight saving is by legislative action, changing standard time throughout the Province or Dominion

AS THE HERALD SEES IT.

NOW THAT the United States is at war, the leading papers of that country have dropped party politics and have got behind the President in the task which confronts him. The sentiment of the press is reflected in the following editorial in the New York Herald:

> In the Order of the Yellow Streak there is no partisanship. The Stones and Kitchins of democracy are found lined up with the Norrises and La Follettes of republicanism. No political party has a monopoly of pusillanimity. By the same token no political party has a monopoly of patriotism.
>
> Standing squarely to the support of President Wilson in this hour of national danger are the citizens of this republic in the mass. These know no politics; they have no thought except Americanism; each is ready to serve his country according to his capacity.
>
> "One hundred per cent. pure" is the loyalty of every true American today, but one man's fitness for a particular task differs from another man's fitness as men differ temperamentally in native capacity and because of experience.
>
> To meet adequately the problems which confront this nation at war the President must have the aid and assistance of the best brains of the country. It is no reflection upon the patriotism or the good intentions of certain men in the present Cabinet to say that the country is strong in its belief that other men could render better service than they in the positions they now hold.
>
> Neither party feeling nor personal liking should influence the President in his choice of the men who are to co-operate with him in guiding the nation through present and future perils. His one thought should be of capacity—fitness. In this crisis he should form a coalition, a non-party cabinet, calling to the counsel board such men as Elihu Root, Bradley A. Fiske and Leonard Wood—not from any reason of expediency, but because of all Americans those men are best qualified for the direction of the great departments of government with which they have been identified.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

Advertisers Are Not Pirates.

(Philadelphia Ledger.)

Here is a nut for every householder to crack: The price of commodities which are advertised for sale has risen much less than the price of things never advertised. If you haven't a hammer handy I'll crack that nut for you. When any concern has spent thousands for advertising it cannot afford to throw away business in a species of piratical charges. Not so with the vendor of a head of cabbage or a bag of potatoes. He is restrained by nothing except the contents of your pocket.

WHAT THE BOY SCOUTS ARE DOING

The call of King and Country has found such ready response from the leaders of Boy Scout troops in Canada, that today there is urgent need of more Scoutmasters and Assistant Scoutmasters in every province. The appeal is for men who are willing to play the game with the boys. Many a man who today knows nothing of the technique of Scouting will eventually, if possessed of the qualities of leadership, make a good Scoutmaster. The Scoutmaster may be twenty-one years old or he may be sixty-one years old; he is the man who has some interest in boys, who can squeeze out of a busy life an evening a week, and an occasional half day or day for a hike who has in his heart the lust of the trail and of the open sky, and who knows some of the things the Scout is supposed to know, and who has a thirst to know more of them.

Scouts Against U-Boats.

Sir Robert Baden Powell, writing in a recent issue of "The Scout," points to the assistance Boy Scouts can and are giving to combat the German U-boat menace by growing their own vegetables. "I don't know which lot of Scouts is leading the way in the matter of potato growing," he writes, "but there is a splendid response to my suggestion that we can beat the German U-boat campaign by growing our own vegetables if we try. If the farmers can grow the corn, the Boy Scouts can grow a good lot of the vegetables that will be needed during the coming year.

"In Leeds the Scouts have taken over 20,000 square yards of ground from the Parks Committee, and some 1,500 of them are already beginning work on it. If this plan is carried out at other big places, where there are lots of Scouts and plenty of waste ground, it will be a great help to spoiling the German idea of starving us out by sinking all our food ships with their submarines."

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor, Review: It was surely a stroke of genius that led our Government to decide upon raising 50,000 men for home defense. It gratifies my fondest desire. I have always been told that I look so handsome in khaki, and I was deeply chagrined when I had to put away my military suit in 1914.

I am now ready to join hands with Bourassa, and with him defend our native land from invasion, and let some other fellow go overseas and fight the cruel Huns and despised Turks. I would, in my ardour, even dare the dangers of the deep, and go as far as old England, but my business relations will not permit me to go as far as Belgium or France, and, besides, if I went there, I would have to go into the horrible trenches, and this would spoil my nice clothes. Then, too, I do not wish to come in contact with shells, as they are so apt to mess me up, and my aesthetic nature revolts at the thought of wounds and blood. I prefer to risk my life and draw my salary at home, ever ready to repel any invaders of our shores. The Mexicans might penetrate the U. S. and threaten our country, or the Eskimos might swoop down upon us from the north. These dangers I shall resolutely face. I hope to be made an officer, as their pay is better, and the duties more pleasant. Having now made up my mind to risk my life in defense of my country, I shall no longer, I hope, hear any cruel taunts about my being a slacker. No longer shall people dare to say that I have feet like refrigerated mutton, or a back bone resembling a deflated tire, or that my color has the tinge of the butter-cup.

Then, too, I shall be associated with brave, kindred spirits—men so brave that they are ready to lay down their lives for their country, provided they are kept 3,000 miles from the firing line.

In the years to come we shall be able to proudly tell our children of the noble part we played in the Great War.

I remain,

Wit and Wisdom

"I grovel here before you in the dust," observed the impassioned suitor, as he sank on the drawing-room floor.

"I don't know what you mean by dust," replied she coldly. I look after this room most carefully myself every morning."

Peggy—Daddy, what did the Dead Sea die of?

Daddy—Oh, I don't know, dear.

Peggy—Where do the Zeppelins start from?

Daddy—I don't know.

Peggy—Daddy, when will the war end?

Daddy—I don't know.

Peggy—Daddy, how did you get to be an editor.

The politician rushed past the office boy into the editorial sanctum.

"What do you mean?" he roared, "What do you mean by insulting me as you did in last night's 'Clarion'?"

"Just a moment," replied the editor. "Didn't the story appear as you gave it to us, namely, that you had resigned as city treasurer?"

"It did. But you put it under the head, 'Public Improvements.'"

EARNEST ENDEAVORS

"No," remarked the determined lady to the indignant taxi driver, who had received his exact fare, "you cannot cheat me. I haven't ridden in cabs these last 25 years for nothing."

"Haven't you?" he retorted bitterly. "Well, you've done your best."

ZEST OF PURSUIT.

"Of course, you want your wife to have the right to vote."

"Yes. But I don't believe she'll find as much enjoyment in voting as she has found in the campaign to secure the privilege."

NO WAY OUT OF IT.

"How did Jones happen to fall downstairs?"

"Why, his wife said, 'Now, Henry, be careful,' and, as he is not the man to be dictated to by any women, down he went."

BROKEN ENGAGEMENT

"Why do you pass him up, girlie? I thought you liked him."

"I liked him well enough, but I couldn't go through life with him. I didn't care for the make of his car."

CONFIDENT OF VICTORY.

Hon. F. B. McCurdy Gets First-hand Impressions at Front.

Impressed by the splendid spirit of the allied troops, including the Canadians, and the resolute determination and confidence in winning the war, Hon. F. B. McCurdy, Parliamentary secretary of the Militia Department, is back in Ottawa after an absence of almost two months in Great Britain and at the front. He crossed on the Noordam.

Mr. McCurdy went over to acquaint himself more fully with the condition of the Canadian forces. He visited the headquarters in London, all the camps in England where Canadians are training, and each of the Canadian divisions.

"At the front," he said in an interview, "the French are confident and the British and Canadians optimistic. The former, differing from opinions prevailing in some quarters, have very substantial reserves. The feeling which prevails among the allied forces is that they have taken the measure of the enemy and that the latest development in their campaign of frightfulness is induced by their appreciation that the tide has definitely turned against them in the decisive theatre—the western front."

"There is no question whatever as to the successful outcome of the war. The armies are in fine shape as regards the main forces and reserves, but at the same time no one closes his eyes to what has to come before victory is accomplished. The spirit everywhere is one of grim determination."

Mr. McCurdy observed with satisfaction that the Canadians have won a great name for themselves.

"Their great prestige," he stated, "is built upon a record of achievement at the front. The consultation of the Dominion is the coming War Conference is a national corollary of the work our soldiers have performed. They have richly earned for their country the honor of participation and consultation in what will probably be the most important assembly in the Empire's history."

Alluding to the reorganization of the Canadian forces in England, the Parliamentary Secretary stated that the feeling among the men is one of confidence in Sir George Perley, the Overseas Minister, and General Turner, commandant in England.

A VICTIM OF CRUELTY.

Hon. Dr. Beland Was Kept From Seeing Dying Wife.

That the British and Canadian Governments had made every effort to secure the release of Hon. Dr. Beland, member for Beauce, now a prisoner of war in the hands of the Germans, was stated by Sir Robert Borden in the Commons recently. The Prime Minister replied to an enquiry by Mr. Marcil, of Bonaventure, who had read that two prominent Germans had been released from a Canadian internment camp, and wished to know what had been done on behalf of Dr. Beland. Sir Robert [illegible] Laurier with all that had been done, and pointed out that one difficulty in the case was the fact that strong efforts to have a prisoner released or exchanged often tended to strengthen the determination of the enemy to hold him.

A letter received in Ottawa announces that the wife of Dr. H. S. Beland, a Belgian noblewoman, died recently in Belgium, and that her husband was refused the supreme consolation of attending his wife at her death-bed.

Dr. Beland was with his wife in Belgium when war broke out, but refused to leave for England, staying behind to attend wounded Belgians and Germans in Antwerp before the fall of that city. Some time ago he was imprisoned by the Germans in a Berlin detention camp, and, although successive appeals were made to high German authorities, he was always refused a permit to see his sick wife, who died some days ago without seeing her husband. It is an outrage for Germany for having thus treated Dr. Beland, who after all committed no other crime than staying behind to attend the wounded and sick, Germans as well as Belgians. It has greatly angered the people in this country to hear that innocent Canadian heroes are so inhumanly treated by Germany.

HIS OWN COUNSEL;

BY ALAN HINSDALE

I am a mechanic, and my specialty is safe locks. I was sent one day to open the safe of Aaron Farnsworth & Co., the only person who knew the combination being at the point of death and it being necessary that certain funds be got out. It is unwise to force a safe lock if there is any other way to open it, and I questioned those for whom I was to do the job with a view to discovering if some one else than the sick person knew the combination. Edgar Sharpley, the assistant of Robert Wendell, the financial man of the concern, admitted that he had known the combination, but had forgotten it.

Thinking I might help him to remember it, I suggested that he make a trial at recalling it by turning the knob. He placed himself before the safe and began to make the turns, but nothing came to him. I listened for a sound within the lock while he was doing so, but failed to hear any indication of anything dropping. He seemed to me to be nervous, and I noticed that his hand trembled.

Failing to elicit anything from him, I went to work and in the course of a couple of hours opened the safe. There was no one in the room where I was when I finished the job, and after opening the safe door and shutting it I went out into the main office to report what I had done. I returned with the junior partner, who was two or three yards behind me.

In a corner beside the door through which I entered was a stationary washstand, over which hung a mirror. As I passed into the safe room something prompted me to glance aside. In the mirror I saw a reflection of Sharpley. He was standing with his hand on the knob of a door opposite the mirror looking into the room. As I entered he closed the door softly, thus shutting himself out of the room.

It was evident to me that he did not know that I was aware of his presence. This I knew, not only by the expression of his face, but by the care he took to make no sound in closing the door behind him. However, I thought little of the matter. I had not been out of the room a minute, and Sharpley had been intrusted with the combination of the lock. This indicated that he was trustworthy; indeed, if he had wanted to take funds from the safe he could have done it long ago.

I turned the opened safe over to the junior partner, and, being told that when my further services were wanted I would be sent for, I gathered up my tools and went away.

That evening when I was sitting down to supper with my wife and kids two men came in and one of them, showing the badge of a deputy sheriff, arrested me. They not only searched me, but searched the house. Astonished, I asked them what was the charge against me, but they gave me no answer. When they took me away from my weeping wife and children I assured them that a mistake had been made, and they had nothing to fear for me. In going out I caught sight of my troubled face in a mirror in a rack standing in the hall.

The face of Sharpley as I saw it when he was about to shut the door of the safe room was recalled by my reflection. By one of those singular undefined connections in the train between incidents, I saw an explanation of my arrest. It did not come to me by degrees, but flashed upon me suddenly. It was this:

Money had been missed from the safe I had opened. Sharpley had taken advantage of my being at work on the safe to extract funds and make it appear that I had been the thief. If there was no evidence against me other than my having had access to the safe, there was none in my favor, for my word that I had seen Sharpley's reflection in a mirror when he was leaving the safe room would be worthless.

I was locked up in default of bail and during the night, instead of sleeping, thought upon a plan of springing upon him that I had seen his reflection in the mirror as he left the safe room. In the morning I asked permission to tell Aaron Farnsworth my story. I was taken to his office and before beginning my defense asked that the whole office force be admitted to hear it. This of course included Sharpley. When all were present I asked him if he was not in the safe room when I left it to announce that I had opened the safe. He replied in the negative. He stammered that he could not remember.

I asked the partners to adjourn to the safe room, and when there I placed Sharpley at the door as I had seen him, it being partly open, with his hand on the knob. Then I asked Mr. Farnsworth to enter the room from the main office as I had entered it and glance aside into the mirror as he came in. He did so and saw Sharpley's image, now pale as a ghost, for he knew that I had seen his reflection before he closed the door.

"That is all the defense I can make," I said. "When I returned from announcing that I had opened the safe I saw Mr. Sharpley reflected in the mirror as I have just placed him."

Sharpley was arrested, the missing funds found between the mattresses of his bed, and he confessed all on the same day. I was returned to my home and family.

I was told by lawyers that I had handled my case beautifully. I doubt if I could have saved myself in any other way.

Artificial Feet of Paper Pulp.

In spite of the fact that there is little fiction in the stories of the soaring price of paper, the uses to which this product is being put are constantly increasing in number. We have paper furniture, paper cloth, paper silks and clothes, and even paper legs. Now Dr. Svindt, of Denmark, who is responsible for the artificial leg of papier mache, has brought forward a paper foot, intended to meet the needs of the crippled soldiers. These feet are said to be strong enough to withstand ordinary usage, and they have the added advantage of being cheap. A model of the foot is made of wire gauze, and upon this is poured a specially prepared pulp which entirely fills the interstices of the wire gauze.

A New Zealand firm is in the market for 500,000 meat tags.

Corsage Bouquets.

Probably never before have artificial flowers had such a vogue as at present, and a small corsage bouquet is one of the best means of giving color to a dark street suit.

There are bunches of tiny flowers in brilliant red that are very good. There are bouquets consisting of a rosebud, a few forget-me-nots and a sprig or two of green. There are also nasturtiums, poppies and many other flowers in their own natural rich coloring.

The placing of the flower is rather important. It can be pinned to the left shoulder with good effect and looks well at the closing of the ruff or close collar of velvet and fur.

ABOUT YOUR RUGS

A Short History of Their Early Origins and Kinds.

RAG ONES ARE AMERICAN.

A Word About the Two Methods Which Give Woven and Tufted Carpetings. Before You Buy Prime Yourself About the Different Kinds.

Most rugs are made according to one of two methods, which gives us woven and tufted carpetings. The latter is distinctly oriental and is made upon a foundation warp composed of hempen, woolen or silk threads. The number of these threads depends upon the breadth of the rug and its desired fineness or coarseness. Lengths of colored wool or the hair of a camel or goat or silken threads are knotted on to the warp threads, with the two ends of the individual twists standing up. What is called a weft thread is then run across the warp and another line of tufts made. The whole is brought securely together by means of a hand instrument, the ends of the tufts clipped to an equal length by expert fingers, and thus a tufted rug is completed.

Writing in 1632, Pierre Dupont, a master carpet maker of Paris, said he was convinced that rug weaving was taught to the French by the Saracens after the latter had suffered defeat at the hands of Charles Martel in 726. The middle ages found the art flourishing all over Europe and especially in France and Flanders. Colbert, minister of Louis XIV., who did so much to aid the birth of industrial France, established the Hotel des Gobelins in 1667 as a state manufactory, and the enterprise grew to be one of the notable institutions of the realm.

In 1701 William III. of England granted royal charters to weavers in Wilton and Axminster, towns which were to give their names to types of carpeting that have come down to the present day. The fame of the Wilton rug was largely due to Henry, earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, who brought two Frenchmen, Antoine Dufossy and Pierre Jemale, to England and put them in charge of operations at Wilton. Their skill and enterprise won fame for the establishment in a little while. Other French and Flemish weavers followed, and the industry was fairly launched.

The opening of the nineteenth century saw much experimentation in the effort to produce a satisfactory machine made carpeting. Erastus B. Bigelow, an American, and William Wood, an Englishman, perfected the Jacquard loom to a point where it could be depended upon to turn out a uniform product of good quality. The passing years have witnessed further important development, and results are now accomplished by mechanical process that will stand the test of comparison with the hand made article.

Not until 1880 did the French turn to machinery for carpet weaving, and they at first adopted English machinery to a great extent. So it was that the art first crossed the channel and then came back in a different form after the lapse of centuries.

In America we have produced at least one kind of floor covering which we may claim as our own—the rag rug. In colonial times rag rugs were made in considerable numbers, and it was deemed a fine accomplishment for a woman. Much ingenuity was shown in the matching of colors.

ABOUT EFFICIENCY

Just What It May Mean In the Home.

SAVING OF HUMAN EFFORT.

An Expert Discusses How Housewives May Throw Off Cumbersome Ways of Doing Housework and Substitute a System That Helps Carry the Burden.

We have talked so much about efficiency that it might be well to stop a moment and consider what is the meaning of its opposite, inefficiency. Probably the best and simplest one word definition of efficiency is conservation. Likewise, we may sum up inefficiency in the simple word "waste."

Yes, inefficiency means waste, either in a process of work, the materials with which the work is done or with the worker. The great problem of efficiency, therefore, is to reduce or eliminate the amount of waste in any of these three lines. It is unfortunate if there is a waste in materials.

Waste in individual effort is what we are most concerned about, especially in regard to the effort of the homemaker. If there is waste, for instance, in the food used in the home, or if there is waste in the method which she uses at work, we regret it, but we are most sorry when she herself wastes her own effort so that she herself is deprived of necessary energy.

In fact, all our efforts are finally aimed to benefit the human worker. If we tell a woman to raise her sink or if we show her how to market economically we are doing so only that her personal effort shall be diminished. Some women write that they feel that this efficiency idea would be an added burden on top of their present work; that it would be harder to impose new schedules and new plans than to go on with what they are now doing.

Efficiency does not in any way mean added effort. It means simply elimination or cutting down of present faults. For instance, the other day a woman announced, "If this efficiency idea of yours means a lot of expensive utensils I'm not going to have anything to do with it." Or another writes, "You don't mean that I should add a complicated system of work to my present duties." On the contrary, it is meant that both these women and others should merely sit down and study how at present there may be waste in their management. They do not need to add a cumbersome system or a dozen pots in order to be efficient. They need only see how they work now, see what amount of materials they use now, notice what waste motion or effort there is at present in various tasks or routines and then merely eliminate some of this unnecessary work, this waste motion and this superfluous effort.

If a woman once gets firmly fixed in her mind that efficiency means the elimination of waste she has the key to this whole new, stimulating idea. It may be a waste in her food supplies, in the fuel she is using, a waste of time between various tasks, a waste of effort walking twenty feet unnecessarily, but somehow somewhere there will be waste. Then if she cuts down this waste in whatever department she finds it, in whatever task or routine she is in at the time, she will become efficient.

Eminent Sculptor Passes.

John Houghton Maurice Bonnor of Homefield House, Chiswick, Mal., England, a sculptor who came to Canada several months ago to execute the exterior and interior mural decorations of the new House of Parliament in Ottawa, died on Monday at the home of his brother, Frederick C. D. Bonnor, Newark, N. J. Soon after his arrival in Ottawa he became ill, but it was not until his brother came to investigate that his true condition was learned. Mr. Bonnor was taken to his brother's home and his wife was sent for. She arrived from England, and reached her husband's side less than an hour before he died. Since the war Mr. Bonnor had designed four groups of statuary, known as "Kitchener's War Babies," for which a fund is being raised to make them a perpetual memorial to the late Earl. His body will be cremated and the ashes interred in the family cemetery in Brynygwalim, Llangedwyn, Wales, where five generations of his people are buried.

Italian Royal Family Is Greatly Influenced By British Governess

THE least known and yet one of the most influential women in Italy at present is Miss Margaret Brown, the English governess of three of the girls of the royal family. Since the discussion of the arrangement of a marriage between Edward Albert Prince of Wales, heir apparent to the English throne, and Princess Yolanda, eldest daughter of the King and Queen of Italy, the position of this governess as the domestic power behind the throne is said to have been greatly strengthened. Should the marriage between young Edward and the wealthiest royal heiress of Europe take place, as is expected, Miss Brown will receive due credit as the matchmaker. She has also exerted a great influence over the Crown Prince, who is still an impressionable and sensitive boy.

The mystery that has grown up around the personality of Miss Brown is one of the sources of her influence. Also it is of the kind that pleases the King, who has a horror of the publicity which his position forces upon him. Those persons of the court life who dislike Miss Brown because of her confidential position, because of her power to hold her tongue, and her custom of standing beside the Queen's chair during receptions, have tried in vain to discover exactly who she is. To date, all they have learned is that she is a strong-minded person of some 45 years, who appeared on the scene at the birth of Yolanda, the first child, and who has been in charge of the children ever since. It appears that the King and Queen wanted their children brought up after the English fashion and that Miss Brown was recommended by some member of the English royalty.

PRINCE HUMBERT.

The influence of Miss Brown in modernizing the education of Italian children of the noble families has been remarkable, and far wider than that of the more popularly known system of Dr. Maria Montessori. Miss Brown has introduced into Italy the English customs with the respect to the education of girls in particular. Her example with the royal children, who have been taught to lead an outdoor life, to swim and ride and play vigorous games, has been followed by the noble and wealthy families, who formerly brought up girls in the strictest indoor, nun-like seclusion.

Quite a stir was caused some time ago by the way Miss Brown let the girls run in athletic clothes about the beach and woods of Castle Porziana, the summer home of the royal family. The objecting court ladies, when they attempted to discuss the matter with the King, were asked if strong bodies were not to be preferred to showy clothing. The women of the royal nursery have also on several occasions discovered that this English woman's will was law. Once it was about the question of dolls. These playthings were ruled out and have stayed ruled out of the nursery.

Like the girls of the family, young Prince Humbert, the heir to the throne, is very fond of Miss Brown, whose influence has been extended to his education in some measure. She exerted her influence in securing the introduction of the Boy Scout movement into Italy, the Prince being its commander-in-chief and the King contributing a million dollars a year to its support.

During the war, though with her usual unobtrusiveness, Miss Brown has taught the girls the English methods of helping in charities. While the Italians are charitable as a people, their charities have not before been organized on the large scale made necessary by the war.

With the marriage of Yolanda, the work of the English governess will not be finished by any means, since there still remain Princess Mafalda, who was 14 years of age November 19, and Princess Giovanna, who was nine years of age November 13.

Why It Failed.

A certain chemist advertised a patent concoction labeled: "No more colds! No more coughs! Price 1s. 1½d."

A man who bought the mixture came back in three days to complain that he had drunk it all, but was no better.

"Drunk it all!" gasped the chemist. "Why, man, that was an india-rubber solution to put on the soles of your boots."—Tit-Bits.

In Arctic Siberia.

"Among the strange and little-known peoples dwelling in remote and trackless regions of the far North are the primitive native races of Arctic Siberia. Their vast habitat extends from the extreme corner of north eastern Asia, for thousands of miles inland and along the Arctic Ocean. Two of these peoples, the Yakuts and Koryaks, are especially interesting.

"The Yakuts are the largest and most cultured of all the primitive races of Siberia. They live in the great province of Kakutsk, a territory five times larger than that of Texas together with all the New England States. The extreme northern part of their country is the coldest region on earth, the temperature falling to eighty and ninety degrees below zero. Here the soil is eternally frozen for hundreds of feet below the surface; even at the height of summer, only a yard of unfrozen soil veneers the admixture of earth and ice, affording foothold for the gray tundra-moss and occasional patches of grass and dwarf willow.

"The natives live in yourtas, or semi-underground huts, and a few one-story log-cottages, as do the Russian administrative officials. For ten months the country is a dreary, trackless sea of driven snow, with far lower temperatures than the regions about the north and south poles. During the brief summer thaw of two months, the tundra, as the open country is called, is an impassable swamp.

"The Yakuts are the most numerous tribe of eastern Siberia, numbering some 250,000, and are typical representatives of the culture of the Turkish tribes of Central Asia. In spite of their present isolation from the other branches of the Turkish race and their probable mixture with Mongols and others, the Yakuts, in the course of their migrations, have preserved one of the oldest and purest dialects of the language spoken by the Kirghis, the Tartars, and other Turkish peoples."

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well As Men

Glass of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert — vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman, and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store, which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

"Swiss Scare" a Trick.

It is difficult to avoid the impression that the rumor of an attack near Switzerland, if not in Switzerland, is being sedulously spread by the German higher command, says The London Observer. That command, it will be remembered, in every winter interval between campaigns, has filled the neutral press with rumors that great reinforcements of troops and artillery were moving towards the points which it was not intended to attack. The Dutch newspapers were stuffed, we think, with quite exceptional yarns about German intentions against the British when the real coup was being planned at Verdun. The Swiss scare may be put up in the ordinary way of business with the hope of diverting men, material, and attention on the Allies' side while a German stroke of quite another kind is intended.

How many telephone [illegible] have given thought to the study of what might be called "telephone courtesy"? There are various phases of it, and many of them are important. Do you ever speak impatiently to the "hello-girls" at the central? Perhaps you were at fault yourself, after all. Did you ever, on finding you had given or had received the wrong number, snap out something not real nice to the other party? Did you ever tell your assistant to call up someone, then let him wait until you had finished a conversation or a letter, regardless of the [illegible] of his time? Of course you never swear through the telephone—that is a misdemeanor, and would bring you into court; yet it has been done, for the man who is low-minded enough to be habitually profane is just as apt to so express himself at the phone as elsewhere. The telephone is becoming a home and business institution, so that telephone courtesy is as important as table manners, and should be as generally observed.

Telephone Courtesy--

A CORDIAL, kindly manner and a cheerful, smiling voice—everywhere people are awakening to the value of these in telephoning.

Not that anyone ever meant to be rude or discourteous. Many of us were just thoughtless, forgetting how sensitive the telephone is, reflecting our every mood.

And in addition to telephone courtesy, it is very helpful to speak distinctly and directly into the mouthpiece of the telephone, with the lips about half an inch from its rim.

And then, of course, we should always make sure of the number by consulting the directory before calling.

The above editorial from the Thorold Post is worthy the notice of every telephone user.

"WHERE ARE OUR DEAD?" QUERY BY REV. J. R. WEBB

Pastor of Murray Street Church Believes in Immortality of Soul But Rejects Theory of Spiritualists.

The large congregations at Murray Street Church yesterday morning and evening must have been gratifying to the officers and members of the church. At the evening service Rev J. R. Webb preached on the subject "Where are the dead?" taking for his text Ephesians, third chapter and fourteenth verse—"The Father of Our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named."

Strongly supporting the belief in the immortality of the soul, the preacher asked: Do you think that the carelessness of an engine driver can put an end to such love as existed between the one under the debris and the widowed one who weeps at home? Is it conceivable that a typhoid germ can destroy what has taken scores of years to build of character and ambition? Does anyone think that the education of a man which takes 15 years of life profits him for only the remaining few years of visible activity? Does the bullet or shell terminate the career of one who got in its way in the highest exercise of his nobility? Everything that we can see in this world is subject to change, but we know of nothing that has become non-existent. Are we to postulate that possibility of the part of man that separates him from all the lower orders and elevates him to his present position of lonely splendor?

Sir Oliver Lodge in his Science and Immortality, says, "No science maintains that the whole of our personality is incarnate here; in fact science is beginning to surmise the contrary."—Now if universal consciousness declares, and revelation proclaims, and science surmises the immortality of the soul, some heaven or place of the soul's abode is a necessity.

Mr. Webb evidently believes, and probably his hearers were with him in his belief, that the soul is not dependent upon the body for consciousness, and that the departed spirit continues its consciousness even now. He does not believe in soul sleep or in the loss of any worthy asset which it has become possessed of in this life.

Speaking of Sir Oliver Lodge's "Raymond" he said that if the liberated spirit had the privilege of communication with friends upon the earth only messages of importance and dignity could well be expected, whereas the communications which Sir Oliver professes to have received from his departed son are, according to the book, startling, because of their insignificance, and almost sacreligious in their frivolity.

He quoted the London Times as having said of the work, that "the outstanding value of the book was its charm—that a man of scientific power and unquestionable sincerity had led a host of people into a realm that they would never have tolerated in lesser company.

There is, said the speaker, another thing to say: Sir Oliver Lodge is a man in his sixty-fifth year, he has had a life of arduous labor, and at this hour is crushed by a terrible bereavement. Is it then any wonder that at such a time his usual accuracy should give way to something less and that the brooding sorrow should cause some mental weakening?

Sir Robertson Nichol had said that of all the absurdities that had ever found their way between the covers of a book, this was about the most absurd he had ever found.

Concluding, Mr. Webb said: "I believe in the conscious existence of our departed, in the continued upward progress of those who pass away trusting Christ, and I believe in the fixity of the bounds that keep us in temporary ignorance and make it impossible and undesirable for them to reveal themselves to us in whom they are more interested than ever."

The musical program during the day was of a very high order.

The annual meeting of the Association shall be held on a day to be fixed by the executive committee at or near the 15th of January in each year.

Everyone Welcome.

Mr. J. J. Hartley, president of the Trades and Labor Council, as a member of the special committee stated that the most important factor in drawing the constitution had been to see that class organization did not get into it. Everyone was welcome. It was free to all with the one idea to make the city a Greater Peterboro. He had been born in Peterboro, and had been in other cities in his travels, but could find no better place to live than in Peterboro. The transportation facilities were good. the back lakes were fine for summer outings, fishing was right at our doors, and with a little interest from each citizen he looked to see the Greater Peterboro.

Encourage Manufacturers.

Mr. Hartley was in favor of treating manufacturers well, for the extension of the industries meant employment for the working men at good wages. Everyone in Peterboro had to work for a living, and he wanted to see everyone doing well. The assistance of the ladies would make the success of the Association all the more certain. They could make their husbands and brothers get out and do their part for the Greater Peterboro Association.

Tax Rate Low.

Mr. S. R. Armstrong gave a view of the comparatively low rate of taxation in Peterboro per capita of population. It was the third lowest out of 23 Ontario cities, and in the debt per head of population Peterboro was second lowest. The increase of population in Peterboro from 1901 to 1911 was 63 per cent. hgher than any of the other cities that are so talked about. Speaking of the constitution of the Association the speaker pointed out that the officers and committee could not be wildly extravagant, as a membership fee had been omitted. The Association would be a success if the citizens would work to that end and not condemn a suggestion from a personal or sectional point of view.

The constitution was adopted on the motion of Messrs. F. Whitehouse and W. Evans.

Ex-Mayor Bradburn.

Mr. W. H. Bradburn, Ex-Mayor of the city, was glad to lend a hand in a movement that would advance the city's interests. He felt sure that the Association would be of great assistance to the city council. He moved the resolution, which was seconded by Mr. H. A. Sharp, that the Mayor appoint a nominating committee to select officers.

The resolution carried, and Mayor Duffus named Messrs. Bradburn, Sharp, Whitehouse, Evans, Dennie, Turner, Begley, Hartley, Matthews, and Denham.

Rev. J. R. Webb.

Rev. J. R. Webb was sure that a movement for a Greater Peterboro was a good one, and he took occasion to congratulate the Mayor for being so enterprising, and also for asking the ladies to assist in the new step forward. Mr. Webb got some Ford jokes off, showing how in comparison Peterboro was like one. It was not a self-starter, required to blow its horn, etc., and it makes its best record on the up-grade. Peterboro was on the up-grade, and going to make better record than ever. There was not a man or woman who could not assist, and all should do their part to further development. Let everyone say, "This is my city," and we will have in Peterboro a unity that we never had before. Speaking of Peterboro's tribute of men to the Motherland, there was only one district in Canada that had given a larger per cent. than Peterboro, and that was Winnipeg, and there were only three ahead in matter of gifts.

Father Phelan.

Rev. Father Phelan was very glad to be able to take part in the Greater Peterboro Association. He was always proud of Peterboro, out was prouder of it than ever before. We have the material that will go to make a Greater Peterboro, and from the sentiments expressed it would lead to an ideal Peterboro. Tell your neighbors what has been done at this meeting. If he was to pick a commissioner to boom the city, J. J. Hartley would be one choice People who visited our back lakes appreciated Peterboro more than we did ourselves. We must pull together, and the city would be better financially, educationally, socially and morally.

The Board of Trade.

Mr. J. J. Turner, president of the Board of Trade, after referring to the desire of the Labor organization for representation on the city council, could see no objection. He was very strong for a greater agricultural fair, and would like to see a winter fair in Peterboro also. All holidays should be celebrated at home, and h would like Peterboro to get a name as a good excursion city, and if the Board of Trade could bring it about it would be done. He was glad that the movement for a Greater Peterboro was to be a success.

A NATION GOING DRY

RAPID SPREAD OF PROHIBITION IN THE DOMINION.

Has Spread From the Pacific to the Atlantic Like Wild Fire and in Most of the Provinces the People Voted for the Measure by Very Substantial Majorities, Showing Overwhelming Change of Sentiment.

DEMON RUM is fighting for his life in Canada to-day, and the Dominion has gripped him by the throat with such force that his death seems to many of our editors to be inevitable. During the year 1916 a great prohibition wave swept over Canada from west to east and has leaped on to the neighboring colony of Newfoundland. In reviewing this aspect of the year's work, The Winnipeg (Manitoba) Free Press writes:

"The movement has blazed across Canada from the Atlantic to the Pacific like a prairie-fire, leaving but one or two oases, which at any moment may be visited by the cleansing element.

"Saskatchewan blazed the trail in 1915. In the summer of that year the Government closed every bar in the province and took over itself the wholesale stores, greatly reducing their number. It was originally provided that a referendum on the dispensary, or wholesale-store system, should be taken in 1919. But the system did not possess vitality enough to survive more than a year and a half. At the municipal elections of last year several of them were voted out of existence, and so strong was the temperance sentiment in the province that the Government decided to bring in the referendum in 1916 instead of three years later. The result was that on December 11 last, the remaining score of dispensaries went out of existence by a vote of seven to one.

"Manitoba came next. The citizens of the province, by a vote of two to one, decided that they could get along better without liquor-licenses of any kind. The vote was taken on March 13, 1916, and on June 1 following Manitoba was a 'dry' province. Just one month later prohibition came into effect in Alberta, though the electors of the foot-hills province had a year previously voted out the liquor-traffic by a large majority."

In British Columbia the movement was attended by one unique feature:

"A referendum on prohibition was taken in the coast province last September and carried by what seemed a safe majority. However, a provision for a soldiers' vote was attached to the referendum, and, extraordinary as this may appear, the voting has been proceeding among the British Columbia soldiers ever since."

Since The Free Press wrote the returns have come in, and the soldiers in their wet trenches have voted "dry" by a substantial majority. In Quebec, where 85 per cent. of the municipalities were under local option, a modified form of prohibition, patterned on the Gothenburg plan, has been introduced, a measure which, says The Montreal Star, "tried to satisfy everybody and has pleased no one." The Free Press continues:

"The Ontario Government has introduced provincial-wide prohibition by means of legislative enactment. On September 16 last all hotel and wholesale licenses went out of existence, but the legislation provides for a referendum on the question of re-introducing the traffic, to be held in June, 1919. . . .

"The last citadel of the traffic in the maritime provinces, namely, the city of Halifax, fell to the temperance forces last fall.

"One must not forget that on the 14th of this month (January) representatives of the temperance organizations of all the provinces conferred with the Dominion Government at Ottawa and asked for Federal legislation to supplement the measures taken by the provincial legislatures against the liquor-traffic. Specifically the delegation asked for Federal prohibition of the manufacture or importation into Canada of intoxicating liquor as a beverage, or, as an alternative, that a referendum be taken next June on national prohibition as a war-measure."

Britain's oldest colony went on the water-wagon on the first of January. At midnight the whole island of Newfoundland went dry. A prohibition act, becoming effective, stops the importation, manufacture, or sale of intoxicating liquors of every kind within the colony. After this it will be impossible to obtain any alcoholic compound within the colony, except for medicinal, manufacturing, or sacramental purposes; and in order to prevent evasion of the law a long list of patent medicines has been placed under the ban.

A Lucky Prisoner.

Pte. F. Mesley, who comes from Earlscourt, a suburb of Toronto, has had an odd career since he was taken prisoner by the Germans some months ago. Pte. Mesley is an ambitious youth, and while living in the Hun prison camp he learned to speak French and German. He made such rapid progress while recovering from his wounds in a hospital that the captors used him as an interpreter. Pte. Mesley was later interned in Switzerland, and there he learned that he could go to a Swiss college if he was able to pass the required examinations. He did so, and is now taking a course in French, German, Spanish, as well as several commercial subjects under Swiss teachers. Although a prisoner of war, he is by no means wasting his time.

Iron in China.

Iron ore is found in almost every Chinese province, but it is mined extensively in only a few.

Baked Banana.

In lands where the banana flourishes the fruit is often baked without peeling until its rind bursts.

In Moderation.

Nan—Did Clarence make a hit with you? Fan—Well, I'd rather call it a bunt.

His Idea.

Mrs. Blank—How shall I have my new dress made? Blank—Small in the bill.

A WEARABLE SUIT.

Good Effect For Actual Wear and For Modishness.

Especially appropriate for street and travel is this suit of black and brown checked velours, cut Russian blouse, and a skirt inclined to hang in at the bottom. The method of closing, the stringy belt cut diagonally of the check and the seal collar are all interesting. The hat trimming is solely ribbon detail.

THE TRAVELER.

BAD TASTE IN FURNITURE.

A Preachment About Good Lines and Hard Woods.

It must have been William Morris who discovered the bad state of things, for he was the most conspicuous member of the pre-Raphaelite brotherhood, the group of persons who banded themselves together to see if they could not better matters. To make way for better things the bad had to be done away, and Morris faithfully crusaded against the anti-macassar, the whatnot, the floral carpet, the gilded chair, the old black haircloth and the hideous furniture of the time.

He fell short of absolute success because he tried to create a new and better thing. If he had only turned the tide backward and resurrected the beautiful furniture of the eighteenth century the world would have been just so much more full of good and beautiful things. Instead, he made possible by his movement the simplicity of the newer furniture, which, if not a thing of beauty in itself, cleared the decks for action, so that when its time was run somebody else would cast the necessary backward glance.

All this, of course, has taken up until this twentieth century. The backward glance happened some years before the merchants began to feature period styles. In between people realized that there had never been displayed such genius as the designing of furniture in the bygone time. They took to it as ducks to water. Its vogue had increased and grown until the whole modern furniture trade has bent its back to accomplishing this business properly.

Mothercraft Note.

Encourage the child to wait on itself and you will be saved much work and will be giving the child an education which it will never be able to value until it has reached years of discretion. There are so many little helps that can be offered to make work attractive to children. For instance, a successful way to teach a child to put its soiled clothes out of sight is to make for its own use a little laundry bag of some cheerful color and on it embroider the word "Laundry." Hang it on a peg low enough for the child to reach and you will not have to remind the child more than two or three times of its duty.

If you cannot afford to have nursery furniture for the child's room you should at least let the child share a bureau or dressing table with some one so that it can be taught quite young to put hair ribbons, handkerchiefs, etc., in a certain place. Let it understand that the space reserved is all its very own.

TWENTY FIVE YEARS ON THE JOB

H. W. SWEENY
W. B. LANIGAN
F. F. GAUTIER
W. C. BOWLES

THIS is the first of a series of biographical sketches of Canadian Pacific Railway men who have been a quarter of a century and over in harness. These men, principally graduated from headquarters, and by their own perseverance, hard work and faithfulness to duty, gained for themselves high honors in railroad service.

W. B. LANIGAN, assistant freight Traffic Manager of Western Lines, was born at Three Rivers, Que., Oct. 12, 1861. He was educated at St Joseph's College, Three Rivers, and Stanstead College, Quebec. He joined the Canadian Pacific Railway service Sept 18, 1884, as telegraph operator at Sharbot Lake, when the Ontario and Quebec railway was opened between Montreal and Toronto via Smith's Falls and Ottawa. From 1885 to 1886 he was relieving agent on the Ontario Division; 1886 to 1888 agent at Claremont, Myrtle and Dundalk; 1888 to 1891 agent at Galt; 1891 to 1900 travelling freight agent, Toronto; 1901 assistant general freight agent, Toronto, on July 1, 1901, he was appointed general freight agent, Winnipeg. In March, 1908, he was promoted to assistant freight traffic manager of western lines, which position he now holds. He is using the first desk occupied by a freight traffic manager on the C. P. R. lines, and says he would not exchange it for the best mahogany desk made.

FRED E. GAUTIER, purchasing agent, western lines, was born at Gibraltar, in 1854. He was educated in Paris, France. He is a university B. L. His first service was in the French foreign office. He served in the marine department, Canada, also fishery protection service afloat. He was sent to Winnipeg in 1882 by George Stephen, then president of the Canadian Pacific Railway. In March of that year he was clerk in the local freight office. In May he was put in charge of the supplies in General Manager Van Horne's office. In June he was appointed private secretary to Mr. Van Horne. In August he was in charge of purchases, with no title. During three months, in 1884, he was acting local treasurer, while also in charge of purchasing department. In January, 1900, he was appointed assistant purchasing agent, and in February, 1912, he was appointed purchasing agent, which position he now holds. Mr. Gautier has seen the beginning and completion of the line. In 1885 he was sent by General Superintendent Egan to meet the first troop trains, during the Riel Rebellion. He was a captain in the Governor-General's Foot Guards, Ottawa.

HENRY WILLIAM SWEENY, local treasurer, Winnipeg, is a son of the late Col. J. F. Sweeny. He was born at Montreal, Jan. 22, 1868, and educated at Montreal High School. He entered the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway as junior clerk in the treasury department, June 9, 1886, and was appointed cashier in 1893. In April, 1894, he was appointed paymaster on lines east of Montreal. In September, 1897, he was appointed paymaster on all lines east of Fort William and promoted to local treasurer at Winnipeg in 1908. His work embraces territory covered by the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and part of British Columbia, and includes jurisdiction over the paymasters' offices at Winnipeg and Calgary. Mr. Sweeny has been with the company 31 years and more than eight years in his present position as local treasurer at Winnipeg.

WILLIAM C. BOWLES, general freight agent, Western lines, was educated in Commissioner's Schools, Montreal. PLATINUM IS SCARCE.

Its Price Is Soaring, and There Is No Substitute In Sight.

Platinum is now selling at $100 an ounce, and many concerns are even getting a larger price for it. Not so long ago one could buy all this metal wanted for $24 an ounce. Jewelers are finding it unusually difficult to obtain it, and some refiners will not sell it to any one except jewelers.

Metals which are frequently mixed with platinum are osmium, iridium and palladium. The fumes from osmium are very dangerous, and workers with this metal must exercise the greatest care in making alloys, etc. Platinum is generally hardened with 5 or 10 per cent iridium, which is also used to tip fountain pen points.

Platinum is also used extensively in the electrical industry, and now, owing to its scarcity, molybdenum is being substituted. Many attempts to make other substitutes for platinum to be used in jewelry have been made, but without much success. These include cheap alloys as well as white gold, which latter in many cases, however, eventually turns yellow. The success of white gold was rather precarious owing to the difficulty in making people believe that it was really gold, every one having been taught from childhood up that gold is yellow.

A Banquet For Horses.

Banquets prepared exclusively for animals are not altogether unknown in England. The aged inmates of the Home of Rest For Horses, Westcroft farm, Cricklewood, celebrate each New Year's day with a sumptuous repast. The menu for the last banquet consisted of lumps of sugar, chopped carrots, apples, brown and white bread and biscuits. These were mixed together in a wooden box and placed outside each stable door.—London Telegraph.

How the Natives Treat Gorillas.

Natives in the countries inhabited by great apes regard them always as human beings of inferior types, and it is for this reason that for a long time it was found impossible to get hold of an entire gorilla skin, because the savages considered it religiously necessary to cut off the hands and feet of the animals when they killed them, just as they do with their enemies, possibly for the purpose of rendering them harmless in case they should by any chance come to life again.

RUSSIA WILL FIGHT TO A FINISH

CANADIANS CAPTURE OVER 4000 HUN PRISONERS AT VIMY RIDGE

Victory in Famous Engagement More Complete Than Even First Reports Indicated---Flag of United States Receives Baptism of Fire.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 11. — Stewart Lyon cables from Canadian headquarters: "The victory of the Canadians in the battle for Vimy Ridge is much more complete than first reports indicated. The only point which remains obscure this (Tuesday) morning is the position on Hill 145, for the retention of which the enemy fought with the utmost determination Monday afternoon.

"The hill is an earthen fortress of first importance, with numerous galleries far underground and concrete machine gun emplacement. This is isolated on three sides from the German lines and is being assailed by a concentrated fire of artillery as well as our eager infantry. Surrender is not in doubt.

"Much war material was left behind by the fleeing foe, including and as yet an unstated number of heavy guns. The yield of prisoners is much larger than first reports indicated. Already 3,280 men, including sixty officers, have been recorded, and many more are to come. The final total may reach four thousand prisoners to the Canadian troops alone."

UNITED STATES FLAG IN THE FRAY.

To a young Texan, who came to Ontario to enlist and who is now lying wounded in a hospital, belongs the honor of first carrying the American flag into battle in the European war, into which the United States as a belligerent has just entered. CAPT. BURNHAM EXPLAINS DOHERTY ACT AT MEETING OF TEMPERANCE WORKERS

Says Parliament Has no Authority to Interfere With Provincial Rights---Would Support Demand for Referendum.

Capt. Burnham told the temperance workers at the meeting held in the Public Library last night that the Dominion Parliament has no authority to interfere with provincial rights as regards prohibition or otherwise, that the Doherty Act gives the provinces full power to enact bone-dry prohibition, and is the limit to which the Federal authorities can go. He said, however, that if the provinces do everything possible in the way of temperance legislation, he will support a move for Dominion-wide prohibition. He favors, too, the taking of a referendum on this question. All Parliament asks for is a clear mandate from the people.

Mr. M. N. Clarke presided at the meeting, which was fairly attended. Capt. Burnham expressed surprised that there was not a larger turnout when the importance of the problem to be discussed was considered. If the audience, however, lacked anything in numbers, there was plenty of enthusiasm in evidence.

Mr. M. B. Cowan explained that the object of the meeting was to get an expression of popular sentiment. What the temperance people want is Dominion-wide prohibition or at least a vote on the question.

The Doherty Act.

Capt. Burnham explained in detail the Doherty Act passed at the last session of Parliament, the provisions of which are generally understood. This Act provides that in any province that makes the use of liquor as a beverage illegal, all importation to that province will be stopped by Federal authority. The Captain also went extensively into the matter of provincial rights. All these points are settled by the Privy Council.

It would be folly for the Dominion Government to attempt to enforce prohibition in British Columbia or Quebec where the majority of the voters appear to be against it. Parliament refused to interfere in the bilingual issue as that is purely a provincial matter.

Questions and Answers.

Mr. Joseph Wearing asked Capt. Burnham if it was right that dry Ontario should be compelled to tolerate such a menace as exists at Hull. He was told that as a lawyer he should know that it was impossible to prevent a man from doing as he liked once he stepped outside the jurisdiction of the province.

Rev. J. R. Webb and Mr. G. W. Powell asked a number of questions. The former declared that it was unfair on the part of the speaker to deprecate the attendance, as there were other meetings in the city. Capt. Burnham maintained that the proportion of citizens present was not such as to represent the population. He insisted on regarding the meeting as a failure and declared that he could not go to Ottawa and say that he had a mandate from his constituents.

Mr. George Leader — "Would not the Dominion Parliament be justified in passing this measure in order to conserve the food supply?"

Capt. Burnham — "I would favor the stopping of all waste, whether it involved the wearing of fancy vests, Easter hats or top hats. That would be an emergency measure and that is not constitutional when there is no emergency."

Mr. Cowan said the attendance was no criterion of public sentiment. The people did not turn out to local option meetings, but they voted for it.

Mr. A. B. Cunningham insisted that Dominion-wide prohibition be passed as a war measure.

Resolution Adopted.

Rev. R. G. Peever read a resolution passed at the last meeting of the Ministerial Association urging the Dominion Parliament to prohibit the manufacture and importation of liquor, and to make liquor advertising illegal. If the Government hesitates to go this length, then a referendum is asked for, the new law, if endorsed, to go into effect not later than June 1st.

This resolution was accepted by the meeting without a sign of dissent, Capt. Burnham himself voting for it.

Other Speakers.

Mrs. C. H. Shields, on behalf of the W. C. T. U., made an excellent temperance address, and Rev Wm. Kettlewell of Toronto, on behalf of the Dominion Alliance, advocated Federal action

Mayor Duffus and Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A., made short addresses. The latter said that personally he would like to see the province go as far as it had a right to go. So long as he is representative he will do what he can for prohibition.

Some excellent moving pictures were shown after the speeches of the evening.

CANADIAN LOSES 1200 IN FIRST DAY'S BATTLE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Premier Borden is Gratified With Showing of Canadian Soldiers

LONDON, April 11.—Premier Borden favored the Canadian Press with the following message:

"The great victory just won is a glorious beginning of the renewed offensive undertaken by the British forces. It is of special interest to me, as four weeks ago I looked out on Vimy Ridge and realized from what I saw, and more especially from what I was told, the strength of the position and the tremendous task which lay before the Canadians in undertaking to carry it. All Canada will be thrilled with pride by this glorious achievement of our expeditionary force. With equal pride we have heard the tidings of the splendid success which has attended the efforts of all the British forces. When I was in France Sir Douglas Haig asked me to visit the battlefields of the Somme in order that I might realize what had been accomplished. After my visit I came back convinced that the men who had captured the positions which I then saw in our occupancy could not be stayed in their next great advance."

GERMANS MAKE ADVANCES ONLY TO BE DRIVEN BACK

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, April 11.—Attacks were made by Germans yesterday in Volhynia near the town of Hojitche on the Styr River, and in Galicia near Sokal, the war office reports. The statemnt says: The Germans dislodged the Russian patrol guards in the first case and occupied the first line trenches. The enemy was forced back again by the Russian artillery fire.

Near Sokal the enemy, after artillery preparation which resulted in the destruction of the Russian barbed wire entanglements, forced his way into the trenches of the Russian patrol guards. He was unable to maintain his hold and evacuated the trenches after having bayoneted some Russian wounded.

SCHOOL BOARD MEMBERS VISIT

TORONTO AND ARE IMPRESSED WITH VOCATIONAL EDUCATION.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood, chairman of the Board of Education, Dr. Neal and Dr A. A. Fowler were in Toronto yesterday attending the meeting of the Ontario Trustees' Association, and were much impressed with the address given by Mr. D. L. Sprague, principal of the Hamilton Technical School. The address was devoted largely to interesting trustees of the smaller cities and towns in advantages of adding vocational work to the public school curriculum. In this way a pupil finds out what particular part of the industrial world he is best fitted for.

London is building a large technical school, and Brantford is taking steps to start one.

While in Toronto the local trustees had a talk with Dr. J. W. McCulloch, chief officer of health, regarding public school nurses and the health of the schools generally.

The Provincial Teachers' Association was also in session yesterday with Inspector Mowat in attendance.

SPLENDID SUCCESS OF THE BRITISH OFFENSIVE

LONDON, April 11. — British troops yesterday advanced north of the village of Louver, all in the direction of Cambal, to the extent of a quarter of a mile along a front of two thousand yards, and consolidated this gain during the night, telegraphs Reuter's correspondent at the front.

Northwards our patrols are advancing to a belt of forest which runs along the whole of the steep eastern slope of Vimy Ridge. The splendid success of our offensive has created a most interesting situation, and one fraught with tremendous possibilities. The enemy has been forced back upon Pivot, of his previous retreat, in a manner which creates a dangerously sharp salient at this spot. Indeed, a glance at the map suggests there is a distinct outanking of the Germans north of Pivot as it existed before the present fighting.

11,000 GERMANS ARE CAPTURED BY THE ALLIES

OVER A HUNDRED CANNON ALSO TAKEN AS PRIZES.

LONDON, April 11.—It is officially announced that the prisoners taken in the Battle of Arras number over eleven thousand, and that over one hundred cannon, including eight inch howitzers have been captured.

Storm Last Week a Disaster to Telephone Co.

MILES OF POLES ARE DOWN AND REPAIR BILLS ARE HEAVY.

Good Friday's storm of wet snow, followed by a gale of wind and rain provided just the combination to give the telephone and telegraph companies a maximum of trouble. From a few miles west of Toronto, northward to Lake Simcoe, eastward to Napanee along the front, and also via Peterboro and Lindsay to Ottawa, havoc to telephone circuits was terrific. In the neighborhood of one thousand poles were down carrying with them their heavy copper circuits. Near Napanee there was one stretch of five straight miles where not a pole, loaded as they were with wet snow, could resist the fury of the storm.

Although telephone gangs from Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa, and other centres were quickly on the ground, the work of repairs, owing to the great congestion of express and freight traffic, has been very difficult. Material of all kinds was never so scarce, but fortunately the Bell Telephone Company carries a big stock of such emergency supplies as rubber cable, copper wire, etc., so that the work of restoration has been speeded up as much as possible. But the storm has been an expensive one for the telephone company, whose chief concern has been the inconvenience to patrons.

GETS ONE YEAR IN REFORMATORY

J. H. A. HIRD SENTENCED IN TORONTO TODAY.

TORONTO.—J. H. A. Hird, recently arrested in Peterboro for having appropriated fourteen hundred dollars of funds of St. John's Church, here, was today sentenced the Ontario Reformatory. Congregation pleaded for leniency, but the Judge said it was a serious offence.

A SEPARATE PEACE WOULD MEAN BOTH DISGRACE AND TREASON

Russian Party Declares That War Must be Continued to Victorious Conclusion and Freedom of Poland Must be Restored.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, April 11. — The Party of the Fatherland and Army, which includes most of the members of the Petrograd garrison, has passed a resolution strongly supporting the war. "We regard its continuance to a victorious conclusion as essential," reads the resolution. "Namely, a peace restoring the ancient frontiers of Russia and free Poland, including German and Russian territory. A peace without the consent of the Allies would threaten Russian liberty and would mark us with disgrace and treason."

BRITISH TAKE TWO VILLAGES.

LONDON, April 11. — The British captured the village and heights of Monchy le Preux early this morning, according to an official statement. The village of La Bergere was also captured, and satisfactory progress is reported as being made on other parts of the battle front.

FRENCH CAPTURE PRISONERS.

PARIS, April 11. — Active artillery fighting continues over the front between the Somme and the Oise, says an official communication. Patrol encounters occurred at various points, in the course of which we took prisoners. South of the Oise a German attack on one of our posts east of Coucy was broken up by our fire. Near Maisons de Champagne there was severe grenade fighting during the night. In Le Pretre forest artillery firing was rather violent. North of Arrascourt our patrols brought back prisoners. In the region of Ban de Sapt we inflicted losses on the enemy in the couse of an incursion into his lines north of Fontelle.

"OLD GLORY" AT FRENCH FRONT.

PARIS, April 11. — It was decided today that the Lafayette flying squadron, composed of Americans who have distinguished themselves at the front, will change from the French to the American uniform and hereafter carry the American falg at the French front.

MAIL AND MESSAGES CUT OFF!

BERLIN, April 11. — Germany has stopped all mail and telegraph service, direct or indirect, with the United States.

HOWARD INNIS IS FINED TWICE

FOR INFRACTIONS OF THE ONTARIO TEMPERANCE ACT.

Howard Innes, who was to have appeared before the Police Magistrate yesterday, to answer a charge of selling liquor contrary to the Ontario Temperance Act, has up and gone. In his absence two convictions were registered against him and fines imposed amounting to $607.75.

The police have information that will lead to the arrest of the fugitive, and a witness who accompanied him.

A similar charge against Garnet Innes, occupied the attention of the court until six o'clock last night, and the Magistrate reserved judgment.

G. N. Gordon prosecuted, and F. D. Kerr defended the accused.

COUNCIL ASKED TO LEND BAND INSTRUMENTS

TO THE 235TH BATTALION BAND AT OTTAWA.

Bandmaster Hughes of the 247th Bn., now with the 235th, Ottawa, is back in the city, having been delegated by Lt.-Col. Scobell to endeavor to borrow the band instruments from the city for the use of the 235th Bn. Band to be organized.

Many members of the 247th Band are in Ottawa and the instruments are the only drawback. Bandmaster Walter Hughes will be in charge of the new musical organization.

The Council will meet tonight at 7:30 to deal with the matter.

On a charge of drunkenness, Earl Carmichael, 18, of Wodstock was fined $10, and on a second charge of having liquor a penalty of $200 or three months in jail was imposed.

SUPREME COURT NEXT TUESDAY

WILL OPEN BEFORE MR. JUSTICE LATCHFORD.

The non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court will open here next Tuesday before His Honor Mr. Justice Latchford. The court will sit in the County Council chamber and the sitting will likely be short, as only one case is entered for trial.

Only One Case.

McMichael vs. Laing. — In this case Robert Clarke McMichael, of Montreal is suing Archie R. Laing formerly of the city of Peterborough, but now of Halifax, for $1000 upon an agreement entered into between the plaintiff and defendant on the 27th of May, 1913, by which the defendant covenanted to pay plaintiff $1000. The plaintiff also asks for $50 costs. The defendant denies owing the money and claims that the plaintiff did not carry out his part of the agreement.

Gordon and Widdifield for plaintiff; Blake, Lash, Anglin & Cassels for defendant.

BRITISH MARCH AS ON REVIEW

LONDON, April 11.— Describing the extraordinary volume of activity developed in the Arras battle, Reuter's correspondent at Army Headquarters in France says: —

"The constant stream of troops advancing throughout the day all along the front betokens the weight the British are throwing into the offensive. In one village this afternoon I counted within half an hour seven battalions, each headed by a band marching as though on review instead of to battle. The tanks have been in action at various points."

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 11, 1917

TO MAKE ONTARIO BONE DRY.

THE MEETING of temperance workers held last night in the assembly room of the Public Library to agitate for Dominion-wide prohibition, may not have been as large or as representative as the importance of the question under discussion seemed to demand, as Captain Burnham stated, but there was no question as to the enthusiasm of those present. The audience was unanimous on the issue, unanimous, too, as to the methods to be adopted to reach the goal which they have in sight. The contention of those who take an opposite view, to the effect that the temperance people are attempting to force the Dominion Government into adopting unconstitutional measures, was not entirely disposed of. That was the position taken by Captain Burnham in his address, which was forceful and logical and certainly made the point clear.

Every Province in the Dominion has the right to regulate the liquor traffic within its borders, to license or close the shops and bars as the people may decide. Quebec is still under the license system, and in British Columbia, where prohibition was carried by the civilian vote, it now transpires that the ballots cast by the men in uniform have turned the scale.

Has the Dominion Government the right to step in and force prohibition upon these two provinces in the face of the fact that the majority of the voters of each have declared against it? Captain Burnham says Parliament has no such authority, lacking a mandate, and in this he is supported by Minister of Justice Doherty and other legal lights in Canada.

The Doherty Bill, passed at the last session of Parliament, was the exercise of the Federal authority to the constitutional limit. By virtue of that Act any dry province can stop the importation of liquor from Quebec or a foreign country, that is, of course, provided the legislature of such dry province cares to assume the responsibility of prohibiting the private use of liquor as a beverage.

In Ontario the Opposition did not care to recommend any such action. They recognized that any such measure would be unpopular, that it would be regarded as an infringement on personal liberty, but they are quite willing to have Parliament assume the responsibility. Mr. Gillespie, in his address last night, said he was personally in favor of having the Province go to the limit of its power. No one doubts Mr. Gillespie's sincerity, but that does not affect the fact that his party was not of the same mind.

Rev. Wm. Kettlewell, who spoke on behalf of the Dominion Alliance last night, was certainly frank in his statements. He admitted that for the Province to interfere with the private use of liquor would be an unpopular measure, and that some doubt existed as to the right to do so. Captain Burnham scored when he told him that no such doubt could exist when the Federal Parliament conceded that right.

Any province can make itself air-tight so far as the use of liquor as a beverage is concerned, if it avails itself of the power conferred upon it by the Doherty Act. There is no question as to the legality of such procedure. The entire question resolves itself into one of provincial rights and constitutional law. The cause of prohibition, as a war-time measure or otherwise, would not be advanced a step by legislation which would be declared ultra vires by the Privy Council.

As to a referendum, Captain Burnham made it clear that the Dominion Parliament is ready to go as far as authorized to do so by the people. All that is wanted is an unmistakable mandate. Nothing of this nature could be better than the several dry provinces themselves going to the limit of their powers in dealing with prohibition.

WORKING ON SUNDAY.

A PROMINENT local clergyman in speaking to The Review on the question of working on Sunday as a war-time expediency, put the case in a nutshell. If, he said, it is necessary to break up the social and moral fabric of the Empire in order to win this war, then it will be necessary some time in the not very distant future to have another war to restore wht has been demolished.

Leaving the religious feature of the question out of consideration altogether, and the suggestion in favor of permitting Sunday labor has nothing to recommend it. Man requires one day's rest in seven in order to preserve his efficiency, to prevent him from physical as well as moral degeneracy. The legislation which provides for this is a Dominion-wide measure that was secured after years of effort.

There appears no crying necessity at present to abrogate this enactment. Certainly no magistrate has a right to suspend it on his own authority. If an offender is brought before him, all the magistrate has to do is to enforce the law as he finds it.

It has become the fashion these days to cite Lloyd George as an infallible authority on all subjects under the sun. Britain's popular Premier is opposed to Sunday labor, even in the munition factory. He takes the view that the man who secures proper rest, who works reasonable hours, is capable of turning out more of the products of handiwork than if he labors seven days a week and to the limit of his endurance.

The farmer who works from daylight to dark throughout the week would certainly appear to be discharging his full duty to himself and to the Empire. If he toils on the seventh day the result will soon be apparent in a corresponding loss of energy.

HERE AND IN ENGLAND.

BRITISH STATESMEN are not thinking of political fortunes these days, but Canadian politicians can get their minds upon nothing else. All the statesmen across the ocean are concerned with is the war; all that occupies the waking hours of the politicians here is how to get back to power. In England they know how a general election would paralyze industries and retard the war. In Canada the leaders of one party care more for party success than for victory for the Empire.

THE CITIZENS MEAN BUSINESS.

THERE HAVE BEEN some pessimistic prophecies to the effect that the Greater Peterborough Association, the organization of which was perfected at the Grand Opera House Monday night, will go the way of so many other civic bodies and accomplish little or nothing of benefit to the city. It must be said, however, that no organization ever launched in Peterborough was so thoroughly representative as the one now in existence. None were ever called into existence under similar circumstances. The future for the new body of boosters looks bright, and the opportunities of the members are numerous.

The various points brought out by the speakers at Monday night's meeting are set forth in another column. The statement is worthy of preservation as it is an epitome of the history, the present and the future of Peterborough. The speakers who dilate on the natural and artificial advantages of this city are not indulging in idle exaggeration. Peterborough has been favored by Nature, and the men who in the past shaped the destiny of the city have built, and those who are in charge of the civic affairs today are building, carefully and wisely.

The outlook for this city justifies the highest brand of optimism. When Peterborough is made a lake port by the completion of the Trent Valley Canal, when radial railways run through the fertile regions that surround the city, when the summer resort to the north is made easier of access, it may yet be demonstrated that Mayor Duffus is not out in his calculations when he predicts a population of over thirty thousand before the Centennial celebration three years hence.

The Greater Peterborough Association is made up of committees upon which have been appointed the leading residents of the city. There is not a suspicion of favoritism or class advantages in the entire organization. All grades of society are represented in the membership, and hearty co-operation is all that is required to achieve the objects of the Association.

HOME DEFENCE FORCE.

THE GOVERNMENT has issued the following official statement concerning the movement to raise a force of 50,000 men for home defence:

In the course of a week or two the last of the Canadian expeditionary forces now in Canada will have left for Europe to continue their training, after which they will be sent on to the firing line. In order that Canada may not be unprepared, when these men leave, for any emergency, the Government has formulated plans for a Canadian Defence Force, and the working out of the plan for raising the 50,000 men desired for this purpose is now under way.

The militia regiments throughout the Dominion are asked to provide the men for this force. Already the staffs have been chosen in most cases, and the appeal for recruits is being made for the first time today. The appeal is being made to those thousands of good Canadians whose family obligations or other responsibilities have stood in the way of their going abroad. Major-General S. C. Mewburn, a well-known and experienced soldier, has been chosen to direct the work.

Canada must not be left unprepared to meet any emergency which may arise. The Canadian expeditionary force has sadly depleted the militia units of the able-bodied men who could be of service to defend Canada in case of an attack from any quarter. No one knows what may happen in time of war, and the authorities would be lacking in their duties if they did not have preparations made to meet any emergencies. Thus, the call comes to those men who are unable to go overseas to step into the breach made by the departure of the overseas troops and take up their share of the burden which their citizenship in the Dominion imposes upon them. Men are needed and men will be found. "I voice the feeling at the front," says Sir Robert Borden in regard to this plan, "when I appeal to Canadians to support the proposals to partially mobilise the active militia of Canada."

The term of enlistment, training, clothing, equipment and subsistence are the same as for overseas service. Separation allowances for married men are allowed in addition to pay.

In order to bring before the men of Canada the need of the country, the Federal Government is conducting an advertising campaign in the press. The first of the advertisements appears in the current issue of this newspaper.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THE TEMPERANCE question must certainly be getting tired of being kicked around the arena.

• • • •

UNLESS THE UNITED STATES hurries its troops over they may not be in time to be in at the death.

• • • •

THERE IS HARDLY LEFT in all the world a civilized nation willing to have any truck or trade with the Germans.

BRAZIL may not be able to do much in the war, but every atom of moral support helps some, and Brazil has at least put herself on record.

• • • •

THE MAN who preaches a speedy end of the world should meet with little difficulty in making converts if he proclaimed his views in Germany.

WOMAN HAS AGAIN demonstrated her fitness for the franchise. One of the best speeches at last night's temperance meeting was made by Mrs. Shields, who represented the W. C. T. U.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH"

Some points that were brought out at the Greater Peterborough public meeting Monday night were as follows:—

The enlistment in the overseas forces from Peterborough is the second highest in Canada in proportion to population.

Peterborough is situated in almost exactly the centre of the population of Canada, one-half being east and the other half west of this city.

Peterborough has direct railway connection with all parts of the Dominion and is on the direct all-rail and rail and water routes to the Northwest.

The Trent waterway will this year give water communication with Lake Ontario and in a couple of years with the Georgian Bay.

Hydro-electric power is delivered to the factories at a rate as cheap as any and cheaper than in almost every other municipality. Actual results show that ten-hour power has been delivered at the rate of $13.44 per h. p. per year.

The net debt of Peterborough is the second lowest per head of population of all the cities of Ontario, the lowest being $11.74 lower than in Peterborough and the highest $423.18 higher.

The taxes collected for municipal purposes is the third lowest of the cities of Ontario, the lowest being 61 cents lower than here and the highest $31.34 higher.

The combined municipal and school rate in Peterborough is the sixth lowest in Ontario, the lowest being 11.85 lower and the highest $33.76 higher.

Educational facilities in Peterborough are unsurpassed.

The summer resorts, easily accessible from Peterborough, are among the most attractive and beautiful in the world.

Some Possibilities.

A national highway to connect with the highway to be constructed along the front.

A national highway from Holland's Landing, which means Toronto, to Ottawa by way of Peterborough, thus placing this city on two national highways.

A radial railway to Lake Ontario which will bring to Peterborough a large number of people who have not now railway facilities, and will connect the city with the railways running along the front.

An electric railway to the north, connecting Peterborough with the territory to the north and giving quick communication with the summer resorts.

Upon the completion of the Canada Central Railway, to be constructed from Montreal to the Georgian Bay, north of Stoney Lake, the continuance of the electric railway to connect with it will place Peterborough on another great railway.

A united effort by all in this district will accomplish these.

OHIO PAPER IN AN EDITORIAL DISCUSSES THE ETERNAL FEMININE

The following is an editorial from The Cincinnati Time-Star. It will interest those who regard the subject matter of the editorial as a debatable question and will be referred to at the Woman's Suffrage Meeting in the Grand Opera House on April 17:

The Eternal Feminine From Montana.

This editorial is written from a sense of duty, but it is written with the kindliest spirit. The first woman to become a member of the United States Congress was called upon Thursday night to vote for or against her country entering a war provoked by the piracy of the imperial government of Germany. She was asked to uphold the honor of the nation.

Miss Rankin of Montana failed to answer to her name when it was twice called on the first roll call. On the second roll call she arose, weeping, and declared, "I want to stand by my country, but I can not vote for war." Miss Rankin failed to register her vote until called on by fellow members of the House, and she then whispered "No." It was necessary for the clerk of the House to go to her to discover the character of her vote.

It seems an anti-climax to the hailed advent of a woman into our national legislative councils. After the triumphant progress in a flower-laden automobile to the Capitol, duly registered by numerous photographs, tears, and a hesitant, whispering vote on a momentous issue!

The remonstrance, "Oh, she's a woman, and it was a pretty tough question that confronted her," is accepting our argument. Our sympathy goes out to Miss Rankin. But she conclusively proved that woman's place is not on the firing line, legislative or military. There are few Joans of Arc or Moll Pitchers. A woman's part in war must ever be the great, constructive, silent work behind the lines: the alleviation of suffering, and, above all, the inspirational place she occupies in the heart of a soldier.

We are not now quarrelling with Miss Rankin's vote, although she declared for a quality of pacifism that amounts to non-resistance to an invader. We do not doubt her patriotism or her sincerity. And we would not appear ungallant. But we must assert that Miss Rankin chose a poor place and a poor time for the woman's tears that man must ever respect.

Mobilization of the 57th Regt.

Authority having been granted for the mobilization of the 57th Regiment at Peterborough up to full war strength, an office will be opened in the recreation room at the Armories from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. daily, commencing on Monday, April 9th, for enrolment of recruits.

The medical examination and enlistment will take place later, and drill will commence when the number of recruits warrants it.

The officers in charge of the enrolment will be as follows:

Wednesday—Capt. Watt, Lieut. Cook.
Thursday — Major V. Eastwood, Lieut. Comstock.
Friday—Capt. Watt, Capt. Lech.
Saturday— Capt. Meyers, Lieut. Munro.

The regiment when recruited is to form a unit of the Canadian Defence Force.

D. WALKER, Lt.-Col.
O. C. 57th Regiment.

Clerk — Let me show you our latest machines. We have a motor car now that can climb any hill on earth.

Chauffeur — That's nothing; the last one you sold me tried to climb a tree.

Capt. G. E. McKegney, chaplain of the 215th Battalion, who will go as a private if not allowed to go as a chaplain, has tendered his resignation as rector of Trinity Anglican Church, Brantford, but the congregation will not accept it.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Forgetfulness is the noblest remedy for injuries.

People who talk a great deal seldom find time to say anything.

Satan is the father of lies and matrimony is the mother of excuses.

People make much of little troubles if they have never had any great ones.

Singular as it may seem, burning thoughts are not produced by blockheads.

Remember what Jonah said to the whale: "You can't keep a good man down!"

Women have a clever way of saying mean things that men can never hope to equal.

If a man asks you to tell him his faults, it is a sign that he thinks he hasn't any.

Some women hardly get a wedding dress before they begin to look up material for a divorce suit.

It isn't work that kills. It's the worry caused by having to work that increases an undertaker's bank balance.

When a man is dressed in a little brief authority he is even more conspicuous than a woman in the present style of abbreviated skirt.

AN ARTISTIC COURTSHIP

By ETHEL HOLMES.

Gabriel Martel painted pictures for a living, but made a very poor one. At last he gave it up and became an instructor in his art. He was now a widower, an old man, and had one child, a daughter, Winifred, about twenty years old. The rooms in which he lived and gave lessons were in a studio building for persons of his profession.

One spring morning Winifred was sitting by an open window in the living room, facing the street, making clothes for herself, for her father had no money with which to buy them.

She had a very sweet face and as she bent over her work formed an attractive picture. Beardslee, who had just returned from Florence, Italy, where he had been studying and was considered a genius, saw the girl at the window, and—well, he fell in love with her. I don't mean his love was full fledged the moment he laid eyes on her, but that is when it began.

He noted the position of the room in which she was sitting and, crossing the street, entered the studio building, mounted the stairs and proceeded to the door leading to the room. His object was the acquaintance of that girl. How he was to make it he didn't know, but he was full of assurance and resource and trusted to these and luck. On the door was painted, "Gabriel Martel, Instructor In Painting."

Opening the door, he saw Mr. Martel standing over a small boy whom he was endeavoring to teach to draw the outline of a goblet. Winifred sat in an adjoining room.

"Beg pardon," said Beardslee; "I am desirous of taking some lessons in painting."

"Are you a beginner?" asked the instructor.

"Oh, no! I have had some practice."

Martel stated the terms, which were satisfactory, and Beardslee said he would take a lesson then and there. He sat down at an easel faced toward Winifred.

As soon as Martel had disappeared Beardslee took out some pieces of thin ivory he had in his pocket and began to paint a miniature portrait of Winifred. If his love for the girl was not yet full fledged, his love for his subject was. At any rate, he made one of those rapid strokes of genius which will sometimes come without the slightest effort, but which will elude an artist on more pretentious work. Meanwhile other pupils had come in, and Beardslee heard Martel talking to them. In this way he kept a knowledge of the instructor's position, and whenever he came near the screen Beardslee would hide the miniature and begin to daub on the subject assigned him. But he had asked that he might not be disturbed, and his instructor did not visit him till after he had finished the miniature sketch.

A few days later Winifred was looking over the art columns of a Sunday paper and saw among the pictures of moment reproduced there a picture called "At Work," by the newly arrived celebrity Clarence Beardslee. It was a girl sitting by a window sewing. The work was valued at $1,000.

"Isn't that like this window, papa?" she said, showing it to her father, "and that work stand is an exact reproduction of mine."

"And the face is yours, too," said the parent.

"It says the picture will be on exhibition at Gambrell's for a few days. I'm going to see it."

The same afternoon she visited Gambrell's picture store, and there was the miniature, into which the artist had found room to give a suggestion of the window and the work stand. She had no sooner looked upon the face of the girl than she recognized herself. The likeness was perfect. She stood looking at it in a dream of wonder.

There is a break in the story which cannot be supplied. When Winifred went home to her father happiness bubbled up in her like a spring of limpid water. She had seen at the picture store the would be pupil of the day before. The break in the story is how did he come to be there when she was there? Nobody but himself knows, and he has never told. All Winifred said to her father about the miniature was that it was a rare work of art. The minx had brought it home with her.

There is more that does not appear in this version of the story, and that is, What was going on between Beardslee and Winifred during the next month? at the end of which Martel received the surprise of his life. His former pupil of one lesson entered his instruction room and presented a card, on which was the name Clarence Beardslee. Martel looked at it, then up at the visitor and wondered if one or the other of them had not lost his senses.

Winifred ran from the other room and wrapped both arms around her father.

"I came," said Beardslee, "to ask you, Mr. Martel, for your daughter."

"My daughter! You, Clarence Beardslee!"

"Yes."

Then Winifred explained matters, which it is not necessary to explain here, for they are explained already, except the breaks, which in case of lovers no one can explain but themselves.

"The Worker" remains the best of Clarence Beardslee's small offhand hits. It is a gem.

Enjoying Canadian Apples.

Hon. W. H. Hearst, Premier of Ontario, has received the following letter from the King's Canadian Red Cross Convalescent Hospital at Busby Park, England: "I beg to convey to you, as representative of the Ontario Government, the sincere thanks of myself, the officers and men of this institution, for the splendid gift of 150 boxes of apples which arrived here Monday last. The patients are simply revelling in their lusciousness, and it is indeed good to witness the enjoyment they seem to get out of every bite." The letter is from Lieut.-Colonel H. R. Casgrain, officer commanding the hospital.

Operated Old Mill.

Every collection of Toronto views published in recent years contains a picture of the Old Mill on the Humber, one of the suburban beauty spots of the city. This scene has been painted and photographed thousands of times. It will surprise most persons to hear that the man who operated the old mill has just died at the age of 84 years. Jacob Atkinson owned and operated the historical old mill as a foundry back in the 60's of the last century, and it was finally burned down, having remained from that time the picturesque ruin like that it is to-day.

GET READY FOR GARDEN

How to Plan Your Work and Work to a Plan.

EVERYBODY GROW EATABLES

First of Series of Timely Hints—Get Your Ground Ready Now, but Don't Be in Too Much of a Hurry to Put in the Seed.

(By S. C. JOHNSTON, Vegetable Specialist, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

At no time in many years has the necessity and importance of the home vegetable garden been so clearly shown as for this coming summer. France, our wonderful ally, has since the French Revolution been a nation of small farmers, her people of small means cultivating some available land to produce a portion of their own household foodstuffs and to increase the wealth of the nation; Great Britain, threatened with a shortage of foodstuffs, determined to cultivate all available land possible to offset this shortage and we in Canada bending every energy toward facilitating these great nations should do all in our individual power to do something in the hope of helping ourselves and assisting the commercial vegetable growers who are seriously handicapped by the shortage of labor in the production of vegetable foodstuffs. Every city, town, and village dweller has an opportunity to help this great work, in that there are hundreds of available plots now practically unproductive which could be made grow vegetables and thus add to the wealth of the country.

Vegetables an Important Food.

Vegetables should form an important portion of the daily food of the average human being, for they possess qualities which we are told are essential in the proper digestion of the heavy foods, such as meats. To help you do your part in your backyard this column will discuss some of the practical problems in connection with vegetable growing during the next few weeks.

All backyards cannot be prepared in one year to grow vegetables of an excellent quality. Some portion of the yard, however, may be devoted to this purpose, or, if it is convenient, there are usually many vacant lots which are not too far from one's place of abode which possibly could be devoted to the growing of vegetables.

Some Essentials.

First of all it is essential that the vegetable garden, no matter how small, be planted according to some plan or rule. No one attempts to build a house or to set out a perennial flower border without using some drawing or chart to go by. Why should the vegetable garden be treated differently? Haphazard planting will prove a failure, and in order to overcome this it should be remembered in laying out the garden that—

(1) Tall plants will be most effective if placed behind low ones, not intermingled with them.

(2) All plants closely allied should be grown together, not in the same row, but in rows adjoining one another.

(3) The fences may be decorated with vine crops which may be supported on the fences by means of strings or lattice work.

(4) All quickly maturing vegetables should be planted in a portion of the garden by themselves so that they may be harvested and the ground used for other crops later on.

The work of planning the garden to determine what vegetables and how much of each is to be grown will be influenced by one's individual tastes. One should grow an abundance of such crops as one consumes the most.

Secure Seed Now—But Plant Only When Soil is Ready.

The backyard gardener should decide very early which crops are to be grown and should purchase his seed as soon as possible. It must be remembered, however, that much of this seed may be wasted if it is planted too early in the season. The soil must be warm to receive the seeds, and amateur gardeners must have patience until it is certain that good growing weather is really here. It is possible in ordinary seasons to plant some vegetables in April, and yet many backyard vegetable enthusiasts will be well advised to wait until the middle of May before doing very much in the garden.

In No Hurry.

"Too many people," said a clergyman, "regard their religion as did the little boy in the jam closet. His mother pounced on him suddenly. He stood on tiptoe, ladling jam with both hands from the jam pot to his mouth.

"'Oh, Jacky!' his mother cried. 'And only last night you prayed to be made a saint!'

"His face, an expressionless mask of jam, turned toward her.

"'Yes, but not till after I'm dead,' he explained."

The Word "Belfry."

The word "belfry" had originally no connection with "bell," an idea which is now intimately associated with the term. The first meaning given is "watchtower," from the middle English "berfry," a watchtower. The first part of this word is connected with "borough," the second with "free." As the practice grew of hanging "bells" in such towers people reminded themselves of the fact by changing the word "berfry" into the modern "belfry."

Game In Manchuria.

The long haired tiger is found throughout Manchuria wherever there is hilly country, but is never found on the plains. It is extremely difficult to bag and is by no means numerous. In addition to tigers the following game may be found in Manchuria: Bear (black and brown), wapiti, Sika deer (two species), roedeer serow, wild pig, leopard and lynx. All, however, are scarce and hard to bag with the exception of roedeer and pig. —London Globe.

Symphonic Din.

It is said that a din will be produced in a new Richard Strauss symphony by the following instruments: Eight horns, four trumpets, four trombones, two bass tubas, two harps, an organ and cymbals, triangles, tomtom and a shepherd's bell; also eighteen first violins, sixteen second violins, twelve violas, ten violoncellos, eight double basses, two large flutes, oboes and clarinets.

Tragic Story of Belgian Nuns

A BARN ... in a field, a few yards back from the chaussee which leads to the trenches. Flemish barns are small, thin-roofed structures, through which the winter winds howl dolefully. The ground floor usually accommodates the pigs, which no peasant, however poor, is without, the poultry, and the garnerings of the field—potatoes, beans, onions, and cabbage. The loft contains fodder which keeps the cow through the winter.

This particular barn at one time contained similar farm-stock. On grey winter mornings, when the fog clung to the trees and spread over the stunted shrubberies, the peasant wife would stand inside its open door threshing the beans with a great unwieldy flail. In the sty, hard by, the pigs grunted. Before the door the fowls gossiped. In the summer the scene was much the same, except for the absence of the greyness and fog and the increased size of the pigs and fowls. A monotonous contentment held the place until one day, when the sun blazed down on the plains and the barges on the canal basked in the heat, word came to the peasant wife that all was not well with her country.

That was the beginning of the change. The barn was desolate during the early autumn months after that August day. The peasant was safe in France when the new occupants arrived hurriedly and settled in the cottage. And soon all the cottages round about were filled, and still new occupants arrived.

One night, when the fields lay brown beneath the harvest moon, a dozen homeless stragglers stopped before the door where the peasant wife used to flail her beans. Their journey had been long and tortuous. Through clumps of forest, over ploughed fields, across streams, and past solemn rows of barges which everywhere dot the canals in Flanders, came this strange human procession, their eyes wide in wonderment at the sights which met them. They walked with difficulty, for their long, black skirts trailed heavily in the sodden fields. One of them had seen 83 winters. She could not walk, and had not walked for many months. Her journey was made in a wheelbarrow, which the others in turn trundled.

This was part of a colony of nuns whose convent near Bruges had to be abandoned when the enemy marched into Belgium. Their first glimpse of the world outside their sacred walls was when their own countrymen were brought to Bruges wounded. They were obliged to pass by the convent, and many received their first dressings from the hands of the black-robed sisters. Others, too, on their way to battle, stopped at the convent walls and turned in through the gate to receive refreshment. Some four or five hundred came, every day, for weeks, and were looked after by the nineteen nuns—for, although prosperous, the colony was small.

The nineteen left their home together the night they started out to find a new lodging in the part of the country where the enemy had not yet penetrated. Seven became separated, and wandered aimlessly about the fields. They never reached the small corner which has been kept free from the German heel, and are now somewhere within the area from which no news comes.

These were the twelve refugees who paused before the barn door. They occupied the barn for many weary months. For a bed, they had the bare loft, with a thin layer of straw; for a coverlet, a strip of carpet from their chapel. The government allowed each 30 centimes a day for the purchase of such food as could be purchased. It was mainly potatoes. Their neighbors were mostly refugees like themselves, and could give them but little help. But they managed to exist through the first winter months, even the old Marie, who was carried in the wheelbarrow. Those months brought more unaccustomed sights to their eyes. For that part of Flanders, though not actually invaded, was within range of the enemy's guns and within the airman's radius. The barn escaped both bombs and shells, though the fields round about were ploughed with them. In the spring the nuns were discovered by an Englishwoman who motored up and soon afterwards established a depot a stone's throw away.

In the big subterranean living room of their new home the nuns told me of their experiences. They were very comfortable then, having been installed in an old chateau which had survived other wars. In one of the great rooms upstairs was a bed which is held, if not in reverence, at least in awe by the peasants all around, for the fearful Duke of Alva, when on one of his visits to the town, had slept in it. The nuns are still there, and still hear the booming of cannon, the whistle of shells, and the hideous noise of bombs. But although old Marie still shudders when the tocsin from the belfry warns that aircraft is on the wing, she does not know the fear she felt when she lay in the barn loft. She has plenty of food and a warm bed, and never ceases giving thanks to the Blessed Virgin for her deliverance from the hand of the enemy. —London Times.

Treat Maniacs With Water.

The modern physician is soothing lunatics with nothing more or less than water, according to an article by John E. Lind, M.D., in the March Popular Science Monthly. There are three ways of giving the water treatment—by the pack, by the "Scotch douche" and by the continuous bath. All three methods are meeting with notable success.

How to Economize Labor For the Seamstress or Mother.

The mother of a family of little ones who must be housekeeper, cook, nurse maid and seamstress as well as mother often wishes that she had two pairs of hands and four eyes. Sometimes she wishes that the days might be longer or the hours less fleeting.

There is only one solution of the busy mother's problem, and that is to systematize all the branches of her work so that the very smallest amount of time and labor will be consumed in the various tasks, and there is no work where system is more generally misunderstood or to which it may be more readily applied than the family sewing. By family sewing is meant the making of practical clothes for both mother and children, such as underwear, dresses, guimpes, aprons and rompers, which are changed every day and for that reason must be simple of construction and durable enough to look well after many trips to the washtub.

A word about materials is important, for here is where the real saving of labor and time is to be gained. There is absolutely no economy in buying cheap materials for small children's clothes, yet it is not necessary to spend large sums for them. There are excellent materials made especially for children's clothes and designed to withstand the wear and washing that will be given these garments. Frequently on remnant counters one can procure excellent goods that have been greatly reduced in price, but it never pays to buy cheap calico. Well made garments of durable materials are an asset in a family of small children, for such garments may be passed along as one child outgrows them, thus lessening the labor of sewing.

After carefully selecting the various materials with a view to their wearing qualities and fastness of color, make an intelligent selection of patterns by which each garment is to be cut. It will be well to consider what constitutes an intelligent selection of patterns.

First.—The purpose for which the garment is to be used.

Second.—The actual work required in making.

Remember that straight seams are easier to stitch than curved ones, that tucks and plaits require time and are difficult to iron; that excessive fullness makes both washing and ironing more laborious and, like tucks and plaits, requires extra material; that garments which may be adjusted by slipping on over the head eliminate the need of time for making buttonholes and sewing on buttons and that patterns with a small number of pieces save time in cutting and sewing.

Two or three buttonholes to a garment are not much of a task to a woman with nimble fingers who picks up such work between times while coasting or watching the little ones at play, but where a number are needed it is best to buy buttonhole and button strips by the yard, ready to stitch under the laps of dresses and rompers.

Wing Effects Graceful.

Wing effects at the back of evening dresses are distinctive. They are generally produced by tulle draperies, and these are often garnished with metal threads. They float gracefully about the arms and also fall over the train at the back.

FILL THE CARS

A LITTLE more co-operation between the merchants and the railways will do much to relieve the present freight situation. The railways are not trying to shift the responsibility on to the public, but are asking the public's help. Much more tonnage, for instance, could be handled with the existing locomotive power and terminal facilities if cars were loaded to capacity instead of being so often only two-thirds full. In the old days when traffic was lighter, it mattered less to the railways if a shipper did not use all the space he paid for—that was the shipper's loss. But now it is realized that the extravagance of one shipper may cause delay to others owing to the limited amount of locomotive power and terminal facilities. The shortage is not so much in equipment as in train crews, and labor in the yards and roundhouses. Anything which can help to secure quicker clearance and freer movement in the yards, helps to speed up the movement of freight. Another drawback to the economical movement of freight is that a great many consignees order not the full carload of freight, but merely the minimum allowed under the classification. It would materially help to solve the problem if in placing orders consignees would order enough to fill a car to capacity instead of the minimum, which very often does not represent more than half a carload.

The question of the capacity of cars is itself the subject of investigation. The standard of loading grain, for instance, has remained the same for many years, but improvement in the engineering of cars has gone on steadily, so that the modern freight car can bear stresses greatly in excess of what was possible twenty years ago. The result is that there is prospect of considerably increasing the load line on quite a large proportion of freight equipment, thus increasing the train capacity without requiring additional train crews. Grain cars rated for MEASURING DEPTH OF GRAIN IN CAR.

80,000 lbs. are found capable of carrying over 90,000.

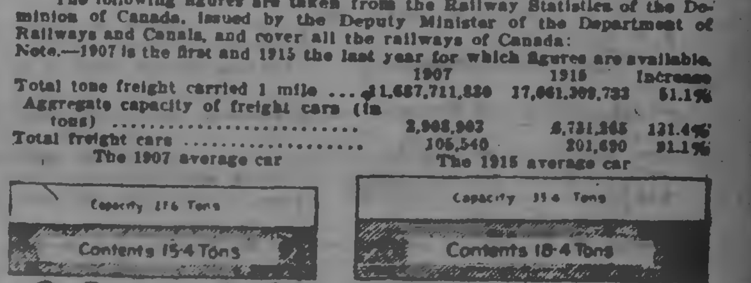
It has been figured that if the average load could be increased on Canadian railways in 1917 by five times over that of 1915, this would be equivalent to 54,800 additional cars, requiring no additional locomotives or man-power.

Canadian business men are, therefore, being urged to co-operate with the railways in their endeavor to increase the existing carrying capacity, by using to better advantage the present available rolling stock. Light bulky commodities, of which there are many, should be loaded to the full cubic capacity of cars. Heavier freight should be loaded to the full carrying capacity which is 10% in excess of their stencilled capacity.

The following figures are taken from the Railway Statistics of the Dominion of Canada, issued by the Deputy Minister of the Department of Railways and Canals, and cover all the railways of Canada:

Note.—1907 is the first and 1915 the last year for which figures are available.

	1907	1915	Increase
Total tons freight carried 1 mile	11,687,711,830	17,661,309,733	51.1%
Aggregate capacity of freight cars (in tons)	2,908,903	6,731,365	131.4%
Total freight cars	106,540	201,690	91.1%



The car capacity increased 5.8 tons. The contents increased 3.0 tons. 48% of the additional capacity provided was not used.

The public is asked to co-operate with the railways in an endeavor to remedy the existing car shortage.

It can be done by utilizing to better advantage the present available rolling stock.

By increasing the average car load to 23.4 tons or 5 tons more than during 1915 would be equivalent to the placing of 54,800 additional cars in service.

Light bulky commodities, of which there are many, should be loaded to the full cubic capacity of cars. Heavier freight should be loaded to the maximum carrying capacity authorized.

ANGLICANS HELD ANNUAL MEETINGS MONDAY NIGHT

Officers Elected for Current Year---All Report Progress in Membership and Finance.

The annual vestry meeting of St. John's Church was held on Monday evening and was attended by a large number of the congregation. Canon Cornish presided.

The financial statement for the past year was presented by W. R. Morris, the people's warden, and adopted by the vestry. Mr. Morris also reported that the Easter offering was practically sufficient to pay off all indebtedness in connection with the new electric lighting system. Dr. W. T. Holloway was elected people's warden for the ensuing year, and Mr. W. F. Johnston was continued by the rector, Canon Davidson, as his warden.

Reports were received from the various church organiaztions, all showing earnest and faithful work and a year of progress, and much appreciation was expressed by the wardens and others of the work of the ladies of the congregation.

Appreciation of the work of Mr. R. J. Devey, organist, was shown by an increase in salary being unanimously voted him.

The following are the members of the advisory board for the ensuing year: Mr. J. A. Aylmer, Dr. Geo Burnham, Mr. H. Killaly, Mr. A. E. Coulthard, Dr. Halliday, Messrs. Geo. Lenton, J. J. Howden, W. J. Kent, A. Kingdon, H. W. Morphet, A. W. Turner, A. Stevenson

Messrs. F. R. Yokome, G. A. Smith and H. Killaly were appointed a committee for the purpose of beautifying the church grounds and were authorized to expend up to $200 for the purpose.

Mr. G. A. Smith was appointed chairman of the missionary committee with power to name his own committee.

The lay delegates appointed were Messrs G A. Smith, Hy. Rush, and J. A. Aylmer.

Canon Cornish Appreciated.

Canon Cornish formally announced his recall by the Bishop of Qu'Appelle to Yorkton, and in connection with it stated that his work with St. John's for the past year had been for him a most happy year of service. Upon motion a formal minute of St. John's appreciation of Canon Cornish was entered upon the minutes and Mr. Johnston for the congregation thanked the Canon for his work and conveyed to him the deep appreciation of St. John's for his services and the esteem and affection in which he is held not only by the people of St. John's but by many of the citizens of Peterborough generally.

AT ALL SAINTS'.

The annual Easter vestry meeting of All Saints' Church was held in the parish hall on Monday evening. The rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, M.A., took the chair promptly at 8 o'clock, and for three hours the large number present listened with keen interest to the reports of the year's work and discussed many matters of church business.

After the opening exercises Mr. E. L. Davis, the people's warden, read the financial statement, which proved to be one of the most encouraging in the history of the parish. There was an increase in the current collections of $451.50, exclusive of the annual Easter offering. This enabled the wardens, not only to meet all curernt expenses but to wipe out the current floating debt of the previous year. Much interest was aroused by the announcement that the Easter collection had amounted to $700.55.

The mission report was read by the rector's warden, Mr. Wm. Buller, and showed that $354.62 had been contributed during the current year

Mr. R. N. Jones read the building fund report, indicating that the building debt had been reduced to the extent of $1672, four large accounts having been completely wiped out

The Sunday school report, read by the superintendent, Mr. C. E. Sisson, was very encouraging. At present there are 417 enrolled, not including an infant roll of 54 The highest attendance for the year was 338. The treasurer's report was read by Miss Cairns and showed a balance of $88. The children's Lenten offerings this year amounted to over $33.

Mrs. R. E Clarke presented the report of the Women's Guild, which under the enthusiastic presidency of Mrs. R. N. Jones has worked most zealously to reduce the church debt The total amount raised by the ladies was $1011.25, not including the proceeds from the interest boxes, which amounted to $243. The rector took occasion to thank the Guild for its efforts, and congratulated the members on their splendid achievement

Mrs. Beatty presented the report of the Woman's Auxiliary and that of the Chancel Guild. The interesting item in the former was the sending of a bale to the Little Pine Reserve, valued at $43.95, and in the latter a balance of $9. The report of the Junior W. A., read by Miss Mott, showed a balance of $11.

Mr. Chandler, in presenting the report of the choir, mentioned that eight of its members were in khaki. The present membership of the choir is 38.

Rev. R B. Grobb, in the course of his report, referred to the honor roll of the church, which at present includes 129 names Of these, 10 have been killed, 11 wounded and three are prisoners of war.

The auditors' report was presented by Mr James Edgar.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

Rector's Warden (appointed by the Rector)—Mr. Edgar Worth.

People's Warden—Mr. Gray Copping.

Vestry Clerk—Mr. Roberts

The meeting, which opened with the singing of "O God our help in ages past," closed at 11:15 with the Doxology, God Save the King, and the Benediction.

HIGH MILK TESTS OF CITY DAIRIES

STANDARD OF MILK MAY BE RAISED.

Thirty-one tests of milk samples taken from milk men in the city were laid before the Board of Health last night. The city bylaw required that milk must test at least 3 per cent. of fat. In not one of the samples was the milk found wanting. There were one or two right at the mark and some tested as high as 5.20.

The results of the tests will be published when samples have been secured from all the milk men.

Dr. Amys, M.O.H., was strongly of the opinion that the milk standard should be raised to 3.25, and that the council should also amend the bylaw fixing the standard for cream at 20 per cent. and whipping cream at 32 per cent.

A resolution to the City Council, asking that these amendments be made was passed on a motion of Dr. Amys and Ald. Saunders

SAVE but HOW?

You are daily admonished by Bankers, Cabinet Ministers, Judges, and by all the Press of the Country, to save and be thrifty In fact, the stamps on our letters are cancelled by the admonition to "Save, Save, Save, etc."

Outside of the Bankers' Association, who have recommended the Banks, very few other suggestions have been made

Why has no person suggested or recommended the greatest thrift producer and the greatest anti-poverty institution known to the Public?

For instance, let us suppose two thousand men at say age 25 propose to test this principle for say twenty years, and one-half of them invest a small sum annually in a bank and the other thousand deposit an equal amount annually with this anti-poverty institution. Now, if I can show you that those who deposited with the anti-poverty institution not only received more than those who deposited in the bank, [illegible] institution paid to the beneficiaries of the unfortunate depositors who were unable to continue their payments, the large additional sum of $159,000.00 which the banks kept for their stockholders. WOULD THAT INTEREST YOU?

The banks are all right, but if I can show you that this anti-poverty institution not only gave better security and actually gave better returns, but in addition they gave a Bond that if anything unforeseen, such as death, happen you, they would protect you and your estate to any extent desired, WOULD IT INTEREST YOU?

The above facts can be verified to you by calling at, 'phoning or writing the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, 402 Water Street, and such action on your part places you under no obligation whatever.

RECOMMEND NEW SEWERS TO BE BUILT THIS YEAR

On Princess and Prince Streets From George to Park.

Recommendations were moved by the Board of Health last night that the clay construct sewers on George Street from Prince to Princess, and along Prince and Prince streets to Park Street. The residents along these thoroughfares had petitioned the board for them, and as the roadbeds have never been improved, the present time was an opportune one to do it. Ald. Saunders and M. Murty fathered the resolution, which carried unanimously.

It would appear that the board will have some difficulty in getting a caretaker for Queen Mary Hospital. No one applied for the position, and the chairman was again requested to make temporary arrangements.

QUEEN MARY HOSPITAL.

Miss Reid, superintendent of the Queen Mary Hospital, reported that during the month of March nine patients were treated, divided as follows:—Two scarlet fever, six diphthera, and one for measles. Four of the patients were discharged during the month, and one of the cases was an out of town patient.

G. Blodgett asked permission to keep a pig on his lot on Auburn Street West. His pen would be 15 fet from any building. The board asked the Medical Health Officer and Sanitary Inspector to report on conditions.

LETTERS FROM THE TRENCHES

The ladies of the Canadian Kitchener League have received the following letters of thanks for gifts sent to the men in the trenches:

Came Just in Time.

France, March 7, 1917.

The parcel of socks which you sent was received in good condition. Please accept my thanks for same and also for your good wishes. The socks came at a very opportune time for we needed them very badly. We have been having a great deal of wet weather, and the best thing a soldier can receive is socks.

Again thanking you.

A. SODUM,
18th Canadian Batt.

Need Lots of Socks.

France, March 7, 1917.

Just a few lines to let you know I received your beautiful parcel of socks about three weeks ago, and I wish to thank you very much on behalf of the boys I gave them to, and myself for such a splendid and useful parcel. I may say also that they arrived at a most opportune time as we were just getting ready to go into the trenches when the mail came up and the socks were ours. We need lots of socks in the trenches this time of the year, too, because it's very sloppy and muddy now, but we don't mind that when we know there is a good pair of dry socks in our haversacks to put on when we come off duty. Of course we get lots of the army issue, but what are they compared with a good pair of home-knit Canadian socks? Now, I don't want you to think I have been licking the blarney stone, but I do want you to know that these socks were just right and that we appreciated them very much. The pair I got had a nice little note in them from a girl in Peterboro, and last, but not least, three beautiful kisses, and I hope we soon get this old contract finished over here so that I will be able to get home and pay her back. The only thing to finish this is men, and still more men until the enemy is crushed, and I hope that the boys that are hanging back now will come forward and answer the call and get over here for the finish, anyway. Well, dear friend, I think this is all, wishing you and the league every success.

I remain,
Yours sincerely,
PTE. W. J. McCOY.

Release a Man to Fight in France by Enlisting in the CANADIAN DEFENCE FORCE

"Of the troops which have volunteered for service overseas there still remain in Canada approximately 50,000. It is necessary that the country should not be left without an adequate force for home defence in case of emergency.

Canada has every reason to be proud of her sons who have taken such a noble part in winning the war, and their deeds of valor have been recounted time and time again, and now, when the British Empire is struggling to maintain its existence and to secure Liberty and Justice for the world, it is Canada's duty to do still more.

In order that the 50,000 troops of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, at present serving in Canada, may be released for active warfare, an appeal is now made to the manhood of Canada for an equal number of men to volunteer for home defence by joining the active militia. An opportunity, is, therefore, now afforded to those who have been prevented from undertaking service overseas to join this movement of active service for home defense."

SIR EDWARD KEMP,
Minister of Militia and Defence.

The men of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces held in Canada as an adequate safeguard, are needed NOW in France for what Sir Robert Borden says is "the most critical period of the war".

To release them Canada calls for men, physically fit, who for any reason cannot go Overseas, but are willing to serve at home.

Enlistment in the Canadian Defence Force is for One Year—or for the period of the war and six months after if required. Clothing, equipment and rations provided as in the C. E. F. Pay the same as that for Militia on active service, with Separation Allowance for married men.

Here is your opportunity to add one to the strength of our army at the Front by enlisting for service here at home. For full particulars enquire at Armories of the Regiments listed below.

MEN STILL REQUIRED FOR OVERSEAS IN THE CANADIAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCES.

More men are required for reinforcements at the Front. Those who desire to volunteer for Overseas service may enlist through one of the regiments ordered to mobilize for Home Defence.

A CLOUDLESS MOON.

Surface of the Pale Satellite Never Obscured by Mists.

The first suspicion of the airless and waterless condition of the moon seems to have been awakened by the fact that no clouds were ever seen hiding the permanent lunar features. Imagine yourself looking at the earth from the distance of the moon. It is evident that the outlines of continents and oceans would often be more or less completely obscured when great storm clouds were drifting over them. Not the slightest indication of the presence of similar expanses of condensed watery vapor floating over the moon were ever detected.

The invention of the spectroscope furnished another proof of the practically airless condition of the moon. An atmosphere, especially if it contains watery vapor, abstracts from the rays of light passing through it certain portions of the light whose absence is easily detected by the spectroscope.

But when the sunlight reflected from the moon's surface is thus examined it allows no evidence of having passed through an atmosphere sieve. This shows not only that the moon has no perceptible atmosphere, but also that it contains no liquid water, because if there were water on the moon it would evaporate and form vapor, which would act on the light.

It was long supposed that the air and water which the moon may once have possessed had disappeared by absorption into its rocks, but another modern discovery in physics has made it probable, if not certain, that the moon's original atmosphere blanket, as well as its supply of water, flew away from it because the moon had not a sufficiently powerful grip to hold them.

Its force of gravity, which is only about one-sixth as great as that of the earth, was too feeble to retain such lively and rebellious subjects as the molecules of air and watery vapor.

These molecules, we now know, are in continual vibration, and their speed of vibration varies at a maximum from more than seven miles a second for hydrogen, and two and a half miles a second for watery vapor, to more than a mile and a half a second for carbonic dioxide.

But it is shown by calculation based on the laws of gravitation that any particle moving away from the moons' surface with a velocity of a mile and a half a second would escape, never to come back.

In the case of the earth, this critical velocity, as it is called, amounts to nearly seven miles a second, so that the earth can easily hold an atmosphere which would as easily fly off from the moon.

Notwithstanding all this, it should be said that there may still be on the moon the remains of an atmosphere, say a thousand times rarer than ours, and, in some places, water in a solidly frozen state. But these would not serve to maintain life in any of the forms with which we are familiar.

The Money Argument.

J. P. Morgan says it is "a certainty that the Allies will win" the European war. He has been two months with the English and French, and conferred with King George as well as many statesmen and bankers, and that should make him a better guesser than other Americans. Morgan as a banker is betting more money than any other man on earth that the Allies will win. Another who follows the loans and notices that American money goes up almost entire for the allied nations claims that finally, if the Allies cannot win, the United States will get into the war to help them. That may be a part of the argument which makes the head of the house of Morgan feel so sure that the Entente Allies are going to put the Teutons out of the war game in the course of time. His confidence is similar to that of Japanese statesmen who have put their country in the position of guaranteeing one large British loan to Americans. The money argument is that the Allies must win and it is a serious argument at that, and means more than the millions mentioned in the notes to secure the loans.

To Aid the French.

A former Woodstock boy, Dr. Charles White, son of James White, has been appointed to go to France to take charge of all the voluntary relief work of the health service of the French War Department. Dr. White's appointment came from the Boston Committee of French Relief, and he will assume charge of the work of systematizing efforts of the French Government in stamping out tuberculosis among the soldiers in the camps and trenches. Dr. White is at present Medical Director of the Tuberculosis League Hospital in Pittsburg.

LINDSAY CURLERS WANT NEW RINK

The prospect of a new curling rink for Lindsay looks good. At least the management committee, it is understood, have succeeded in interesting the gentlemen who have been working on establishing a club house at McDonald Park. These gentlemen will in all probability join with the curlers in the effort to build a new rink and club house. An option has been secured for a new site on William street, which would guarantee the club an annual revenue from a business source.

HIS 26th YEAR PLAYING BALL

A few years ago it was thought wonderful when Cy Young started on his twenty-fourth year in baseball, but Old Cy didn't finish. It also was thought Matty was going to last for ever, but his pitching years were limited to sixteen. Now Honus Wagner, of the Pittsburg Pirates, steps out on his twenty-sixth with the same spryness that characterized his playing ten years ago.

Wagner is the athletic wonder of the baseball world, and is entitled to the honor of having that monument erected to him in the historical building in Pittsburg.

To repeat Wagner's record would be like calling attention to the fact that Christmas comes on December 25. Everybody knows it. Instead of trying to fix these figures in your head, just remember that he is the best hitter and the best infielder that the game has ever known, and that will be sufficient. He led the league in hitting so often that it became habit.

It was stated that the British were destroying on the average one submarine a day.

ROWING DOOMED FOR THREE YEARS

Intercollegiate rowing is doomed for a period of three years or more. This is the general opinion expressed by rowing men at the Yale-Princeton boat races at Philadelphia on Saturday. Even if the war with Germany does not last as long as that it will be at least three years before the loose ends can be gathered up and rowing in the colleges re-established on the old foundation and with the old policies.

Wit and Wisdom

Dorothy (to the grocer) Mamma says she can't owe you $27 for the month, and will you please send her a macadamized bill.

"Pa, why do so many marriages come off shortly after Easter?"

"It would be a rash man, my child, who married before his intended had bought her Easter outfit."

"Take a glance at Bilson over there; did you ever notice how his features are always moving?"

"Yes; perhaps that accounts for his having such a vacant expression."

Peter Dorman, proprietor of the Brown House, at Bright, Ont., was convicted of having and giving liquor in a place not his private residence, and was fined $200 and costs.

THE REAL BASIS OF TIRE VALUE

Though they get but scant attention in these days of anti-skids, Plain Treads are the real basis of tire value. Compare with any other plain tread and you will get at the fundamental reason why ALL Dominion Tires stand out so decidedly above all others of corresponding type.

DOMINION PLAIN TREAD TIRES

The secret of mileage is built right into them! Every ounce of rubber is pure, and free from all foreign matter. Every inch of fabric is clean and perfect, without a single weak or broken thread, twisted strand or oil-spot. Every process is carried out scientifically, by experts, under vigilant inspection.

This is the tire that has proved so economical and serviceable where conditions justify a plain tread — and that forms the basis of our three famous anti-skids:—

"NOBBY" TREAD
90% puncture proof. Of heavy construction and in low mileage cost class. Users willing to pay additional first cost obtain maximum mileage and practical freedom from punctures and other annoyances.

CHAIN TREAD
The famous anti-skid. The cup-like shape of the links gives gripping and suction abilities that develop remarkable traction and anti-skid properties. Most efficient tire in its price class.

DOMINION TREAD
Gives extra mileage. Costs but little more than the Plain Tread, and is a thoroughly dependable anti-skid. Has the most rubber where there is most wear—on the tread.

Choose the Dominion Tires that best meet your conditions and needs, and you will get that superior service which is built right into every tire we make.

WHITE HOUSE IS AGAIN OPENED

POPULAR HOSTELRY HAS BEEN RE-FITTED THROUGHOUT.

The announcement that the White House had re-opened was received with considerable satisfaction by citizens and travelling public. Gus White the genial proprietor has always been a popular host, and the fact that his sister, Miss Margaret White, will be associated with him in the management of the hotel assures a good bill of fare and a clean and comfortable room to rest in.

The plumbing of the house has been thoroughly gone over, and every room has now running hot and cold water in it. Baths are of easy access, and the toilet arrangements right up to the minute.

The fittings of each room are new throughout. In most of them hardwood floors have been laid, and rugs have been added to lend a feeling of warmth and comfort to the visitor.

In the dining room a beautiful tile floor has been laid, and the chinaware, silverware, cutlery and linens are of the latest design.

The auto tourist will find the accommodation the finest. Several auto lockers are under construction in the rear for the benefit of the guests of the house.

The White House, on Charlotte Street, was always one of Peterboro's nobby hotels, and under the present improvement is more attractive than ever.

REV. R. G. PEEVER PROTESTS AGAINST WORK ON SUNDAY

Even War Conditions, He Says, do Not Warrant it.

Rev. R. G. Peever, pastor of the George Street Methodist Church, has written the following communication in reply to the stand taken by a local paper in which it advocates a suspension of the Lord's Day Act so as to permit Sunday labor in war time:

PRESERVE OUR REST DAY.

Mr. Editor:

I was greatly surprised by your editorial re Sunday War Time Work, and Production and Sunday Farm Work by Farmer, as appeared in your issue of last evening. I do not wish newspaper controversy, but I submit your teaching is unwise and wrong when you plead for more work on farm and in factory on the Lord's Day. This day is protected by the Lord's Day Act as given to the Canadian people by the laws of Canada.

I may say I know farm life, its spirit, demands and hardships thoroughly. I take issue with "Farmer" and deny that the wheat crop of 1915 was largely destroyed owing to the fact that it was illegal to work on Sunday. True, there was difficulty and some loss in some parts due to the wet season, just as last year I saw hay unsaved in the fields in the month of August because of the very abundance of the crop. Moreover, I know of certain farmer in a community in 1915 who went out in fear and drew in grain on Sunday afternoon, whereas on Monday and Tuesday they had the very finest of harvest weather. There is always a measure of gain and of loss possible to the farmer, just as there is to the business man.

The plea of increased production on farm and in factory does not obtain when it runs contrary to great fundamental laws of life, being, and production itself. It is a physiological and scientific fact that neither man, beast nor machinery can produce continuously above a certain limit without the rest of the night and the quiet of the Sabbath. And it is proven that when man violates these laws in himself or through beast or machinery, his efficiency falls, the result of his labor is decreased instead of being increased, and loss instead of gain is the net outcome.

Mr. Editor, you admit this fact when you state that no man and no animal can do their best work and maintain physical fitness without one day of rest in seven, and your excuse for work of necessity cannot apply when you defeat the very purpose of your effort by that supposed work. I am not pleading for man to go to church and worship, though that is a fundamental of life, but I am pleading for the rest day which is in keeping with the highest and best in every man in giving him a chance to produce. I am pleading for the law of the land which is a law of God. I have seen the open Sunday in the United States and Europe, in which every man largely becomes a law unto himself, interpreting the Sabbath on the ground of his own expediency and personal necessity, and I say, God save our land from losing our Sabbath law even under the stress of war conditions.

"Farmer" amusingly suggests that the hired man can rest on Sunday while the farmer works. Yet it was said in the Parliament at Toronto last week, in the discussion of this very question of increased farm production, that hired help now go to the farms "for rest cure" while the farmer toils from 4:30 or 5 a.m. until dark. Can he do more? I know that the statement "war emergency" has its place, but I maintain that this very statement as a cover is today hiding a multitude of sins which even already are coming forth in ugly form to rebuke us as a people. The people that are forewarned he will be forewarned. If the war profits above six per cent. on capital invested were taken over by our government, as they ought to be, there would be less Sunday work and greater output. If Lloyd George in England, nearly two years ago, commanded that all government munition factries close on Sunday because he found that it meant a better feeling and efficiency among the workers and greater output in production, surely in Canada the cry "war emergency" cannot obtain as an argument for increased Sunday labor. There are hundreds of good honest men working against their conscience every Sunday under the supposed pressure of "necessity" for increased production, whereas, in fact, it is an obedience to the gain and greed of man for war profits.

Winning this war is more than raising more potatoes or more hogs or even piling up munitions. We are in this war to the death because of the moral ideals of life, humanity, and future civilization. Because war is Hell and our armies fight at the front on the Sabbath, is no reason why we should let loose "Hell at home." All our people need greatly in these times the emphasizing of spiritual values, and the question is when this war is over will we have saved the soul life of our people out of the wreck for future moral reconstruction.

Mr. Editor, I for one will object to Magistrate, Press or Church advocating the cancelling of the Lord's Day Act, especially when such action will defeat the very object we seek to obtain.

R. G. PEEVER.

House of Refuge.

The House of Refuge management committee, Mr. M. Walsh, chairman, are inspecting the institution today.

COURT OF REVISION.

The Court of Revision will hold a meeting in the Council Chamber at eight o'clock tonight to deal with sewer assessments.

FEWER COMPLAINTS.

Sanitary Inspector Stapleton is getting the work of his office well in hand. The chairman of the Board of Health remarked that very few complaints were being heard in the last week, and this was agreed with by Chairman Saunders, of the Property Committee.

ST. PETER'S PATRIOTIC CLUB.

There will be a regular meeting of St. Peter's Patriotic Club tomorrow afternoon at St. Alphonsus Lyceum. All members are requested to be present. Tea will be served from 4.30 to 7 o'clock. The hostesses will be Miss Sue Kelly and Mrs. J. J. Doris. As this is the first tea the club has given since before Lent, it is hoped that a large crowd will attend and help in the good work that is being done. New members are always welcome.

LONDON, April 12.—An official statement issued by the war office this morning says: Two German attacks on Vimy Ridge were broken up last night, with heavy losses to the attackers.

The statement says: . Weather conditions are wet and stormy. Early this morning we attacked and captured two important positions in the enemy's lines north of Vimy Ridge astride the River Souchez. A number of prisoners were taken by us. During the night two hostile attacks upon our positions on the northern end of Vimy Ridge were driven off by our machine gun fire, with heavy German losses. Some progress has been made south of the River Scarpe.

1,000 YARDS OF TRENCHES TAKEN.

LONDON, April 12. —About one thousand yards of trenches south of Farbus wood in the region southeast of Vimy were captured by the British this morning, Reuter's correspondent telegraphs from the front. The hill southeast of Wancourt was also captured. The British yesterday took eleven additional guns in the fighting between Croisilles and the Scarpe.

FRENCH WIN HONOR WITH BRITISH.

PARIS, April 12. — (Official Statement.) — Between the Somme and the Oise artillery fighting continued with violence during the night, especially in the region of Urvillers. South of the Oise, our troops, after artillery preparation, attacked a German position east of the line from Coucy la Ville to Quincy Bassep. After a spirited engagement we forced back the enemy as far as the southwestern edge of the Upper Coucy forest.

Several important points of support fell into our hands notwithstanding the resistance of the enemy, who left a number of dead on the ground and many prisoners in our hands. In the region northeast of Soissons there were patrol encounters and active artillery fighting, especially in the sector of Laffaux.

North of the Aisne our reconnoitering parties penetrated the German lines at several points and brought back forty prisoners, one of them an officer. East of Sapigneul a sharp attack enabled us to expel the enemy from certain portions of the trenches which he had held since April 4th, and our line was re-established intact.

Two surprise attacks by the Germans in the Champagne in the sectors of Ville-sur-Turbe and Butte-du-Mesnil were broken up by our fire, which inflicted losses on the enemy.

In the course of an incursion into the German lines in the Woevre, north of Remanauville, we inflicted appreciable losses on the enemy.

Patrol encounters occurred southwest of Leintrey.

WIN NEW TURKISH TERRITORY.

CAIRO, April 12. — The British are continuing their success in the vicinity of Gaza, Palestine Their mounted forces have occupied further Turkish territory to a depth of fifteen miles, consolidating strong positions menacing Gaza, and taking many prisoners. One hundred and ninety are missing, mostly members of small parties which became isolated in the fog after penetrating the town of Gaza.

HUN WOMEN ACT LIKE FIENDS

LONDON, April 12. — Appalling revelations of the systematic brutality of German women of the Red Cross towards the British wounded have been made to the Berne correspondent of The Times by scores of British soldiers of all ranks released from German prison camps On the long journey of the British wounded through Germany it was the common amusement of these women to tempt our men, who were in the last extremity of hunger and and thirst, by holding out food and drink to try and make them snatch at it, and then withdrawing it. Many of the wounded, begging for water had coffee, water and soup tendered to them, and then at the last moment the gentle nurse would spit in the cup or glass. Frequently the wounded had to drink the defiled stuff while the women looked on and laughed.

No Raise in Price of School Books

School Children will not have to pay any more for the school books than previously, despite the fact that the war is on and the cost of white paper and other materials have gone up.

The Department of Education has given out a statement to this effect that arrangements have been concluded for the republication of former text books, for which contracts expire in June, 1917, at the old price for either a year or for a longer period. This list of books include composition, 15 cents; hygiene, 20 cents; arithmetic, 10 cents; history of England, 25 cents, and history of Canada, 25 cents, the two latter being in one volume and selling for half a dollar. The Public school grammar will be issued by the King's printer at ten cents.

Besides this the three High school text books geometry, 40 cents; arithmetic, 40 cents; and physical geography, 60 cents, are unchanged. Three new High school books to replace those that expire in June are under preparation by the department. The chemistry book will be sold for 40 cents, instead of 50 cents; the Latin book at 70 cents, instead of 60 cents, and the ancient history at the old price of 75 cents,

The department says that no money allowances have been made, nor any other concessions, to the publishers who have renewed their contracts for a year or longer.

LINEMEN WARNED TO TAKE EXTRA CARE AFTER STORM

Coroner Greer Holds Inquest Into Death of Allan Casson.

"We, the jurors summoned to determine the cause of death of one Allan Cassan, find that he came to his death on Saturday morning, April 7th, 1917, on the premises of the Peterborough Lock Co., and have agreed that death was caused by electric shock from a source unknown, according to the evidence submitted, and we would recommend that in future any accident of a similar nature be thoroughly investigated to ascertain where the current came from, before repairs are made or operations resumed."

This was the verdict of a jury summoned by Coroner Dr. F. N. Greer to inquire into the cause of death of Allan Cassan, who was electrocuted while repairing the lines of the Utilities Commission in the lane way of the Peterborough Lock Co., after the recent snowstorm.

The jury was composed as follows: J. S. Knapmau (foreman), Arthur Clydesdale, Reg. Turner, J. O'Toole, J. T. O'Connell, D. R. Flemming, Frank Young, Joseph Crowe, W. E. O'Brien, Frank Turner.

Evidence was taken from Fred. Whaley, an employe of the Lock Co., who noticed Cassan fall, and from H. Croft and H. Strudley, who were in the laneway when the accident occurred.

Dr. Amys and Dr. Eastwood, who performed the postmortem examination, both testified that Cassan was in normal condition and had been killed by electric shock.

H. Beatty, foreman of the Utilities Commission, testified to sending deceased up the pole to remove the fuse plugs. Later on the witness had twisted the broken wire in two, and there was no current in evidence at that time. He could not account for the current being in the wire later.

J. Daignault and W. Smith, other employes of the Commission, told of conditions that existed on the morning of the 7th inst. and of the care that should be exercised on such an occasion.

H. O. Fisk, general manager of the Utilities Commission, testified as to the trouble that had been caused by the storm of the 5th inst. and as to the warning for extra care that had been issued to the workmen.

Crown Attorney Hallon conducted the examination Mr. E. H. D. Hall was present to protect the interests of the Commission.

John Kerman, who is dead at Grimsby, was one of the pioneers in the raising of tomatoes under glass, and made Grimsby hothouse tomatoes famous.

"SUCH PEACE AS THIS OLD WORLD HAS NOT KNOWN"

"I can see peace coming now," said the Premier, "Real peace such as the old world has never known."

Canadians Capture a Mile of Trenches in Brilliant Dash

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, April 12. — A New York news agency despatch says the Canadians earned new honors today in a storming advance on a front of one mile south of Vimy Ridge. Dashing forward impetuously they stormed and took nearly one mile of German trenches running south from the German commandant's house near Farbus wood. It was along this line of defence that the German forces had been clinging desperately since the first sweep forward of the Canadians cleared the top of Vimy Ridge.

Letters Lacking From His Home Soldier Cables

MAYOR DUFFUS ASKING HIM TO INVESTIGATE.

Mayor Duffus received a cable from Capt. Moir of Showden Hospital, at Deal, England, stating that Pte. R. Taylor, of the 18th Ba., was in that hospital and was doing well, but that the patient was worried over not receiving a letter from home for over a year.

WOULD ARRANGE TO ASSIST BAND

BY SECURING THE LOAN OF 57TH INSTRUMENTS.

The City Council met last night to consider a request from Lt.-Col. Scobell, of the 235th Battalion, for the loan of fourteen of the band instruments used by the 247th Battalion.

Bandmaster Walter Hughes was sent back from Ottawa to state the case to the City Council and the trustees. The fourteen men, formerly 247th bandsmen, would be made members of the 235th band if instruments could be secured for them

Mayor Duffus and the aldermen were anxious to assist the Peterboro bandsmen in every way, but the trust deed of the instruments forbade allowing the use of the instruments except for a Peterboro band.

Mr. Coulthard offered a solution of the difficulty by suggesting that the 57th Battalion let the 235th have fourteen of their instruments, and the city would let them have the newer instruments until the return of their own.

The Council said the deed of trust lay with the trustees, and not with the City Council, but later on it was recommended to the trustees that they arrange, if possible, to follow Mr. Coulthard's idea.

This seemed to meet with the approval of Mr. Aylmer, another of the trustees, and an effort will be made to get a solution of the difficulty today so that the former local bandsmen will be assisted.

The trustees appointed by the Peterboro Patriotic League were Messrs. J. A. Aylmer, A. E. Coulthard, and Peter Campbell.

SIR EDWARD KEMP SENDS GREETING TO GEN. BYNG

Congratulates Leader on Victory at Vimy Ridge.

OTTAWA, April 12.—Sir Edward Kemp, Minister of Militia, has sent the following cable of congratulation to Lieut.-Gen. Sir Julian Byng:

"The troops still in Canada awaiting their opportunity to join their comrades at the front, the young Canadians who are about to enlist, and the officers and men who have been deprived of the privilege of participating in active operations at the front, but who have devoted themselves to the task of raising and organising the Canadian Expeditionary Force—on behalf of all these I extend to yourself and the officers and men under your command their warmest congratulations, in which I heartily concur, upon the splendid and inspiring victory of the Canadians at Vimy Ridge."

The Minister of Militia, in commenting on the Canadian victory, said:

"After such a grand victory, which is sure to go down in history as one of the greatest achievements of the war, and an outstanding event in the history of our country, surely young men who have hesitated about enlisting in the overseas forces will, under such inspiration, heed the call of their fellow countrymen to 'Come over and help' and at once put their names on the scroll of honor, and in this way feel that they acted like men when the liberty and freedom of their country was threatened."

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, APRIL 12, 1917

A REFERENDUM ON PROHIBITION.

IF THE DOMINION Government has no right to pass a general prohibition law because such action would be a contravention of provincial rights, as so many contend, how is the matter to be improved or the difficulty circumvented by a referendum vote? If all the provinces voted for prohibition the problem would disappear. It would still remain in any province that declared against prohibitory legislation.

The people of Ontario cannot by their votes dictate the temperance policy of Quebec any more than in the same way they can regulate the marriage or educational laws of that province. The vote of Quebec was really the deciding factor in the plebiscite taken by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and the decision to do nothing was simply a recognition of constitutional rights.

Quebec is still in the wet column, and so is British Columbia, a recent vote having settled that point in the latter province. In the event of a referendum these provinces would in all likelihood reaffirm their present attitude and the temperance issue would be just where it was before the vote was taken. The friends of temperance in this city would do well to consider every aspect of the case before attempting to force the Government into taking a course, following which would simply lead to the starting point again.

The entire argument seems to centre around the clause in the Ontario Temperance Act which states that nothing in the measure shall be construed as an interference with the interprovincial trade in liquor. That was put in to avoid the possibility of the new law being declared ultra vires by the Privy Council because the provinces that enacted it exceeded their authority. Ontario has, everyone concedes, no right to prohibit liquor or other importations, either from Quebec or any alien country. That right rests with the Federal authorities, and under the Doherty Act it will be exercised if the provinces go to the limit of their powers in temperance legislation. The matter seems as plain as day.

It is not fair to cite, as so many of the temperance advocates do, the action of European countries with regard to war-time prohibition. Canada is a federation of nine provinces, each possessed of a certain degree of autonomy, with which the Federal powers have no right to interfere. The British Parliament, if so minded, could pass a general prohibition law tomorrow, which would become effective in every part of Great Britain and Ireland without question, something that would be impossible under Canada's form of government. However urgent the demand for universal prohibition in this country, the Constitution must be considered.

Minister of Justice Doherty and his Cabinet associates are charged with the responsibility of government. The friends of Dominion-wide prohibition should take note of this fact. There are legal complications in the question, and it is idle to attempt to sweep these cobwebs out of the sky with a wave of the hand, as a local journal essays to do.

The decisions recently handed down by the Privy Council with regard to marriage and educational laws in the provinces, should guide the people in this matter. Each province has rights which the highest court in the land can be called upon to protect.

WOULD THE SOLDIERS VOTE?

THE MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION at their last meeting adopted a resolution calling for Dominion-wide prohibition, or, as an alternative, a referendum vote not later than June 1. This resolution was endorsed at the temperance meeting Tuesday night with unanimity and enthusiasm.

Do the supporters of that movement propose to have the three hundred thousand soldiers now overseas vote in the event of a referendum, or are they to be ignored? The men in khaki are certainly entitled to a voice in the affairs of the country for which they are doing so much.

If the soldiers are to vote, how is that vote to be taken and how can the necessary preparations be made in less than two months' time? The members of the Ministerial Association know how the soldiers' vote figured in the British Columbia referendum, what the result was, and what charges of irregularities have arisen. It is impossible to get a fair and full expression of opinion from men engaged as Canada's soldiers in Flanders are today.

THE VICTORY ON VIMY RIDGE.

EXACTLY one year ago four battalions of Canadian troops, the 18th, 19th, 20th and 21st, all from Ontario, were struggling for life with the Germans at St. Eloi. As usual, they were in the front of the battle line. They stood firm as a rock in the face of a terrific bombardment of shells of all kinds. They held the line, repulsing attack after attack, and brought a brighter glory than ever to their native land. They made Canadian valor famous the civilized world over.

The achievements of the Canadian soldiers at Vimy Ridge have eclipsed all former records made in the war. They won a position the Germans made desperate efforts to maintain, and have strengthened the line of defence. They have captured prisoners by the thousands and guns by the score. Hundreds of the gallant Canadian officers and men will never hear the praises of their feats of arms ring throughout the world. They have made the supreme sacrifice for home and country. Their gallantry was sublime and their end illustrious. When the history of this war comes to be written, some of the brightest pages will be illuminated with the records of Canadian heroism.

EXPERIENCED FARM HELP.

PETER McARTHUR, poet-philosopher-lecturer-farmer, delivered an address on the labor problem in London, Ont., recently, in which he made statements that should interest every resident of Peterborough who is acting in the campaign to aid the farmers to produce more. Mr. McArthur is above all else just now a farmer, and he understands rural conditions. The labor problem is nothing new to him. He told his London audience that it would be a sheer waste of energy to send from the cities any helpers except those who had some experience in farm work. To do otherwise would profit neither the volunteer nor the farmer.

There are men in Peterborough who have been raised on farms, and these are the men who should, if possible, be prevailed upon to help out in the present emergency.

THE STIGMA IN CONSCRIPTION.

THE OTTAWA CITIZEN says that there need be no stigma in the term conscript in this war, provided that conscription is based on national service for everyone, and not merely applied on the totally unjust basis of class distinction. In this time of world upheaval, when whole nations are serving as units, national service all round has come to be more like justice than the old policy of volunteering for some and profiteering for others.

One man pays his just debts voluntarily while another does so only under legal compulsion. Is there no stigma attached to the latter? Conscription will equalize the burden, but the man who assumed his share of it willingly will always be accorded the honor.

A MOTHER'S SACRIFICES.

A NEW YORK PAPER discusses the sacrifices that the mother will make on behalf of her child. It starts out by referring to the popular Japanese play "Bushido," in which a father kills his own son in order that the heir to the throne may escape death. According to the standard in the Flowery Kingdom, that father's action is the very acme of patriotism.

The New York paper then cites what it regards as a parallel case, telling of a mother who gave up her child to wealthy foster-parents, preferring to suffer the pangs of separation so that the boy may escape a life of poverty.

The Japanese tale is a creation of fiction, that of the mother an ordinary story of modern life. Such sacrifices are made daily or almost so. And yet still greater are of common occurrence. The mother referred to above surrendered her son to better material advantages than she could ever hope to offer him. The Peterborough mother who takes a last farewell of her khaki-clad son consigns him to what she believes is certain death, and yet, paradoxical as it may seem, is glad to see him go. She may bravely try to smile through her tears, but in her heart she must despair of ever seeing him again in life.

Greater love has no mortal than this. Such devoted sacrifice makes the act of the Japanese patriot appear as the shallowest fanaticism.

THE CASE OF MR. GARLAND.

"IF MR. GARLAND, ex-M.P., is not prosecuted," says The Globe, "it will be proof that he did not lose his pull when he lost his seat."

Mr. Garland was certainly flayed alive by Sir Charles Davidson in his report on the former's flier in the drug trade at the beginning of the war. Mr Garland, however, is not the only offender who has escaped prosecution, pull or no pull. It is not the business of the Government to bring him to the bar of justice any more than it is to cause the arrest of any ordinary citizen suspected of transgression of the law. The Globe is preparing to make political capital out of the case. The Government discharged its obligation when Mr. Garland was cast out of Parliament. All that is wanted to carry the case further is someone to lay a definite charge against the former member of Parliament.

FARMERS MUST USE BRAINS AND THINK

Agriculture a Basic Industry Requiring Broad and General Knowledge

Farming is called the basic industry, the fundamental vocation, of Canada. If that be so, and it must be since the best think so, and indeed all classes of our population are agreed upon it, it follows that there rests upon the farmers a public and private duty at all times, but especially at this time, when the allies need food supplies, of farming wisely and thoroughly, of not only being good farmers, but the best. But because farming is fundamental and essential to the existence of all other avocations, there rests upon the whole country the duty of seeing that farming well done is profitable, so profitable as to keep the farmers of average industry and knowledge in their places, and to induce farmers' families to continue in agriculture, and other intelligent and energetic men to go into it, for if it is not profitable people will not undertake it, and the businesses dependent upon it cannot progress, and Canada will not advance. Outside of the highest professions, such as law and medicine, I know of no usual vocation which requires for its real success so much brain use and diversified thought and knowledge as farming. More than a carpenter or blacksmith or other mechanic, more than a motorman, a veterinary surgeon, a storekeeper, and infinitely more than the rank and file of the civil service. They should know in general all that these know in detail, but away beyond that a broad and general knowledge; that is, if they know their business, which places them among the broad minded and intelligent men of our country. Students and companions and masters of nature, they must have a knowledge of soils, their composition and capacities, and care of grains and grasses, their food values, of plants good and evil, how to foster the one and destroy the other, of livestock and poultry, their breeding, raising and care, of marketing, of times and seasons. They are expected to be qualified for the duties of road overseer, councillor, school trustee, reeve, grand juror, magistrates. They are considered now, as in all British countries, the bulwark and mainstay of all those privileges and rights which have made British people everywhere lovers of their land, lovers of the practical and good, and defenders of freedom. All important as they are, there is no class in the community that have asserted less their interests and their rights. In the beginnings of this province it is only important that the thought and attention of the whole province should be turned to the use of the land and the improvement of the farming occupation.—R. C. Henders, Culross, Man.

SETTLING THE LAND

Ambitious Plans of the Greater Winnipeg Water District

The Greater Winnipeg Water District is planning a settlement about eighty miles from Winnipeg. The Dominion Government gives the land and consents to a certain deviation from the section lines for the roads. The Provincial Government is to make the physical improvements—roads, drainage, etc. The colonization department will help in the settling of the men and will render aid in various ways in starting them in the development of the land, while the agricultural department will give them advice as to the best use of the land and instruction in various horticultural processes and methods. The Agricultural College will furnish stock and seed at cost and will stand by to give expert advice. The Provincial department of education is very sympathetic also, and it will be very helpful in organizing the school and making it contribute in many ways to the uplift of the community. The Water District will build a bridge across the Birch River and a model school and devote some 40 acres to a community centre, its land settlement agent acting as business agent to direct and help market the products, which will be carried by the railroad to the city. The city of Winnipeg will buy the wood cut by the settlers in clearing their farms.

GREAT PACIFIC PORT

Great Wharves Planned by City and C.P.R. For Vancouver

The Canadian Pacific has plans for wharves at Vancouver which will cost $1,500,000. These plans will dove-tail into those which the city contemplates to carry out at the port. The latter is growing in value and bigness all the time. There is great complaint from shippers of congestion, for Vancouver is becoming a great port. The city is going to spend $5,000,000 on wharf extension, and the railway company, on its own account, has plans for a further extension of the wharves which it will use for its own business. The fleet of the C.P.R. now numbers, all told, over 100 vessels; but it has especially strengthened its Atlantic and Trans-Pacific service in latter years—recognizing as it did, the possibilities of increased exchange between this continent and Europe and Asia, an intimacy and largeness of communication which, somewhat hurt by the war, are resuming their urgency and importance from day to day.

Unity of Races

"A better time could not be chosen for promoting the brotherhood of English and French speaking peoples when there is a closer union of hearts and minds than ever before between the two great mother nations across the sea. This is the time to both preach and practise unity in Canada. Providence, nature, and history alike proclaim our brotherhood."—Sir Lomer Gouin.

OFFICER ON WATCH THINKS OF FAIRIES

Meanwhile German Machine Guns "Rip" Like Woodpeckers—Montreal Journalist Pens Letter

Lieut. C. J. ("Jimmy") Hanratty, a former Montreal sporting writer, pens the reflections of a soldier in a dug-out at 2 o'clock of a foggy November morning: The one thing I am certain of is that it has gone two of the clock on a foggy morning. Another thing of which I also possess a reasonable certainty is that both Fritz and ourselves are quiet except for a little machine gun activity. Also that the wind is not in a quarter for gas.

Alone With a Mouse

The further fact is that I am on duty alone in the battalion headquarters dug-out. I have just inspected things in general, and now I can safely proceed to write a stray line, provided this inquisitive mouse, which persists in hopping on the table, will let me alone.

This is a nice quiet job, rather like the old dog watch we were once wont to serve in the days when reporters drew down large salaries, and we were happy mortals—if not wise ones. Except for the machine guns you would think that it was the abode of peace. Even they only tell their story to the initiated. To untrained ears they would only suggest a nocturnal woodpecker.

That Silvery Moonlight

The trench mortars were busy earlier on my watch, but they have let up. The place looked even more peaceful a few minutes ago when I was out handling traffic on a famous road. There was a full moon which shed its soft light over the country. It was a high ground, with a little knoll at my back. The moonlight crossed the back line of trenches, and mercifully mantled the ground until one thought of fairies, lovers and folk of such ilk to whom the moon is kind.

During one quiet spell I had fallen into a reverie, and my mind wandered, free from this poor war-torn section of France, until the spatter of bullets nearby awoke me to the fact that some of Fritz' machine gun chaps lacked my poetic imagination.

CANADIAN'S AIR FIGHT

Experiences and Humor of a Westerner in Action

Letter from Flight-Lieut. W. H. Dore, late of the Winnipeg staff of the Bank of Commerce, written from France: "To-day there is a 70-mile gale blowing itself around. I was to go to X— to bring a new type of machine we are having in the squadron and fly back one of the old type that we are getting rid of, but the wind is too strong. The new machines, though rather difficult to handle at first, are very warm for winter work and faster than the types used by us previously. Next spring, however we must have something newer still for the Huns' machines are all very fast.

"Did I mention in my last letter anything of a fight I had with three Huns? One fellow came over our aerodrome and I pushed off after him. He got within range when I was seven or eight miles over the lines and only 5,000 feet high. He was joined by two others and then they attacked me. I shot one down, drove the second down and while chasing the third my gun jammed, whereupon I broke off the fight. Whenever one meets a Hun on his own level and within long range, unless he is caught unawares, one invariably finds another Hun higher up and in the act of diving on the Britisher. If you don't get him as he comes down or if he doesn't get you, he keeps going down and glides homewards, and the one at your own level pushes off too. We all wish up here that the Hun would put up more and better fights. One of our boys got a fellow alone a few days ago who tried to fight, and he soon sent him to the earth in flames.

"Owing to the shortage of pilots in our flight, I missed my turn to go to Paris. I should have left yesterday. We go there for our machines and so far all who have brought machines from Paris report having had a delightful time. We all think that in a few years we may be able to guess when the war will end, but very few want it to end now, they would prefer to see the Bosche thoroughly beaten and give their lives to help in the doing rather than see peace declared now."

WHY NEWFOUNDLAND PULP

Lord Northcliffe's Prophecy in Regard to the War

Sir Daniel Morris lectured on the wood pulp, paper, and other productions of Newfoundland at the Notting Hill High School, London. Lady Campbell, who presided, said that these lectures had been arranged by the Women's Patriotic League in order to educate women as to the products of the Empire, so that after the war they would buy only those goods originating from the Colonies and the allies.

Sir Daniel Morris said that the industry had so developed that 80 per cent. of the paper used in Britain and elsewhere was made from Newfoundland timber—black spruce and balsam fir. Other trees were utilized for pit props for coal mines.

Lord Northcliffe had said that he and those associated with him chose Newfoundland for the manufacture of wood pulp because they were certain that this war would come. They would not, therefore, spend money in building factories in Norway and Sweden. Nearly 10,000 of the inhabitants of the island were engaged in cod fishing, and a great portion of the fish were exported to South America.

GERMANS SHOULD ENVY

Dieting in Hunland—Gaiety in London Hotels

The luncheon tables were crowded at the Savoy Hotel and there were the usual brilliant dinner parties in the grill room and the restaurant. The menu here offered an amazing variety of rich dishes. At restaurants like the Trocadero the guests had to push their way through the crowd that choked up the vestibule. An orchestra was playing lively music and the whole atmosphere was one that reflected a dazzling prosperity. Here there was not so much champagne as at the Criterion, but there were other rich wines in plenty as well as liqueurs.

At the Criterion there were champagne bottles in profusion in fact more there than anywhere. No empty seats could be seen at the Monico, and there was just the same scene of feasting. Nearly all the men at Romano's were in khaki, and this restaurant was also full. In another of the largest hotels over 460 customers were served with six-course dinners at from 7s. 6d. a head.

By way of contrast to these scenes the newspapers published the German food rations which for one week follow: Meat, 8½ ounces; bread, 4 lbs.; potatoes, 6 lbs.; butter, 2 ounces; eggs, 2; sugar ½ lbs.; rice, 3¾ ounces; barley, 3¾ ounces; margarine, 1 ounce.

Like Training in Reserve

The following communique has been received from the Canadian War Records Office: "A great feature in the life of the men at the front is the training which they carry out when in reserve. There are a vigor and purpose about this training which are quite remarkable. Men who have faced the enemy in battle appear to realize what training will mean to them and by this training, the purpose of which is constantly in the minds of all, the pure seeds of victory are being sown."

Self-denial by Little Girls

Of the three million dollars given once by Toronto for the Patriotic Fund, $110 came from the very small girls at a ladies' college, and not one cent of the sum from girls large or small came from the parents or from sales or entertainments of any kind. It was saved by abstaining from the "trick" shops, by walking instead of riding in the street cars, and in countless little ways of self-denial.

Liberals Have Formed Strange "Happy Family" For Mutual Admiration

POLITICS, like adversity, makes strange bed-fellows. This was one of the developments that took place during the conclusion of the Budget debate in the Legislature when after several months of evasion it was pointed out by Hon. T. W. McGarry that the Liberals had formed themselves into a mutual admiration society. It was amusing, he said, to hear Mr. Hartley Dewart, the newly-elected member for South-West Toronto and the rising hope of the anti-Rowell wing of the Liberal party, refer to him as "my leader," while Mr. Rowell himself returned the compliment in due time with the words of "my colleague."

The outstanding feature of the Budget debate this year was an entire lack of constructive or destructive criticism from the Opposition. The Budget was passed without any amendment being offered and the way is clear for the voting of the estimates. Of course there was criticism. Mr. Dewart entertained the House with another two hours' dissertation on the iniquities of the nickel policy, but shamefacedly admitted to Mr. McGarry that he had not at any time sought to place his intimation (whatever that might be) as to the leakage of nickel at the disposal of the proper authorities. As a climax to the convincing assurances that Mr. McGarry produced from the Right Honorable Bonar Law and Lord Robert Cecil that the disposition of Canadian nickel was entirely satisfactory to the Imperial authorities; Hon. I. B. Lucas, Attorney General, cleared the atmosphere with the official announcement. "Immediately on the declaration of war," he said, "The International Nickel Company, through their president, visited Ottawa and offered to turn over the entire control of the whole nickel output of their mines. They offered to work with the Government and according to that understanding an arrangement was made which is still operating and which the British Government says is entirely satisfactory."

This marked the collapse of the criticism against the nickel policy of the administration. All reasonable men would understand, said Mr. McGarry, that up to the present time for diplomatic reasons the details of that arrangement could not be made public, but the effect of it was that Great Britain was assured a regular and adequate supply of nickel when any curtailment of the export would have been suicidal. Replying to some further remarks about the patenting of nickel land since the outbreak of the war it was pointed out that this was done as a routine matter under the provisions of the Mining Act. It could well be assumed what an outcry the Opposition would have made if they had been able to find that the development of New Ontario was in any way retarded by the withdrawal of mining lands from prospectors.

A step towards overcoming the shortage of coal and foodstuffs, which had been acute during the past winter, is being taken by the Ontario Government. Hon. W. D. McPherson has introduced a series of amendments to the Municipal Act which will give municipalities, under authority of orders-in-Council, power to deal in coal and foodstuffs, to borrow the necessary money, and to pass by-laws as follows: "For buying, manufacturing, and storing fuel, cereals, flour, bread, milk, butter, eggs, and potatoes, and such other articles of food as may be designated in the order-in-Council, and for selling the same to dealers and residents in the municipality."

This authority is also intended to cover the buying of lands and the establishment and maintenance of depots, warehouses, yards, machinery, etc. It is not intended that the by-law should be submitted to the ratepayers, but in cases of emergency the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council would delegate the power to the municipality. The money so required could be borrowed against debentures running for a period of ten years.

The Budget debate closed without any amendments to the motion being offered by the Opposition. In the absence of any cause for a substantial criticism against the statement presented by Hon. Mr. McGarry the members of the Opposition directed their efforts towards piffling and fault-finding. It was, as the Provincial Treasurer said, a real compliment to the way in which the finances of the Province had been handled that the Liberal leader had been forced to instruct his followers to take up sundry items in the public accounts. He made some sport of the remarks of Mr. Scott Davidson (North Brant) who spent half an hour reviling the Government for an expenditure for brass dogs and a poker for Government House, while Mr. Grieve (North Middlesex) could only criticize an item for cut flowers, which actually represented a purchase of flowering plants, shrubs, and garden tools to beautify the grounds around Government House.

Marking Lucky Days.

In throwing a piece of chalk after his men for luck as they poured into the enemy's trenches, the Irish colonel was but reviving a superstition which dates back to the ancient days of Thrace, where the custom originated of marking lucky days with a white stone and unlucky with a black one. In its early youth Rome adopted the custom, and although chalk, not being indigenous, was chiefly known, as its name Creta implies, as an import from Crete, it was generally used for the marking of lucky days. According to Horace the marking was done with chalk for good and coal for bad luck.

THE SHADOWS.

Do not borrow trouble and do not anticipate misfortunes. Were a man's sorrows and disquietudes summed up at the end of his life it would generally be found that he had suffered more from the apprehension of such evils as never happened to him than from those evils which had really befallen him.

Glass Solvent.

Hydrofluoric acid is an acid compound of hydrogen and fluorine. It may be prepared by the action of sulphuric acid upon cryolite in an appropriate apparatus made of lead or platinum. It may thus be readily obtained in a liquid form and is colorless. Its vapors are exceedingly poisonous, and the liquid itself, even when mixed with more or less water, causes severe swellings on the skin. Great care must therefore be taken in working with this acid. Hydrofluoric acid dissolves glass, forming hydrofluosilicic acid with its silica; hence its use for making etchings on glass.—Exchange.

A Puzzled Artist.

Achenbach, the German artist, enjoyed a vogue some years ago. A certain collector had bought from an art dealer a seascape represented as a genuine Achenbach. Afterward it was pronounced to be a copy. The buyer brought an action against the dealer, who turned the tables by declaring that his picture was genuine and the other was a copy. Achenbach himself was summoned by the courts to tell which was which. Amazed at the absolute similarity of the two paintings, he gazed at them for a long time, inspected them closely, front and back, sniffed them and then frankly admitted he could not tell which was the original and which the copy.

Royal Nicknames.

William I. of England was William the Conqueror. He conquered Harold and became king of the first Norman dynasty that gave England four rulers. His father was Robert the Devil.

Leopold I. of Germany was called the Little Man In Red Stockings.

Juana, widow of Philip the Fair, was the Mad Queen.

James II. of Scotland was the Just.

James IV. of the same country was called King of the Iron Belt.

Charles the Great of France, son of Pepin the Short, extended the limits of the empire from the Baltic to the Mediterranean and from the bay of Biscay to the coast of Illyria. His son was known as Louis the Pious.

Man and Flight.

Mathematicians have calculated that man is too heavy ever to be sustained in air by the power of his own muscles, no matter how large the wings are which he fastens to his body. The weight limit is probably approached by the largest birds, such as the Australian crane, which still flies, although it weighs about twenty pounds. The ostrich long ago gave up all hope of winging its way through the air. An aeroplane can be built, say the experts, which will sustain a man and use but three horsepower, but as the best athletes can exert only a maximum of about two horsepower for fifteen seconds at a time he will always be dependent on a machine.

What is an Ide?

"What is an Ide?" It is a natural pitfall for modern generations. Even Bulwer Lytton allowed one of his Roman characters to say, "It stands fixed for the ninth ide of August," although he must have known that "ides" is a plural without a singular. Why the Romans called the 15th of March, May, July, October and the 13th of every other month the ides they do not seem to have known for certain themselves. Some thought it meant the halfway day of the month, from an Etruscan word meaning "to divide," but modern philology, digging into Sanskrit, has suggested that it means the bright time of the month, full moon.—London Notes and Queries.

Sir Douglas Haig Was Discovered in Warfare And Inspires Confidence

ONE of the most vivid descriptions of the personality of Sir Douglas Haig so far written is that contained in Frederick Palmer's book "The Second Year of the War." It gives an exact idea of what manner of man the leader of the British army is. Mr. Palmer says:

"It was really the army that chose Sir Douglas Haig to be commander in chief. Whenever the possibility of the retirement of Sir John French was mentioned and you asked an officer who should take his place, the answer was always either Robertson or Haig. In any profession the members should be the best judges of the excellence of that profession, and through eighteen months of organizing and fighting these two men had earned the universal praise of their comrades in arms. Robertson went to London and Haig remained in France. England looked to them for victory.

"Birth was kind to Sir Douglas. He came of an old Scotch family with fine traditions. Oxford followed almost as a matter of course for him and afterwards he went into the army. From that day there is something in common between his career and Sir William's, simply professional zeal and industry. They set out to master their chosen calling. Long before the public had heard of either one their ability was known to their fellow soldiers. No two officers were more adverse to any form of public advertisement, which was contrary to their instincts no less than to the ethics of soldiering. In South Africa which was the practical school in which the officers of to-day first learned how to command, their efficient staff work singled them out as coming men. Both had vision. They studied the continental systems of war and when the great war came they had the records which were the undeniable recommendation that singled them out above their fellows.

"It was the test of command of a corps and afterwards of an army in Flanders and Northern France which made Sir Douglas commander-in-chief, a test of more than the academic ability which directs chessmen on the board; that of physical capacity to endure the strain of month after month of campaigning, to keep a calm perspective, never to let the mastery of the force under you get out of hand and never to be burdened with any details except those that are vital.

"The subordinate who went in an uncertain mood to see either Sir Douglas or Sir William left with a sense of stalwart conviction. Both had the gift of simplifying any situation, however complex. When a certain general became unstrung during the retreat from Mons, Sir Douglas seemed to consider that his first duty was to assist this man to [illegible] composure and he slipped his arm through the general's and walked him up and down until composure had returned. Again in the retreat from Mons, Sir Douglas said, 'We must stay here for the present if we all die for it!' stating this military necessity as if it meant merely waiting another quarter-hour for the arrival of a guest to dinner.

"No less than General Joffre, Sir Douglas lived by rule. He, too, insisted upon sleeping well at night and rising fresh for his day's work. During the period of preparation for last summer's offensive his routine began with a stroll in the garden before breakfast. Then the heads of the different branches of his staff came in turn to receive instructions and give their reports. At luncheon very likely he might not talk of the war. A man of his education and experience does not lack topics to take his mind off his duties. Every day at half-past two he went for a ride and with him an escort of his own regiment of Lancers. The rest of the afternoon was given over to conferences. On Sunday morning he always went into headquarters town and in a small, temporary wooden chapel listened to a sermon from a Scotch dominie who did not spare in length in awe of the eminent member of his congregation. Otherwise he left the chateau only when he went to see with his own eyes some section of the front or of the developing organization.

"Talking with him in the office which had been the study of a French country gentleman, one gained an idea of the things that interested him. He was the clearing house of all ideas, and through them he was setting the criterion of efficiency. He spoke of the cause for which he was fighting as if this were the great thing of all to him and to every man under him, but without allowing his feelings to interfere with his judgment of the enemy. His opponent was seen without illusion, as soldier sees soldier. To him the problem was not one of sentiment, but of military power. He dealt in blows and blows alone could win the war. Simplicity and directness of thought, decision, and readiness to accept responsibility, seemed second nature to the man secluded in that little chateau, free from any confusion of detail, who had the task—the greatest ever fallen to the lot of a British commander—of making a raw army into a force which could undertake an offensive against frontal positions considered impregnable by many experts and occupied by the skilful German army. His favorite expression was 'the spirit that quickeneth'; the spirit of effort, of discipline, of the fellowship of cohesion of organization—spreading out from the personality at the desk in this room down through all the units to the men themselves."

Fighting Boy Scouts.

At a conservative estimate, between 3,500 and 5,000 Canadian ex-Boy Scouts are on active service, H. G. Hammond, Provincial Secretary of the Boy Scouts, recently stated. Mr. Hammond has just returned from a trip to England and France as representative of the Canadian General Council and saw scouts and ex-scouts working in England and fighting in France under all conditions. They are doing a wonderful work in England in the Government office and department, and as guards on the east coast of England. "Don't forget it was a sea scout," said Mr. Hammond, "who gave the first warning of the presence of German warships off Scarboro." Mr. Hammond considers the Canadian women in England are doing splendid work, but he does not think anyone should go to England unless resolved to work, for there is lots to be done. "I can't think though that any Canadian woman goes over there without that resolve," he said.

Sleepy Time Story About a Very Interesting King.

WHAT HAPPENED IN THE WOOD

Thrilling and Unique Experience of a Little Boy Who Had Sharp Eyes. How a Kindly Act Was Rewarded. Summer Sports In Winter Time.

Well, said Uncle Ben to little Ned and Polly Ann, I am going to tell a story about

BEES AND FAIRIES.

Once upon a time there was a little old lady who lived with her grandchild in a house not very far from the magic woods.

People said the magic woods were full of elves and fairies, and they were afraid to go there. Little Hans loved the woods, though. Whenever his grandmother would allow him he went wandering away in the forest.

"Perhaps, grannie, I may some day meet with the kind fairy folk, and if I do I will not let them go until they tell me how I can be a useful little boy," he said.

"You are a useful little boy, dearie," his grandmother would answer.

"But I wish I could earn some money to make you more comfortable," he said. "When I'm a great big man I shall work so hard that you can wear a silk dress every day in the week."

One day when Hans was out in the forest he noticed a huge spider's web, and right in the middle of it was a poor bee buzzing and struggling to get free.

Hans was a kind hearted boy, and he was sorry for the insect.

He broke the web so that the bee could fly away. It did not go far, but perched on the branch of a tree. Hans was surprised to hear it speak.

"Thank you, Hans," it said. "I am the king of the bees, and I must reward you for saving me from wicked old Ogre Spider, who would soon have made a meal of me. If you will do as I tell you you shall always have delicious honey to eat and sell."

Then the bee told Hans to gather the seed of certain flowers that grew in the magic wood and plant them in his grandmother's garden.

The little boy took the seed home and planted them. When the magic flowers bloomed they were all yellow and gave off a delicious fragrance. Hosts of bees swarmed to the garden and worked busily filling the hives with honey. When the queen came by one day in her carriage she stopped to look at the garden and taste of the honey.

So delicious was the sweet that she ordered that it should be put up in golden pots for her own special use. The queen paid the little old lady so much for this honey that the little boy's wish came true—his grandmother could have afforded a silk gown for every day in the week if she had cared to have one.

Wounded in the Heart.

After being twice wounded in the heart—once by a bullet and again by a dart from Cupid's bow — and the proud possessor of an iron cross, Marcil Belliveau, a Moncton and N. H. A. hockey player, has been invalided home. Belliveau was wounded in the heart at Courcellette in the attack on the famous sugar refinery. He was operated on and made a wonderful recovery. He received the iron cross after a hand-to-hand fight with a German colonel who was wearing it.

Belliveau married the nursing sister who looked after him in hospital. He exhibits the iron cross proudly to friends, and also a prayer book through which the bullet that entered his heart had bored.

Canadians May Form Regiment.

It is currently reported that in the event of the United States going to war with Germany a regiment of Canadians now living in the United States will be organized. This, it is said, could easily be accomplished, and would be a return compliment to any Americans who have enlisted in the Canadian forces for overseas service.

Power in Australia.

The Australian State of Victoria is electrifying its railroad system at an expense that eventually will exceed $29,000,000.

Brush Made of Sponge.

A Gallant Doctor.

Colonel (Dr.) Howard C. Barrie, who is again leaving for the front from his home in Kuling, China, and who has been twice honored by the Serbian Government, was formerly a resident of Toronto. He married the late Hon. John Macdonald's daughter, who with her three children are at present in Kuling, China. At the time of the South African war Dr. Barrie went over to South Africa in charge of several students, and was the first to organize the Y. M. C. A. on the battlefield. A few years ago he went to China as a missionary for the Methodist Church. He established a hospital at Kuling, China, and went to Edinburgh, where he took a post-graduate course. When the present war broke out he volunteered for service, and in charge of a medical unit, was sent to Serbia. He was the first English doctor in Serbia, and was in command of eighteen doctors. Gradually his staff dwindled to three; he became a victim of typhus fever epidemic and was ordered home to China for a rest.

Newer Fashions and Everyday Wants

The Most Famous French Creators Acclaim the Individuality of the Separate Skirt and the Most Fascinating Models.

Never before, since Paris dominated the world of dress have the famous French creators expended their genius in the fashioning of skirts. Hitherto they have devoted their talents to the dsigning of magnificent gowns, wraps of rare beauty, charming suits and exquisite blouses.

But so insistent has been the demand of the modern woman for smart separate skirts that the courteries, perceiving her novel activities and realizing her needs, now acknowledge this new outlet for their creative ability, and, entering into the domain of the skirt, present modes for Spring and Summer.

To-day the wardrobe of the fashionable woman is incomplete without a generous assemblage of separate skirts, for every woman realizes how charming she looks when attired in a cleverly modeled skirt and a dainty blouse.

Straight lines seem to express best the simple mission of the skirt for street wear, but the sport skirt has no such limitations. Great pockets are distended on its sides. The choice is very extensive. Very interesting are the materials chosen for the development of the new separate skirts.

Everywhere you go you will find fashionable women wearing smart separate skirts, not only for the events of sport, but also on occasions when dressy models are required.

You will really enjoy choosing your Spring and Summer styles at Elliot's, and when you slip on the models that specially appeal to you, then once more you will realize the charm and beauty of the separate skirt that is now an essential part of a fashionable woman's attire.

Our stock comprises all the wantable lines. Among them you will find:

All-wool Cloth Skirts	$3.95, $5.00, $8.25, $10.00, $12.50
Silk Dress Skirts	$5.00, $8.50, $10.00, $12.50, $15.00
The New Silk Jersey Cloth	$20.00

CANADA'S BAND OVERSEAS

British Centres Welcome Soldier-Musicians and Praise Their Work

The members of the Canadian Divisional Band in England were immensely pleased at the cordiality of their reception wherever they appeared. On a visit to Aldershot they were given a civic reception, a reception from military headquarters; the townspeople presented the band with a gold mounted baton and the Royal Artillery presented Bandmaster Stares with a gold match box, handsomely inscribed. The volunteer firemen banqueted the Canadians. Our band was also royally treated at Bournemouth, where Dan Godfrey, the son of old Dan Godfrey, was the town's musician.

The Aldershot News, in its reference to the visit, said: "The cordiality of the town's reception to the Canadian Divisional Band on Sunday will remain one of the pleasantest memories in the history of Aldershot. The visit formed a cordial and happy link between the greatest military centre in the Empire and the great Dominion of Canada. On the part of the Canadians there was a warm-hearted wish to do something to help the Aldershot Patriotic Fund which has been formed to assist townspeople who may suffer as a direct result of the war. On the part of the town there was a laudable desire carried out to a happy conclusion, to express how much the Canadians' visit was appreciated, and how great is the national admiration for the splendid loyalty and courage of our comrades in arms from overseas in the great war still raging. It is difficult, indeed impossible, to pick holes in the rich musical treat Mr. Stares provided, a program that was as delightful for the interpretation of the music as for the excellent choice of items, and the generous appreciation showered upon him and his men was compatible with the feelings engendered by the faultless interpretation of peerless music."

Says Hot Water Each Day Keeps The Doctor Away

Drink Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast to Wash Out the Poisons.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick, or well, should, each morning, before breakfast drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestable waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity, and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast, the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store, which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make any one a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

ADMIT DEBT TO CANADA

Fine Gift and Letter From Boston Couple to War Work

The following letter was received in Montreal from Boston by one of the doctors at the Children's Memorial Hospital: "My dear doctor—Before the war started Mrs.—— held some stock in one of the industrial concerns which is now manufacturing munitions for your allies. This has led to increased dividends, which increased dividends both Mrs. —— and I feel belong to your country or your cause. The enclosed check ($500), representing part of a recent dividend, Mrs. —— is sending to you.

"Both she and I have, of course, given as largely of our income as is possible to the various funds which have been formed to aid in the relief work which is being done for your allies, but it seemed to both of us that the intimate contact which you must have with the work would make it possible for you to use some of this money in a way that would be more vitally of value.

"Neither Mrs. — nor I wish to have any publicity given to what little we may be able to do to help you, and for that reason, in any records which you may have to make, please see that our names do not appear. Simply have it acknowledged as from a friend in America, who appreciates all that your country is doing for us.

"Remember that you have our very best wishes in all that you are doing and if there is anything special which you think any of us can do to help the cause, you will, I hope, feel free to let us know. With the hope of a speedy settlement of the difficulty, but a settlement in which final justice is possible, I remain, very sincerely yours, ——."

LIFE ON FLIP OF COIN

Brothers Tossed, Loser Enlisted and Killed Himself

Private C. Nastrom, the Roblin man who enlisted on a Wednesday night with the Two Hundred and Fifty-first and died on Thursday morning, it is stated, staked his life on the toss of a coin and lost. He and his brother owned a quarter-section near Roblin, and in discussing the war, they decided that one ought to enlist and the other stay to take care of the farm. To decide who should enlist, they flipped a coin and the choice fell on C. Nastrom.

He packed his grip, went to a lawyer, and later turned a quit-claim deed over to his brother, for his interest in the farm. Then he quietly bought some gopher poison containing a large proportion of strychnine, in Roblin, and brought it with him to Winnipeg.

Nastrom passed the medical board and joined up with the Two Hundred and Fifty-first, sleeping in barracks that night. Before retiring he was heard to state that he had a premonition that if he ever reached the firing line, he would be shot. He appeared very despondent, but finally went to sleep. Awakened at reveille Thursday morning and finding himself in military environment, he swallowed some of the gopher poison, and within a few moments was found dead in his bunk in the barracks on Cumberland Avenue.

OLD TIME TRAIN SERVICE TO BE RESTORED APRIL 29

New Order Was Sent Out to Railway Men Yesterday.

A notice has been sent out to railway men notifying them that on and after April 29th the passenger department will restore their old-time train service.

It will be remembered that during the shortage of coal the Railway Board issued an order that the train service should be cut in two. This was done in order that coal and munitions could be handled with dispatch. The order of the Railway Board at the time helped some, and did not please a great many. The coal men were not satisfied with the reduction, and citizens in northern districts of Ontario complained bitterly of the inconvenience of the cutting off of trains, pointing out that they could not travel when necessary without losing a great deal of time.

Commercial men an the express companies also complained. In fact, the movement of express goods has been delayed ever since, as evidenced by the crowded sheds in the Toronto terminals and other places.

The new order to restore the increased train service is the cause of much joy in the express departments. It means about 100 extra passenger trains, about 50 of which will be out of the Toronto terminals. It means also work for a staff of 500 trainmen.

THE AUTO SHOW ONLY TWO WEEKS FROM OPENING

RED CROSS SOCIETY HOPE FOR LARGE SUCCESS.

Peterborough's Auto Show in the Armories on April 26, 27 and 28, promises to be a huge success. There will be over forty cars in the show, to say nothing of bicycles, tires, and the various accessories that go with such exhibits.

The Dominion and Goodyear Tire Companies have each donated a tire to the Red Cross Society to be disposed of in the best way possible to agument the society's funds.

The ladies are taking a great interest in the show, which is new to Peterborough and which will likely be made an annual affair.

BOLD CHINESE AIRMAN

Has Been in Action Several Times, Bringing Down Two Machines

The non-fighting character generally ascribed to the Chinese is a libel in the case of Sergeant Tsu, thirty years old son of a rich Shanghai merchant who was with the French army in the Somme battle. Tsu came to France just before the war began to learn flying when the struggle began he offered his services and was sent first to the Argonne. He has a splendid record. Once when returning from a scouting expedition, he was attacked by six airmen and the canvas of his wings was riddled. He managed to get back safely. Since then he has been in several actions and has brought down two German machines.

Hay was the chief commodity on sale at the market this week and prices were steady.

In spite of the outside markets, Peterborough wheat reached the $2 mark, and the other grains were in demand.

The drovers all complain of the scarcity of cattle. Many of them are confining their efforts to the purchase of stockers for the ranches.

Hogs are still strong in the outside markets and the local price has been $15.50.

Farmers are reminded of the Ontario Horse Shippers' Association Fair to be held here April 25. Horses of all kinds and conditions will be sold.

LABOR TO BENEFIT.

Plan to Have Co-operation in England After War.

Mr. John Hodge, M.P., Minister of Labor, presided as president of the British Workers' National League, at a recent meeting in Manchester. The war, he said, had opened the eyes of a section of the people of this country to the fact that labor in the past had not had its due; it had suffered from underfeeding and bad housing. A great association of employers had been formed, with men of big hearts and far-seeing intellects, at the head of it, and they had realized that if they were going to be efficient in this land of theirs there must be physical efficiency. That great alliance desired that labor should co-operate with it in the future, because if they were going to renew the combat between capital and labor they were going to be kept behind in the neutral markets of the world. The war had taught the benefits of organization carried out scientifically, and the workman must have his full share of the results of that organization.

The Government at the end of 1915 gave pledges as to the position of both soldiers and sailors returning from the war, and he, as Minister of Labor, had imposed upon him the duty of seeing that those things were right well done. All the promises which the Government had made would be fulfilled to the letter. On that point they were fully determined. To avoid strikes and lockouts during the period of reconstruction after peace was important, and they made overtures to employers of labor whom they picked out for bigness of heart and greatness of view and sympathy with the aspirations of [illegible] and there was general consent to the proposition that a combination of employers and employed working together were the best people to see the lads put back to work. Labor alone could not do that without friction. The two together could, and it was upon that basis that the Minister of Labor was going to form a big central committee and 400 or 500 local committees all over the country for the purpose of dealing with this problem.

Airmen's Slang.

As in other walks of life, a slang understandable to the layman has of recent months sprung into being in flying circles. For instance, no self-respecting aviator would think of referring to an aeroplane in any other way than as "a bus." A trip in the air is never described as such, but rather as a "joy-ride." A bomb dropping or a "reconnaissance" trip is referred to as a "stunt." Pockets of thin and wasted air are referred to as "bumps," and if the machine gets disturbed while in mid-air the pilot describes it as "being all of a doodah." The "control-stick"—that wonderful contraption that works both ailerons and elevators—is the "joy-stick." The technical name fuselage is abandoned, and that portion of the machine is re-named "the body." An airman never talks through his hat, at least not in practice, for he does not possess such an article; instead he is the proud owner of a "grummet." If he does not know you by name he will, with the utmost sangfroid, address you as "George," while a youngster learning to fly is always referred to as a "quirk."—Tit-Bits.

The First Telegram.

Contrary to general belief, "What hath God wrought?" was not the first message to be sent by telegraph nor was Morse the sender of the first communication, says The Popular Science Monthly. Instead, it was sent by one of the committee who were debating upon the proposal of Morse, the inventor, to string a telegraph line from Baltimore to Washington. Mr. Morse, who wanted to end the discussion and at the same time demonstrate his invention, strung a wire from the committee room to the top of the Capitol. One of the committee, who was opposed to President Tyler, wrote "Tyler deserves to be banged." This was received by the man at the other end exactly as it was composed.

Cromer's Quick Wit.

There was real humor in some of the quiet, grim things which the late Lord Cromer did. Once the Young Egyptian party planned a demonstration in favor of France and against Lord Cromer. It was to take place at the opera as he entered, and as he heard of most things, so he heard of this in good time. He promptly invited the French agent to share his box at the opera, the invitation was accepted, and the hostile crowd was ludicrously non-plussed when the two arrived together.

GREAT SKATING RECORD

Fred J. Robson Has Enjoyed a Successful Career

Toronto has produced many champions in various fields of athletic activity, but none who have worn so well and lasted so long at the top of the ladder as Fred J. Robson, the speediest skater of his time. And now, after twenty-two years of competition, he is apparently able to still hold his own, not with mediocre competitors, but with all comers, though he has put away his racing skates for good, so far as open competition is concerned, and is devoting the time he has to spare for his favorite sport to the commendable end of encouraging ambitious youngsters and in the hope that a worthy successor may be developed from among the talent that Toronto surely has.

To mark his retirement from active competition, his many friends and admirers propose to present him with a suitable and enduring reminder that a prophet is not without honor among his own. It takes the form of a diamond-studded medal, with forty brilliants ornamenting the design, twenty-nine of the sparklers forming the champion's initials in a monogram.

Freddy Robson is of the physical type occasionally described as "little, but oh my!" He began racing in 1885 on a pair of skates that he made himself, and the same year he won the junior championship. From that time on his career was one of unqualified success, and he held the Ontario championship for nine years. In 1900 he won the 220-yard Canadian and American championship, and was able to hold it for five consecutive years. In 1904 he won the Canadian indoor championships, and the same year skated a dead heat with Morris Wood in a mile race at Pittsburg, the time, 2.41, being a world's record. His record of .19 1-5 for 220 yards, made in the same season, stood for seven years, until he beat it himself. He was the hurdle-skating champion for a period of twelve years, and after being an active competitor for nineteen years he made three new world's records. There was not an American champion that Robson did not defeat at some time or another, and he shone in other sports, too being a first-class bicycle rider and foot-runner, as well as a coxswain for the Toronto Rowing Club eight, under the coaching of Jimmy Rice.

For the period of seventeen years he had the advantage of the attention and skill of his friend Billy Wells, who trained him for his great performances. Some of his achievements are best indicated in the following statistics from the records.

50 yards, 4 4-5 seconds, Toronto, March 17, 1916 (world's record).

60 yards, 6 seconds, Pittsburg, Feb. 28, 1916 (world's record).

75 yards, 7 4-5 seconds, Pittsburg, Feb. 29, 1916 (world's record).

100 yards, 10 seconds, Toronto, 1907 (Canadian record).

220 yards, 18 seconds, Boston, Jan. 31, 1911 (world's record).

440 yards, 37 seconds, Toronto, Feb. 11, 1913 (world's record).

One-sixth mile, 26 seconds, Cleveland, Jan 23, 1913 (world's record).

One mile, 2.41, Pittsburg, 1904, dead heat with Morris Wood (world's record).

220 yards hurdles, indoors, five hurdles, each 24 inches in height, 21 2-5 seconds, Toronto, Feb. 11, 1913.

220 yards hurdles, outdoor, 24 inches high, 25 seconds, Montreal, 1907.

One-quarter mile hurdles, indoor, twelve hurdles 24 inches high, 45 seconds, Cleveland, Jan. 23, 1913.

A total of one Canadian record and nine world's records for the boys to battle after. Fred also holds the Canadian barrel-jumping record of eleven barrels.

Running high jump on skates, 4 ft. 2 in. (Canadian record). World's record 4 ft. 3 in., held by W. H. Quinn of Boston, Mass.

Movies to Promote Safety.

The first moving picture railway car in Canada is being inaugurated by the Canadian Government system. The safety department, organised in 1914, has done excellent work. The figures for 1916 are not yet available, but in 1914 and 1915 members of the safety committees all over the line reported the correction of over 6,500 unsafe conditions and practices. During these two years also 22 fewer employes were killed, a decrease of 60 per cent.; 407 fewer employes were injured, a decrease of 29 per cent.; three fewer passengers were killed, a decrease of 50 per cent.; and four fewer trespassers met death. Hon. Frank Cochrane has now authorised the fitting up of a car for the exhibition of moving pictures dealing with the dangers of taking chances on the railway work. It will spend a week at each of the terminal points.

May Can Grayfish.

The possibility of obtaining grayfish on the Pacific coast in the winter season promises to create a larger supply of this fish, for which at present the demand far exceeds the available stocks, while at the same time it offers the fish packers of the North-West an opportunity to put their canning machinery to profitable use during the period when ordinarily it would be idle after the close of the canning season. The supply of grayfish on the west coast lasts until just before the salmon begin to run. They grayfish are not found in the winter on the Atlantic coast, but are present there in the summer. The result of this arrangement is that a winter pack can be made upon the Pacific and a summer pack upon the Atlantic.

Acts as Canadian Club.

The Brant Historical Society is planning to incorporate with its society the idea of the Canadian Club, of which there is not one in Brantford. A committee has been named to arrange for a series of addresses. It is thought this will serve the purpose of the Canadian Club.

Wrote Startling Book.

Although Madame Turczynowicz, whose book of personal observations on the war in Poland is being much discussed just now, is spoken of as an American she is only such by adoption. Miss Laura Blackstone was born near Toronto, in Georgetown, but while still quite young was taken to New York where she studied music for many years. After completing her studies in the United States, Miss Blackstone continued under English masters and became as well known in English as she was in American musical circles. Through illness she lost her voice, and it was while traveling through France and Germany in an endeavor to recuperate that she met the Polish nobleman who was to persuade her to leave the career she had chosen for herself and to share his.

Madame Turczynowicz's husband held under the Russian Government a position, similar to that of our Minister of Agriculture, over two Provinces. Before the two little boys, that are spoken of in the book, were born, he held the position of Professor in Cracow University, but as letters patent to the nobility had to be taken out for the boys they moved to Suwalki.

Despite the ill-fortune that dogged the steps of the little family, their troubles were not over when they reached the United States for the boys developed diphtheria and were for some time under quarantine. There has been some talk of Madame Tyrczynowicz lecturing on general conditions in Poland and the work of the Red Cross, but that is for the present out of the question. Not until the war is over can the family be reunited. There is no doubt a price upon the head of one who would write such a book as "When the Prussians Came to Poland," particularly so when the ruse of American citizenship, which was legally correct, brought her out.

HOLDING SCHOOL FAIRS.

The Movement Has Been Growing Steadily in the West.

Closely connected with the subject of School Gardens is the subject of school fairs. In fact the latter seems to be the natural corollary of the former, for if there is to be development in the one, there must be the means of comparison and the stimulus of competition which the other seems best fitted to supply. Thus it has proved in several provinces of Western Canada, and the result of this sequence has been found to be helpful not only to agriculture, but by its reflex action to education generally. A backward glance at the close of the year by the various provincial authorities has confirmed them in their determination to foster not only the school garden, but the school fair in the coming summer.

What is being done in these directions in Saskatchewan, for instance, as shown by the Public Service Bulletin for January, gives a good idea of the general movement throughout the West. Therein it is stated that probably no movement in recent years has been so revolutionary in its result as the school garden. "Perhaps by reason of the chase for the almighty dollar or possibly by reason of the lack of opportunity, the boy and girl in Saskatchewan have not in the past few years been given the attention which might reasonably have been expected. The year 1916, however, will be looked back upon as the year in which the boy and girl came into their own. The school fair has demonstrated beyond all doubt its value and the movement is growing at a rapid rate."

The Provincial Department of Education has undertaken the general direction of the movement, and during the past year a definite attempt was made to guide the work already begun as well as to organize new centres of activity. By arrangement with the Provincial Department of Agriculture a supply of seeds for school gardens was obtained through which schools were able to purchase their requirements. No material was supplied free of charge, but over 250 schools took advantage of this offer. For purposes of administration the province is divided into two sections, north and south. A simple form of organisation, known as the Rural Education Association, was formed in many districts, consisting of the teachers and representatives from each school and all persons interested in the work.

The typical school fair has a very wide range of specialties. In one described, seven different classes were organized: Vegetables, flowers, grains, household science, manual training, ordinary school work and contest and club work. In the household science class were exhibitions of bread and biscuit-making, preserving and canning, butter-making, and plain sewing, mending, darning, and hemming; while in the manual training section were included such articles as milking stools and chicken crates. No school fair was complete without the inclusion of sports and games.

A good idea of the interest taken in school fairs in the west may be obtained from the following approximate figures:

Number of fairs held: North, 33; south, 51; total 84 (double the number in 1915); number of children taking part: north 2,000, south 8,000, total 10,000; number of entries: north 10,000, south 30,000, total 40,000; attendance: north 5,000, south 14,000, total 19,000; number of schools represented: north 200, south 350, total 550. Twenty-five fairs were under the auspices of rural education associations.

Bishop Fallon's Offer.

In refusing to make an eloquent appeal for the Red Cross and Patriotic Fund campaigns in the city of London on the ground that talk is cheap, Bishop M. F. Fallon, of the Roman Catholic Diocese of London, announced that he is prepared to give one-third of his net income to this purpose for the duration of the war, on condition that 100 other Londoners, whose incomes exceed $3,000 a year, do likewise.

The Bank of England.

By a loan to the Government of $16,000,000 at 8 per cent. secured on taxes, the Bank of England started operations in 1694.

RURAL SCHOOLS IN MANITOBA.

How Education Prospers in Spite of Hard Climate.

In a recent report of the Department of Education of the Province of Manitoba, Canada, considerable attention is given to the rural school situation. The prairie provinces of the Dominion are notable for their magnificent distances. The rural schools are frequently very far apart, and it often becomes quite as difficult a problem to find teachers as to assemble pupils in the remoter regions. The work of supervising schools so separated, in many cases situated far away from railroads and good highways, is in itself a task demanding not only exceptional fidelity but endurance.

Yet during the year covered by the report the rural school inspector visited ninety-eight departments twice, twenty-three departments three times, and ten departments four times. Now and then he found a school closed without notice. He held numerous conferences with parents and trustees. Generally he met with a sentiment of co-operation. Ninety per cent. of the schools had school gardens. An improvement in the local supervision of teaching is noted and commended.

But the report does not stop, as such reports usually do, at a recounting of the usual facts about educational progress. It asks that the same consideration be given to the rural as to the urban child, since the future qualifications of the one for citizenship are as essential as those of the other. And it points a way to better training of the rural child through better treatment of the rural teacher. As matters stand at present the teacher is not given due attention. In the first place, a premium is put upon competition and underbidding: the department would have salaries plainly announced in advertisements, and would make appointments solely upon merit. Moreover, it recommends strongly that comfortable homes be provided for teachers.

Educators have long seen that the great defects of rural education in English-speaking North America lie in the tendency of county and district boards to put price before proficiency. There has been a strong reaction from this idea in nearly all the Eastern Canadian provinces, but it is a remarkable fact that the longest steps toward bringing the rural up to the average urban standard have been taken in the West. Touching upon this subject, The Toronto Globe recently said: "Educational work in the rural districts is carried on out West under climatic difficulties more formidable than our own, but the people are learning to adapt themselves to unfavorable conditions, and carry on a process of intensely practical development." The resistance they encounter is, perhaps, the greatest spur to their endeavor.

"Find My Hand There."

Just because a man wears civilian clothing is not sufficient reason to take it for granted that he is a shirker or is medically fit to be wearing the king's uniform. A minister's daughter, disdaining to have anything to do with a creature still in mufti, learned this to her regret when she entered a street car in Toronto recently.

The car was, as usual, crowded. A young man rose and offered his seat to the young lady who entered.

"No," she said, with a toss of her head and a scornful look at the young man. "I wouldn't accept a seat from a civilian."

For a moment the young man was embarrassed.

"Have you any relatives at the front?" he queried.

"Yes, I have two brothers there," she replied.

"Well, the next time you write ask them if they can find my hand over there," he said quietly, as he showed his arm minus the hand.

This time it was the lady who was embarrassed. The passengers hissed and the lady made her exit.

Wounds of the Heart.

In wounds of the heart itself the escape of blood is never in large quantity, and the lethal consequences are due to the fact that the escape of blood from within its cavity of cavities into the surrounding sac of the pericardium mechanically interrupts the alternate contraction and expansion by which its pumping action is maintained. Accordingly the results of the wound of the heart are usually identical with those of gradual suffocation. — Exchange.

THE OPENING OF BASEBALL YEAR

The opening of the ball season furnished nothing sensational outside the record attendance at Detroit. Both pitchers, Alexander and Johnson started on their yearly campaign of subduing batters, while Hughey Jennings showed that his Tigers are still a great offensive team, but a mighty poor defensive one. The world's series of last fall was enacted over again, with the Red Sox winning and Brooklyn losing. "One-legged" Larry Doyle was very much in evidence in enabling the Cubs to score their first victory for Fred Mitchell, but owing to a postponement the Boston fans did not have an opportunity of seeing a $3,000 umpire chase a $50,000 manager off the field. However, the Giants and Braves are billed to show their wares today.

Increased Production

Let us all catch the main idea that more production is possible. Live men are now on the executive agricultural jobs in the Western provinces. It should be an important part of their political gospel to preach production. If men, willing to farm, are deserving of help to farm and produce, the State should endeavor to do more than it has done in assisting to dig the riches out of the soil.

"IL TROVATORE" DELIGHTS LOVERS

OF GRAND OPERA AT THE OPERA HOUSE LAST NIGHT.

Peterboro lovers of grand opera were given a treat last night when the Boston English Opera Company presented "Il Trovatore" at the Grand Opera House. Verdi's masterpiece, as it is properly called is full of those tunes which go to delight the music-lover, as is shown that in all programmes selections from "Il Trovatore" are most popular. As it was presented last night it was satisfying and well balanced, not only as regards singing and acting but costumes and stage settings as well.

Joseph F. Sheehan in a fine, robust tenor voice and careful acting, had the leading tenor part, and sang it in a manner that delighted the large audience. Arthur Deane, as Count Di Luna, sang and acted well, and Robert Evans, as Ferrando, his follower, sang the base part effectively. To Mlle. Nelli Gardini was assigned the part of Leonora, and her rich voice and capable acting made it very enjoyable. Her scene with Manrico, in which is presented the Miserere and "Ah, I have sighed to rest me," the most popular part of the opera, was very effective. Miss Elaine De Sellem played the part of the gipsy hag, and both her acting and singing were delightful. Miss Florentine St. Clair, as Inez, Leonora's attendant, and Wm. Young, as Manrico's aide-de-camp, also sang well. The well-trained chorus sang smoothly and well up to its work.

It was a real treat to hear the old tunes that have delighted thousands, and which age cannot wither nor custom stale, sung in such a finished and effective manner as that in which Mr. Sheehan and his colleagues sang them last night.

JOHN COMSTOCK LAID TO REST

IN LINDSAY UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE ODDFELLOWS.

The funeral of the late John Comstock took place yesterday afternoon from the residence of his nephew, Mr. J. L. Brown, 15 Melbourne St., Lindsay, and was laregly attended. Many old friends of the deceased gentleman called at the residence to pay their last respects. The funeral was under the auspices of Lindsay Lodge, No. 100, I. O. O. F. The pallbearers were all veterans of the Lodge and old friends of deceased, namely: Bros. Thos. Stewart, J. A. Matthie, Geo. Mills, J. W. Anderson, Ald. Robt. Chamber and G. H. Wilson.

Among the beautiful floral tributes were noticed: Red Cross, Royal Black Preceptory and L. O. L. No. 720, St. Catharines; wreath, J. W. Shelly, Calgary; pillow, Capt. and Mrs. H. Boyle, St. Catharines; wreath, Welland Avenue Methodist Church, St. Catharines, three links, Lindsay Lodge, No. 100, I.O.O.F.; wreath, Joseph Brown and family; tent, Guiding Star Encampment, No. 22, Lindsay; spray, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brown; wreath, Mr. and Mrs. A. Flack and Mr. and Mrs. Will Brown; spray, Mr. Will Vickers, St. Catharines; sheaf, Mr. Aaron Comstock, Peterborough.

The service at the house at 2:30 was conducted by Rev. A. H. Going of the Cambridge Street Methodist Church, who spoke very feelingly of the departed, and particularly of his bright Christian life.

Among those from a distance who attended the funeral were: Mrs. J. W. Shelly, Calgary; Mr. and Mrs. Manson Comstock, Peterborough; Mr. Aaron Comstock (brother), Peterborough; Manson Campbell, Chatham; Aaron, Will and Jack Comstock, Peterborough; Mrs. McIntyre, Mrs. Bailey, Mrs. Johnston, Peterborough, and Mrs. Snell, Hastings.

The flag on the town hall was at half-mast during the day out of respect to the memory of one of Lindsay's old citizens and aldermen.

Clean Bicycle's Rusty Rims

The majority of mishaps which arise from skidding are due to brake application, writes a cyclist. I took out a machine fitted with steel rims, round which a brake path had been worn, and the damp weather had rusted. I did not apply the brake until necessity arose, and then skidded violently, mainly due to the action of the harsh grip on the rusted rim. Now, had I worn off that rust by brake application for a few yards where no danger threatened, it is more than probable I should not have been given a nerve-shattering steering shock. Anyhow, it seems to me worth while cleaning up your rusty rims by a little extra work on a safe bit of road, rather than run the risk of a sudden and ungraceful dismount.

Customs returns show that during the year ending March 31, 1913, since which time Manitoba has been steadily growing, the province imported 1,596,480 dozen eggs, valued at $774,121. It took fifty-four cars to bring in the dressed poultry required over and above all local supply, representing a value of about $243,000. Approximately two million pounds of butter were received at Winnipeg from the United States and Eastern Canada during 1912, a value of $560,000.

Winnipeg creamery companies paid $120,000 for milk and cream from two Minnesota cities alone. The customs receipts for imported bacon and hams amounted to nearly 5,000,000 pounds, worth $572,569. A Woman's Problem

How to Feel Well During Middle Life Told by Three Women Who Learned from Experience.

The Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs. Read these letters:—

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I started the Change of Life five years ago. I always had a headache and backache with bearing down pains and I would have heat flashes very bad at times with dizzy spells and nervous feelings. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new person and am in better health and no more troubled with the aches and pains I had before I took your wonderful remedy. I recommend it to my friends for I cannot praise it enough."—Mrs. MARGARET GRASSMAN, 759 N. Ringgold St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Beverly, Mass.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for nervousness and dyspepsia, when I was going through the Change of Life. I found it very helpful and I have always spoken of it to other women who suffer as I did and have had them try it and they also have received good results from it."—Mrs. GEORGE A. DUNBAR, 17 Roundy St., Beverly, Mass.

Erie, Pa.—"I was in poor health when the Change of Life started with me and I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, or I think I should not have got over it as easy as I did. Even now if I do not feel good I take the Compound and it restores me in a short time. I will praise your remedies to every woman for it may help them as it has me."—Mrs. E. KISSLING, 931 East 24th St., Erie, Pa.

No other medicine has been so successful in relieving woman's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Women may receive free and helpful advice by writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Such letters are received and answered by women only and held in strict confidence.

Picturesque Character Dead.

James Duckworth, known as "the old miser of Snelgrove," is dead, and his remains were taken to their last resting place at Glen Williams a few days ago. The old fellow was born on the farm where he died, eighty years ago, and was found dead in his bed one bitterly cold January morning. The old man's sister died some years ago, and her bed remains still in the same condition as when she left it. His brother James' couch had also been left untouched for many years in the lonely brick house, while his own old-fashioned canopied bed was the only piece of furniture adorning the miser's private apartment with its thickly cobwebbed ceiling. When Chief Constable Herkes, of Brampton, investigated, the mattress of the bed crumbled under his hands as he tried to turn it over, while he came upon an account book containing nearly $800 in notes, many of them dating as far back as 1870, and quite fresh. A bank book showing $39,600 to the old man's credit in the Dominion Bank was found under the mattress. Scotch newspapers were scattered by the side of the bed, and in an old box, among screws and nails and pieces of string were found several mortgages, indicating that the deceased must have been worth $100,000 at least. His 250-acre farm, five miles west of Brampton, has not been touched by the plough for 20 years or more.

SUFFERING POLAND.

Canadian Woman Escapes From Martyred Country.

Vivid stories of the sufferings of the people of Poland under the German yoke are told by Mrs. Zucker, daughter of Rabbi I. Rosenberg, of Toronto. Mrs. Zucker and her six-year-old daughter succeeded in getting away from Warsaw in December. They recently arrived in New York, and afterwards journeyed to their home in Hamilton.

"Most of the Warsaw factories are closed," said Mrs. Zucker in an interview, "and many of the manufacturers are working for a living as peddlers and small merchants. All the rich merchants left for Russia before the city was invaded by the Germans. The great majority of the population is starving. A card system is used in doling out the necessities of life. Each person is entitled to seven pounds of bread and twelve pounds of potatoes weekly. Food riots with loss of life occur every day. Most of the restaurants are closed. Thousands of starving people hang around the soup kitchens, struggling for bread and soup once a day. Those fortunate enough to secure a recommendation from the city council get free meals. Others must pay five kopecks (2½c) for a meal.

"Clothing is very scarce. The price of a plain overcoat is 50 Rs. ($25). Bare-bodied people are seen everywhere. Instead of shoes their feet are covered with rags. When the Germans invaded Warsaw nobody could walk on the streets after 9 p.m. Offenders were punished by imprisonment and fined large sums of money."

"The population of Warsaw does not believe in the sincerity of the Teutonic proclamation regarding the establishment of the Polish kingdom," said Mrs. Zucker. "They claim this was only a scheme to secure recruits for the Teutonic armies. Everyone earnestly hopes for the Allies' victory and the time when Poland will come again under Russian rule. All nationalities of Warsaw firmly decided not to enlist in the Polish army unless forced to do so."

Mrs. Zucker had great difficulty in securing permission to leave Poland. She applied, but was refused, owing to the fact that she was going to her husband in Canada, an enemy country. Finally she presented documents showing that her husband had moved from Canada to the United States, and she was then allowed to go. Before her departure, her personal letters were carefully examined and sealed by the German officials. When she left her house she was besieged by many neighbors, men, women, and children, all crying bitterly, and prayed her to inform American Jews about their sufferings. "That was a real funeral," said Mrs. [illegible]

HOW CANADIAN TROOPS ARE TRAINED.

Baseball Player At the Front

ALTHOUGH the names of athletes that have figured most prominent in the war reports from the Canadian front have been most those of oarsmen, Rugby, lacrosse, and hockey players, there is one outstanding exception to that rule. At least one exponent of the national game of the United States has been doing splendid work with the Canadian forces. Lieut. William O'Hara, former member of the Toronto baseball team of the International League and outfielder with the New York Giants of the National League, has returned to Toronto direct from the Somme on a brief leave of absence. "Bill," as he is popularly known, left the world of sport for the world of battle about eighteen months ago. He enlisted in the Royal Naval Air Service, completed his course at the Curtiss Aviation School with high honors, and went overseas. After several months in the aviation game, "Bill" transferred to an infantry battalion, going into France with the 24th. And now, after six months of continuous duty in the Ypres and Somme sections, exposed to the most severe gruelling that the Canadians have yet received, he is back, safe and sound, and in the pink of condition.

"Bill" set at rest many of the reports that have been in circulation concerning his activities at the front. The most persistent one—that he had been wounded and his eyesight affected — was stoutly denied by O'Hara. Another report that he had been taken from the infantry and placed in charge of a bombing squad was also declared to be erroneous. "I went into the 24th as a lieutenant in charge of a platoon," said "Bill," "and there I stayed until I was given leave of absence. I met many Toronto boys over there that I knew when they were engaged in different lines of sport in Canada. Art Dissette, the old Parkdale football player, has made a great reputation for himself. He passed his examinations in the aerial service with high honors and developed into a high-class aviator. Jack McCamus, the old St. Michael's hockey player, is also doing splendidly. The Canadians are popular wherever they go, and are accorded the best of treatment."

During his first two months in the trenches O'Hara was stationed in the Ypres salient, and was within a few miles of the town of Ypres. Although the Canadians lost heavily in the salient fighting, they were successful in inflicting heavy losses on the Germans. "Bill" explained the method employed by the Germans in disseminating the deadly poisonous gas. The gas is contained in long, heavy cylinders and stationed about fifty yards apart along the front desired to be effected. When the wind blows in the proper direction small taps are opened, and the gas drifts toward the enemy in great dense clouds. The use of poisonous gas, however, has been discontinued to a great extent. There is always the possibility that the wind will change and the men using the gas will suffer accordingly.

"I do not think that the Canadians ever used gas in their attacks," said O'Hara.

"Bill" painted a graphic word picture of the immense tanks and their activities.

"If they could only make a little more speed they would be of invaluable assistance," he said. "They are gigantic steel cars that plod steadily along over everything. They are operated by five men and carry machine guns and 13-pounders. They drop into holes as big as an ordinary house, turn over on their sides, right themselves, and pull right out of the holes. They are heavily armored and will withstand ordinary gunfire, although a fair hit from German artillery would demolish them. A shell can burst within ten feet of them without doing any harm. They drop right into trenches, slip over on their sides, and the caterpillar wheels pull them out in great shape."

After two months at Ypres, "Bill" was moved over to the Somme, and during the past four months has passed through some of the most severe fighting of the war. The Canadians suffered especially heavy losses, but were successful in accounting for large numbers of Germans, and taking many prisoners. "The Allies are gaining ground every day," said O'Hara, "but it is [illegible] a battle of endurance. And when it comes to staying in the game right to the limit, none of them have anything on the Canadians."

While in London previous to his departure for Canada, "Bill" met Dr. M. M. Crawford, who is attached to the Orpington, Kent., Hospital. The doctor is in fine fettle, and although kept very busy, is enjoying his life. Colonel "Dick" Greer, Capt. Tom Flanagan, and other members of the Sportsmen's Battalion, were also encountered by Lieut. O'Hara during his stay in London. The Sportsmen have been broken up, and while some of the officers are in France, many still remain in England.

This splendid record indicates that a man can become proficient in the national game of the United States without losing his Canadian spirit.

A Y. M. C. A. Without Debt.

A donation of $1,000 received from California from the widow of the late Hon. James Young, and several smaller subscriptions, bring the total amount raised in the recent Y. M. C. TRAINMEN ANXIOUS.

There is considerable unrest among the trainmen of the C. P. R. because of the delay in settling their request by the officials in Montreal. Some months ago they sent a committee to Montreal, representing every division, asking for an improvement in their conditions. A True Democrat.

Mr. John Ross Robertson, proprietor of The Toronto Telegram, and well known for his public benevolences, has declined a knighthood, which, it seemed, was proffered to him among the delayed New Year honors. "There is no reason to give, beyond that I exercised the same right as the others who have accepted, and I declined—I hope graciously and gracefully," remarked Mr. Robertson.

On the same day, it seems, Mr. John Ross Robertson declined a senatorship, which the Borden Government offered him, and, in the words of a well known politician, "It is the first time in the history of Canada that anyone declined a knighthood and a senatorship on the same day."

The first Canadian to decline that honor was the late Sir J. B. Robinson, in 1838, when both he and Sir Allan Macnab were recommended for knighthood. Sir Allan accepted. Mr. Robinson declined, but was knighted many years later.

A POLISH GENIUS.

One of the Greatest Writers of Descriptive English.

Joseph Conrad, who has gained a place among the greatest of British authors, is British only by adoption, as he was born in Poland, of Polish parents. His real name is not Conrad, but Korzeniowski, but he wisely changed it to a nom de plume better suited to English-speaking tongues when he entered upon his literary career. His father, a Polish squire and landowner, was a man of culture and literary tastes, and translated into Polish many French, English, and Spanish works, including several of Shakespeare's dramas, Hugo's "Les Miserables," "Don Quixote," "Gil Blas," and other romances and books of travel and history. For political reasons the elder Korzeniowski was exiled to Vologda, and, when he died, Joseph was taken in charge by an uncle, studying in the public schools and under a private tutor. From the time he was ten years old he was an omnivorous reader, and the books of romance and travel he devoured inspired him with a longing for adventures by sea, and he made his way to Marseilles, where he was given a job on a French ship. His first voyage was to ports on the Gulf of Mexico. In 1877 he got a berth on an English ship bound for the Azov Sea. There a cargo of grain was taken on board, and it was from this ship that Korzeniowski—as he was still known—first stepped on English soil. He liked the country and decided to remain for a time, and soon mastered the English tongue. In 1884 he became a British subject and changed his name to Conrad. The lure of the sea still held him, and he worked his way up from cabin boy to captain of merchant ships which sailed the seven seas. It was on a voyage in a sailing ship between Australia and the Cape of Good Hope that Skipper Conrad was transformed into a author. His love for the sea was only exceeded by his love for literature, and he had even tried to write, although this remained a secret until the voyage in question. He had as passengers two young college men who talked much of books, and to them Captain Conrad showed in fear and trembling a manuscript on which he had been working at odd times for years. The passengers were loud in their praises of the captain's work, and when Conrad returned to England he submitted the manuscript to a London publisher, who accepted it. "One of the young men who encouraged Conrad was John Galsworthy. Since then Mr. Conrad has written many books, and has become famous as one of the greatest writers of descriptive English.

Soldier Blue to Replace Navy.

Soldier blue is seen just now so often that it seems probable this softer, more becoming shade may in time wholly supersede the dark marine tone. Partly because of dye shortage, partly because anything remotely resembling military dress is almost sure of success, this color is being used a great deal and a very pleasant change it makes. Organdie blouses trimmed with fine white lace collars and cuffs, silk dresses and street suits are all to be found of soldier blue.

SAVE but HOW?

You are daily admonished by Bankers, Cabinet Ministers, Judges, and by all the Press of the Country, to save and be thrifty. In fact, the stamps on our letters are cancelled by the admonition to "Save, Save, Save, etc."

Outside of the Bankers' Association, who have recommended the Banks, very few other suggestions have been made.

Why has no person suggested or recommended the greatest thrift producer and the greatest anti-poverty institution known to the Public?

For instance, let us suppose two thousand men at say age 25 propose to test this principle for say twenty years, and one-half of them invest a small sum annually in a bank and the other thousand deposit an equal amount annually with this anti-poverty institution. Now, if I can show you that those who deposited with the anti-poverty institution not only received more than those who deposited in the bank, but that the anti-poverty institution paid to the beneficiaries of the unfortunate depositors who were unable to continue their payments, the large additional sum of $159,000.00 which the banks kept for their stockholders. WOULD THAT INTEREST YOU?

The banks are all right, but if I can show you that this anti-poverty institution not only gave better security and actually gave better returns, but in addition they gave a Bond that if anything unforeseen, such as Death, happen you, they would protect you and your estate to any extent desired, WOULD IT INTEREST YOU?

The above facts can be verified to you by calling at, 'phoning or writing the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, 402 Water Street, and such action on your part places you under no obligation whatever.

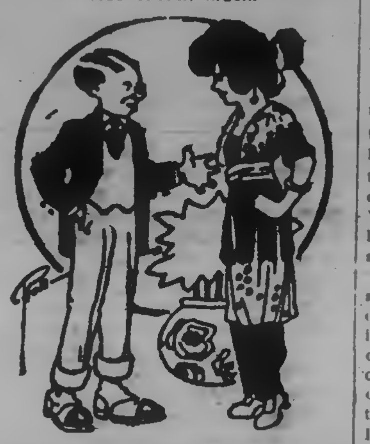
His Secret Died With Him.

One man gave up his life in the search for a new explosive a few years ago. He was a scientist named Wartenberger. He had spent years of his life in the midst of awful perils in search of a new explosive. He found one at last which the experiments of the United States government experts satisfied them was even more powerful than dynamite. The government offered Wartenberger $1,000,000 for his invention, provided he could perfect a method of firing the fearful stuff by means of electricity instead of a fuse. While he was engaged in these experiments an explosion occurred which killed the unfortunate inventor.

Cattle In Paraguay.

Although various estimates place the number of cattle in Paraguay all the way from one to four million head, the cattle industry, with untold possibilities, is scarcely out of the stage when the animals are slaughtered for their hides alone. While all the world is clamoring for meat, cattle in Paraguay sell for but little more than what their skins will bring.

Not Worth Much.



He—No; the governor doesn't pay me more than I am worth.

She—How in the world do you manage to live on it?

Some Tips For the Real Home Seamstress.

HOW TO FRESHEN OLD TOGS.

Various Tricks That Clever Dressmakers Use to Renovate Old Clothes So They Look Positively Parisian—How to Clean Rumpled Finery and Lace.

A pair of shoes have served only half their usefulness when you take them to the cobbler to be resoled for the first time. With the new soles and a little care they will serve as long a term of usefulness as that which they have already served.

So with the frock that hangs abandoned in the back of your clothes closet. The last time you put it on you were ashamed of its ragged condition. The sleeves were frayed at the wrists, and a button was missing at the front, and there was—yes, there actually was—a spot in the front panel. So you determined that the dress was done for.

But unless one is rolling in wealth she will find it to her advantage to get out that old frock and take an inventory of what remains in good condition. Would she give $2 for a dress that would wear as long as that dress has already worn—perhaps without all the first freshness, but attractive enough for wear at home, at least? Well, surely for that amount and a few hours of patience the dress can be restored marvelously.

Of course, the dress is a little gone at the bottom. Begin there by ripping out the hem, brushing it carefully and if the edge is badly frayed in places cutting the hem off entirely at the line of the turning up. Next sew this piece on again in a neat narrow seam, press the seam open and turn it up again. It will be only a trifle shorter than the dress was last year, just the distance of the seam in the hem.

If the sleeves were long and if they were tight that is probably the next place that needs attention. But don't let that discourage you, for the sleeves may be removed entirely and in their place sleeves of georgette crape or chiffon to match the main tones of the frock may be put in. These sleeves should be cut to fit the armholes exactly, but it is very attractive to let them hang in straight fullness from a place a little above the elbow. These sleeves should be turned up in a narrow hem, held in place by a line of French knots or featherstitching at the bottom. They should be long enough to extend well below the wrist. Now, from the old sleeves cut a neat strip about three-quarters of an inch wide and stitch this on both sides, arrange the fullness of the sleeves at the wrist in a few gathers at the back of the wrist, fasten it securely and finish the wrist with the strip of the stitched material, leaving the ends of the sleeves to form a dainty ruffle about the hand.

Before putting the sleeves into the frock see that it is as clean as possible. The best way to do this is to immerse the entire frock in gasoline, rub well the spots between the hands and put it out to dry without wringing the gasoline out. Air it well before trying to wear the gown.

And now comes the final renovation, which consists of cutting out the old collar and neck fixings, which are always sure to show the wear first, and finishing the neck line in a deep V. Now, with the repair money still in hand buy a fichu. Very pretty deep fichus with ends at the front can be had for 50 cents or a dollar made of sheer lawn, trimmed with lawn ruffles.

For the same outlay, of course, a finer fichu could be made at home, or if you have more to spend a fichu of georgette crape could be bought. Extremely effective are fichus of double frilling made especially for this purpose in georgette crape, net or fine lawn.

One-half cupful of cut and floured raisins may be added.

A POET-FARMER SPEAKS.

Peter McArthur Has Unique Views on Empire Building.

Mr. Peter McArthur, the Canadian farmer-poet and litterateur, who in his newspaper sketches and his books such as his recent work, "In Pastures Green," sings the praises of country life, and sounds the slogan, "Back to the Land," recently addressed the Empire Club in Toronto. He claimed some authority to deal with topics of Empire, for, as he humorously said, he had had a unique experience in the study of Empire problems, have been "dead broke" in all the great centres of Anglo-Saxon civilisation. This had given him the unusual opportunity of studying imperial problems from the bottom up, instead of the usual way, from the top down, with a return ticket in your pocket. The difference was shown in Kipling's poem—

The toad beneath the harrow knows
Exactly where the tooth-point goes.

The speaker had felt a good many of the tooth-points. In the ordinary way of travel the opposite attitude was true, as shown by Kipling—

The butterfly beside the road
Preaches contentment to that toad.

The public opinion by which the problem of democracy in the Empire will be solved" is now being formed, not so much by press or platform or pulpit as by the letters from the boys at the firing-line or on their way there. Hundreds of thousands of these letters are penetrating every community of the country, giving first-hand impressions of Canadian boys on coming in contact with the old-world civilizations; and something is happening that is entirely in accord with the genius of the Canadian people. We are having a great force developed which is entirely leaderless; nobody could have planned it; no one foresaw it; but we are having at the present moment a democratic conference regarding the affairs of the Empire. Our boys are meeting their fellows in the old-world, and the impressions they receive they transmit to us, with the result that public opinion is forming rapidly and becoming very coherent. While we are all interested in the Imperial Conference, and look for the accomplishment of great things from it, it is well to remember that the public opinion by which the men of that conference must stand or fall is now being formed by the democratic conference of the boys at the front. The speaker told of buying the old farm on which he had been raised, and finding among the documents an old parchment with the king's seal, and the description which for the first time since the creation of the world set out the metes and bounds of the lot of land which his own father had cleared. It made him feel as though he had received the deed directly from the hand of God. He told with fine touches of pathos and humor, how Neil McAlpine had saved the Talbot settlement in Western Ontario by refusing to sell his precious store of wheat, the whole 3,000 bushels of which were given to the settlers in time of stress on the basis of bushel for bushel, to be returned from next harvest. McAlpine, as described by an Irish Catholic who profited by his loyalty and goodness, was "a Presbyterian on Sundays, but a good neighbor all the rest of the time." McAlpine, said the speaker, was a true Empire-builder helping his neighbors in time of need; and this will be the spirit of Empire after the war. The speaker thought the inner history of Canada had never been written, for thousands of men like McAlpine were never mentioned in histories.

APPLES AS FOOD FOR CHILDREN AND GROWNUPS

There is probably no fruit more suitable for children's food and which they like better than apples. They like, too, any dish of which apples are a component part. Try some of the following recipes. The grownups will enjoy them as much as the children. They are choice and well tried recipes given by the department of home economics of the University of Wisconsin:

Apple Sauce Cake—One cup apple sauce (unsweetened), one cup sugar, one cup shortening, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon cloves, one-eighth teaspoon salt, one cup raisins, one teaspoon soda, two and one half cups or more of flour. Mix in the order given. Bake in moderate oven.

Apple Whip—One cup unsweetened apple sauce, whites of three eggs, three tablespoons powdered sugar, one-fourth teaspoon baking powder, juice and rind of one half lemon. Beat eggs until stiff, add sugar and baking powder. Cut and fold in the apple sauce, mixed with the lemon. Turn into buttered dish, set dish in pan of water, bake in slow oven until firm to the touch.

Apple Roll—Two medium sized sour apples, three-fourths cup sugar, one cup dough, roll out about one inch thich, spread the sliced apples over the dough, and sprinkle with a little sugar. Roll as for cinnamon rolls, cut off slices about one-half inch thick. Boil the sugar and water two or three minutes. Pour it into the bottom of a shallow baking pan. Lay the apple roll in it. Sprinkle a little cinnamon and sugar over all. Bake in a moderate oven until apples are done and crust a golden brown. Serve with thick syrup and cream.

Stuffed Baked Apples—Wash and core the number of apples desired. Place in baking dish. Fill the centres with orange marmalade, jelly or a mixture of chopped nuts and raisins. Cover the bottom of the dish with hot water. Cook in oven until the apples are tender. Serve hot or cold with cream.

Escalloped Sweet Potatoes and Apple—Use the ordinary apple and boiled sweet potatoes sliced thin. Fill a baking dish with alternate layers, placing the potatoes on top. Sprinkle with sugar and dot with butter and bake one hour. The apple juice will cook to the top and form a rich brown crust. This is especially fine with wild duck or other game.

Apple Compote — Four apples with three-fourths cup sugar, one cup water. Core, pare the apples, dissolve the sugar in the water, then let cook about five minutes. In this syrup cook apples until tender, turning them often to keep them in shape and to cook apple thoroughly. Remove the plate carefully, let syrup cook, boil until it is quite thick. Pour over the apples and serve with a dish of whipped cream on each apple. The core may be filled with chopped dates or nuts.

Apple Cobbler—Pare and quarter enough apples to fill a baking dish three-fourths full. Cover with a rich baking powder biscuit dough made soft. Spread it over the apples without rolling. Make several cuts in the centre to allow the steam to escape. Bake three-quarters of an hour, and serve hot with sugar and rich cream.

Apple Gems—Chop four sour apples fine, add one beaten egg, two table spoons molasses, one and one-half cups Indian cornmeal, one and one-half cups flour, one half teaspoon salt, two teaspoons baking powder. Add sufficient milk to make thick drop batter and bake in hot greased gem pans.

HOW THEY MANAGE IN TORONTO

In Toronto they go about the municipal gardening plan in a splendid manner, and the wives of soldiers at the front are given extra consideration.

The Vacant Lot Cultivation Association is taking over all applications for vacant lots for gardens, and Mr. J. W. Woods, of the Board of Trade, and his War Production Club will look after the digging of all backyard gardens of soldiers' wives where there are not men at home. In fairness to Mr. Woods, all applications should be sent in this week to Mrs. Hastings, 252 Russell Hill road.

This will prove to the farmers that Mr. Woods and his club are the kind of men the farmer wants.

The Horticultural Society is giving free seeds for these back gardens for soldiers' wives, and the potato showers supply the potatoes for planting. They are co-operating with the committee of the Conservative Resources to try to secure advisers who will go among the city gardens in June to advise amateur gardeners. The committee is now preparing definite suggestions of inexpensive ways of preserving the products of the gardens for winter use, and these will be made public as soon as necessary.

A "FIRELESS" WARNING.

How to Handle Food So It Won't Ferment.

It is not for economy's sake alone, but for the blessed convenience of them, that so many of us are welcoming fireless cookers to our homes. For those who can afford to provide themselves with the "boughten" kinds printed instructions dealing with the methods of most efficient use are generally included. But even those pamphlets of tempting recipes, with their careful directions, have been known to omit a certain rather vital fact about fireless, while those of us who contrive the homemade apparatus, using a box or candy pail or even the now classic ice cream freezer pail, may have to find out this same fact at cost of some goodly portion of leftover food or even by risk of slight illness.

The fact alluded to is this: Food of any sort served hot from its cooking in the "fireless" needs, as a rule, no additional heating to make it ready for the table. But should any remain it must never be set away for future use without being first brought to full boiling point and being kept there long enough to destroy the chance of its spoiling within the next few hours. This precaution [illegible] weather, is the only way to prevent the quick fermentation which follows the long, slow cooking operation at less than simmering heat, once the contents of the cooking kettle have stood cooling still more slowly in the open. Soup stock is particularly liable to cause trouble of this nature if not brought to a good bubbling point before setting away after removal from the fireless.

To Bake Potatoes.

In these days of high prices we must use potatoes with the skins on if we want to get the maximum amount of nourishment from them.

Here is a new way to bake them. Wash as many as are required for the meal and remove a slice from the end while damp, wrap them in oiled paper and tie.

Place in moderate oven and bake for an hour. Do not open until ready to serve. They will have no hard crust to throw away and the skin will be found tender enough to eat.

Smocked Evening Wraps.

Evening wraps which are really warm and entirely envelop the figure are made of velvet and satin, in verdi-ble turquoise blue, slate green, peacock blue and vatican purple.

KEROSENE USES

Kerosene is a useful helper in housework; so much so that one can afford to ignore its odor, for that is not so very disagreeable after all, and evaporates quickly.

In laundry work it softens hard water, and is wonderfully helpful if added to the water in which clothes are soaked over night, and it may be added, too, to the water in which the clothes are to be boiled, adding it when the water is cold. The clothes are then put in and the water brought slowly to the boiling point. The second or third boilerful must be treated the same way, using fresh water and kerosene each time. Two rinsings in clear water, or better still, three are necessary for clothing washed or boiled with kerosene.

Oiled floors can be kept clean and in perfect condition by wiping off daily with a cloth or mop moistened with the following mixture: 1 pint of boiled linseed oil, 1 quart of kerosene and 1 pint of vinegar. Shake well together and bottle. Before using shake well, as the ingredients separate. The kerosene and vinegar cleanse and the linseed oil finishes and polishes the floor. A little kerosene poured into garbage cans will keep flies and other insects away.

Cheese Making

Whatever may be the virtues of sour milk and its products, certain it is that one of these, namely, cheese, is one of the oldest food preparatins known to man. That the preparation of cheese was one of the oldest technical processes appears from the fact that it was known during the time of King David at least 1,000 years before Christ. The Greeks were acquainted with the process before the writings of Homer were produced to destrop the peace of mind of the school boy of a day.

Aristocle and Hippocrites described the curdling of milk, which at that time appears to have been accomplished by the use of the juice of figs. The use of cheese appears to have been common in Rome in the earlier days of that city and Empire, but most of it was imported from the north. Caesar speaks of the preparation of cheese among the German tribes.

The Different Kinds of Cheese

The many kinds of cheese on the market are due, amongst other things, to the different kinds of milk used, the general environment, and the nature of the bacterial activity which causes the "ripening." Experts claim that such famous cheese as Cheddar, Roquefort, and Limberger cannot be successfully duplicated or imitated outside the districts and countries in which they were first produced or developed. The home of the Cheddar cheese is in England, more particularly Somerset, and although the particular bacteria which ripens the product in England is imported, and all the particulars of manufacture are followed carefully, the cheese produced, although an excellent article, does not possess that something which distinguishes the Cheddar cheese of England. The same holds good with the Roquefort cheese, which is manufactured in Lombardy, with Limberger, which was first made in parts of Belgium and later in Germany, and with all the foreign cheeses. Each country appears to have its own cheese, and many food experts counsel the perfecting of the cheese peculiar to each country, rather than an attempt to imitate the cheese ripened in other countries.

WHY ONIONS CAUSE TEARS.

What we call tears is merely an over-supply of an eye-wash provided by Nature. The tears are always there, doing their work unobtrusively until something causes an extra flow, too much to be carried away by the little tear-trough and aperture with which the eye is provided. In that case the tears roll over the edge of the lower eyelid in a manner with which we are all familiar. Onions contain something that is very trying to the eyes, and the tears coming quickly overcome the worst of the smarting produced, and save the eyes from injury.

SOME IDEAS IN HOUSECLEANING

Devote a few minutes at the beginning of housecleanig to sew stout straps of tape or canvas to the sides of the mattresses. Nothing is more conducive to weariness than tugging at a heavy mattress on which one cannot get a good finger-hold. Make the straps long enough to admit the hand readily, pin them flat along the sides of the mattress and sew the ends securely.

Some mattresses have these straps attached when purchased. If they have not, by all means add them because of the ease with which they can then be handled.

If you have some tender old curtains which are likely to tear in washing, fold them evenly several times and baste loosely with white thread. Wash and rinse carefully, remove the bastings only when the curtain is ready for the curtain stretchers. When the curtains are wet they are much heavier and it is lifting this weight by a single thickness of the material that tears them.

CARROTS AND CELERY.

Dice the carrots and cook until tender. Cook the same amount of celery cut into smal pieces. Mix and serve hot with a white sauce.

HOMINY CROQUETTES.

Wash a cup of hominy and cook for three hours in a double boiler ~~with one quart of milk.~~ Season with salt, pepper and one tablespoon of onion juice. Add the yolks of two eggs, well beaten. Mix thoroughly. When cold, shape into croquettes, dip in egg and crumbs and fry in deep fat. Serve with tomato sauce or slices of lemon.

CORN FRITTERS.

To one canful of corn add two well-beaten eggs and a cupful of flour, in which has been sifted a teaspoonful of baking powder and one of salt. Drop by spoonfuls into the deep, hot fat, and cook till light brown.

TO REMOVE TACKS EASILY.

When tacks are driven too far into a hardwood floor to be removed easily, a drop of oil poured on and around the tack will prove a wonderful help. The oil acts as a lubricant on the rusty head and hardwood surface beneath.

GERMANS BOAST OF SUCCESSES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, April 13. — On the northern wing of the Arras battlefield, says an official statement issued today from German army headquarters staff, the preliminary successes of a strong British attack against Angres and Givenchy Engohelle were balanced by German counter-attacks. The German statement adds that on the roads from Peronne to Cambrai and Le Catelet minor engagements occurred yesterday between Gouzeaucourt and Hargicourt.

VANCOUVER OFFICERS KILLED.

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 13.—Capt. Gordon Tupper, son of Sir Charles Tupper, and Lieut. Alfred Lineham, brother of Arthur Lineham, manager of the News-Advertiser, have been killed in action.

CANUCKS AND SCOTS WON GLORY TOGETHER AT VIMY

Canadians Loud in Praises of Kilted Men Who Kept Pace With Them in Everything.

With British Armies in France.—Canadians on Monday, anticipating a northern offensive and a possible outflanking of their Vimy positions, a switch running north from the Hindenburg line was planned. In the meantime Germans, driven back from their old positions, were endeavoring to dig themselves in in various places, especially in front of Monchy Le Preaux, in which process they suffered heavy casualties from artillery and machine guns.

It is rather difficult to explain the exact situation where the attacks centre on the arbitrary German field positions rather than on towns and villages, but in modern warfare, the taking of a bit of trench or strong point which is marked only on war maps may be of far greater importance and significance than the capture of a well-known city.

Towards the southern end of the British line north-west of St. Quentin, an attack was made today over an extended front, and at some places the British advanced more than a mile. Various important places, including Gouzecourt were captured. In the meantime Canadians further north fought their way through the wood located on the eastern front of Vimy Ridge.

The Canadians, by the way, are loud in their praise of the Scottish troops, who fought south of them in taking the ridges. The kilted men everywhere kept pace with the troops of the Dominion, giving invaluable assistance in winning the great victory. It was estimated today that the captured guns number more than 160.

TYPHOID CASES RARE IN ARMY

ONLY FOUR OR FIVE OCCUR MONTHLY AMONG FIVE MILLION MEN.

LONDON, April 13 .— Surgeon-General Sir Alfred Keogh, of the British Army, said that since the war began, American army experts have been working in close co-operation with British Army Medical Service, and have had, and will have full advantage of the experience of that service. In the whole British army of five million men, Sir Alfred said there are only four or five cases of typhoid monthly.

SERBIANS RISE IN OPEN REVOLT

The Bulgarian Government has despatched troops to Nish to suppress the disorders, which are said to have reached grave proportions.

BRITISH WIN ON THREE MILE FRONT: GERMAN LINE BROKEN EVERYWHERE AND FOE DRIVEN TO LAST RESORT

Position Now Held by Enemy Lacks Defences and Desperate Efforts Are Made to Provide These---French Troops Report Gains.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 13. — German positions on a wide front have been captured by the British after severe fighting, the war office announces. The front attacked extended from a point north of Hargicourt to the village of Metz en Coture. The British captured the town and wood of Gouzeaucourt, Gauche wood and Sart Farm.

MACHINE GUNS DRIVE BACK FOE.

LONDON, April 13. — An official statement says: "We attacked last night in the region between St. Quentin and Cambrai. After sharp fighting we captured the enemy's positions on a wide front, from north of Hargicourt to Metz en Coture. We now hold Sart Farm, Gauche wood, Gouzeaucourt village and Gouzeaucourt wood.

"During the night our troops carried out a successful raid southwest of Loos. Dugouts of the enemy were bombarded and considerable damage was done to his defences. In the neighborhood of Ploegsteert a hostile raiding party came under our machine gun fire, failing to reach our trenches."

GERMANS' POSITION A LAST RESORT.

LONDON, April 13. — Under improved weather conditions there was stiff fighting along virtually two-thirds of the British front today. In addition to the gain made in a new attack between Hargicourt and Metz en Coture, the British are making progress further north.

Another mile of the Hindenburg line southeast of Arras has been taken, as shown by last night's official communication, giving a total width of three and one-half miles to the turning movement at the top of this famous position.

In falling back the Germans are making in the direction of an emergency auxiliary line to the rear of the Hindenburg line, called the Drocourtqueant work. This position is far from complete, and the enemy has had no idea of using it except as a last resort.

They are now fighting under orders to delay the British advance at every possible point to permit of the completion of the work of making the new position defendable.

On retiring from the Somme last month the Germans apparently expected to hold all the Hindenburg line running southeast from Arras in front of Cambrai, and through St. Quentin and Laon. The important point at he northern end of this line was Vimy Ridge. There is no doubt the Germans never expected to be driven off that ridge by a frontal attack, as was done by the Canadians on Monday.

FRENCH TAKE MORE PRISONERS.

PARIS, April 13. — The French official statement says: "Between the Somme and the Oise our troops this morning attacked German positions south of St. Quentin. Notwithstanding a desperate resistance by the enemy we carried several lines of trenches between the Somme and the St. Quentin Railway. We brought back prisoners and a number of machine guns.

"South of the Oise our advanced troops made progress east of Coucy la Ville and took possession of prisoners and material. There was artillery fighting in the region of the Aisne and in the Champagne.

"Near Verdun two surprise attacks were made by the enemy. They were broken up by our fire.

"The night was calm on the remainder of the front."

REV. T. H. MITCHELL PLACED IN HIS NEW PASTORATE

Inducted at Old St. Andrews in Toronto Yesterday.

Mr. W. A. Chisholm and Mesdames G. Walter Green, J. J. Jamieson, and M. Richardson were in Toronto yesterday and attended the services by which Rev. T. H. Mitchell, formerly of St. Andrew's Church was inducted into his new pastorate in Old St. Andrew's Church. The Modderator of the Toronto Presbytery presided.

The charge to the minister was delivered by Rev. Dr. John Ross who traced the history of the pastorate of St. Andrew's from the old church on the corner of Adelaide and Church streets, and paid a high tribute to the ministry of Rev. Dr. George M Milligan, pastor emeritus, also to the preaching of Prof. Law, who, he said, had given strength and stability to faith and comfort in suffering during the troubled days of war.

Rev. Dr. John Neil delivered the charge to the people, and congratulated them upon their choice. He believed that Mr. Mitchell would prove a worthy successor to those who had ministered to them in the past.

Rev. Forbes Robertson, of Western Presbyterian Church, preached the induction sermon.

A reception was accorded the new minister by the congregation last evening in the church.

STARS AND STRIPES CHEERED AT CIRCUS.

One of the bright features at the Y. M. C. A. Circus last night was a line of boys on the stage each bearing a flag of the Allied Nations. Then little Gerald Patterson, son of Mr. and Mrs. K. G. Patterson, dressed in the well-known costume of Uncle Sam, walked in and added the Stars and Stripes to the row. The sight of "Old Glory" among its new associations was heartily applauded by the audience.

Brick's neck was broken.

JOSEPH RONGO IS HEAVILY FINED FOR ASSAULT

The court was well attended by friends of both parties, all anxious to hear the evidence and the result of the trial.

It is said that Delledonne intends to sue Rongo for damages for injuries caused by the assault.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, APRIL 13, 1917

MILITARY TRAINING AND PHYSICAL CULTURE.

UP AT THE Y. M. C. A. they believe in physical culture rather than military training, on the ground that the one accomplishes more than the latter. Boys trained according to the methods employed in that institution lack nothing in a physical sense. Let them take a course in physical culture, and in the event of war there is little doubt as to their ability to get past the examining doctor.

No better argument in support of the contention of the Y. M. C. A. officials could be advanced than the exhibition which was given at the Grand Opera House last night. It would certainly appear that in the system of training not a single muscle in the human frame has been overlooked. Even the discipline so much boasted of in military training is not lacking. A crowd of boys are seen moving with the same machine-like regularity that distinguishes a company of soldiers.

Mr. Joseph Wearing, the master of ceremonies—or is it the ring master?—at last night's entertainment did not miss the opportunity to boost the work of the institution in which he is so actively interested. Wellington, he reminded the audience, said that the battle of Waterloo was won on the playgrounds of England. The army now fighting the battles of civilization has drawn some of its best recruits from the membership of the Y. M. C. A. Fully seventy per cent. of the eligibles have enlisted, and the local institution has three hundred representatives in khaki.

No better record can be shown by any organization in Canada. The exhibition last night was a marvelous illustration of what can be accomplished by physical culture. The best feature of all, perhaps, was that among all the splendid young fellows who took part there was not a single slacker. No able-bodied man or youth was playing while he should have been fighting. But these boys will be the soldiers of tomorrow in case their services—which heaven forbid—are ever required for national defence.

A PASSING FAD.

THE MEMBERS of the Humane Society in Toronto are agitating for the doing away with blinders on horses. The secretary of the society writes to an inquirer as follows: "What you say in regard to blinders on horses' bridles is quite correct, and I wish we could do away with them in Toronto. The blinders are useless, and I am surprised that firms do not discard them, if only for the saving it would mean in the course of a year. Unfortunately, blinders have been in use some centuries now, and it is difficult to kill an old fad. There is no doubt that they make horses nervous by obscuring their vision, and I believe that if we had fewer blinders we should have fewer accidents on our streets. It may interest you to know that one firm owning some hundreds of horses is gradually discarding them, and I hope this may lead other firms to take similar action."

Silly fads in the accoutrements of the horse survive just as do useless styles in male and female attire. The buttons remain on the back of the tail coat, although it is no longer the vogue to wear a sword belt which these buttons were originally designed to support. Why should the owner of a horse conspire to hide from view one of the most pleasing features that the animal possesses? If Nature had not meant that the horse should see behind as well as in front, the eyes would have been placed in a different position.

A noise behind a nervous horse will make him uneasy, whereas if the animal was able to see the cause of the disturbance it would not ruffle his placidity. A man or woman in the dark may suspect that some person in the immediate vicinity has designs upon his or her purse or person, whereas adequate light would reveal no one more formidable than the parson or the family physician.

THAT U. S. WAR LOAN.

THE COMMITTEE of Ways and Means in the American Congress has unanimously reported in favor of raising seven billion dollars to carry on the war. This is a staggering sum, as the New York Herald says, the greatest amount ever borrowed at once by any government in the world.

Three billions of the amount which it is proposed to raise will be loaned to the Allied Nations in Europe, and the remainder will be used in raising and equipping an army and in increasing the strength of the navy. The United States is financially powerful, more so than at any time in the nation's history, and considerable of this prosperity is due to the war. The Americans waxed rich while other nations spent money to the tune of millions daily. The bonds will bear interest at the rate of three and one-half per cent. and will be entirely free from taxation. As a purely business transaction the purchase is desirable, and there is no fear on the score of a ready sale.

The Administration does not propose to stop at even the large sum of seven billion dollars. It is reported that in addition to this, one and three-quarters of a million dollars will be raised by taxation, the most of which will be imposed upon the profits of corporations. It is evident that the United States has the men and proposes to raise a military and naval force. It has the money and is ready to spend it. The people have the true kind of patriotism now that they have been aroused, and public sentiment will back up the government in any measures that may be taken to carry on the war. The new ally of the Entente family is powerful, rich and enthusiastic. What that ally has decided to do is appreciated by its neighbors. Wave the Stars and Stripes before a Peterborough audience and listen to the cheers with which it is greeted.

THAT OLD THEFT OF CREDIT.

THE LONDON ADVERTISER says truthfully that the Workmen's Compensation Act, under the provisions of which $2,500,000 was paid to the victims of industrial accidents last year, is a real blessing to the people for whose sake it was introduced. Unable to stop with that approval, The Advertiser upsets the dish of beans by calling upon the public to remember that "it is one of the progressive moves forced upon an unwilling and backward Government by the Ontario Liberal party and its leader, Mr. N. W. Rowell."

Why be absurd? Is it impossible to confer upon Mr. Rowell and his followers any credit except such as has been pilfered from the other side? The Liberals were over thirty years in power, and in all that time were unable to show one legislative measure designed for the benefit of the working classes except a flexible act with regard to the employment of child labor.

The matter of a Workmen's Compensation Act was taken up by the late Sir James Whitney long before Mr. Rowell was ever even mentioned as the leader of Ontario Liberals. Sir William Meredith worked on the bill for years, investigating the systems in operation in other countries, including Germany and the United States. The best features to be found in these were incorporated in the Ontario law. When the time came to pass it, it was adopted without pressure from the Opposition, who had no alternative but to follow the wagon. The care taken in the preparation of the Workmen's Compensation Act explains the success of its operation.

LLOYD GEORGE AND PEACE.

PREMIER LLOYD GEORGE says he sees peace coming, such peace, too, as this old world has never known, peace universal and perpetual. This is not the dream of an enthusiast, but the prophecy of a hard-headed man of affairs who in the past has read aright the signs of the times.

The nations now arrayed on the side of civilization, human liberty and justice, can assure for all time the amity of the world when what they are now contending for has been accomplished. This war will have been fought and won in vain unless it makes such cataclysms impossible forever.

THOSE INTERNED SHIPS.

ONE OF THE FIRST ACTS of war on the part of the United States against Germany was the seizing of the vessels that have been interned in American ports. These craft will be used in the carrying trade of the latter nation, and United States troops may be transported in them to Europe to fight against the enemy of the Allies.

The question now arises as to the right of the United States to retain possession of these vessels for all time, and American opinion is divided on the subject. Some of the newspapers hold that they should be kept as a compensation for the American shipping that has been destroyed by the German submarines. Other influential journals hold that the record of the United States, not to acquire anything by conquest, must be adhered to. The use of the interned craft during the war is not objected to, but some newspapers argue that this use must be paid for and the vessels returned to their original owners when the war is over, or, if they are kept by the United States, then Germany must receive full compensation for them. Another paper insists that they be retained as security for the damages Germany will be called upon to pay.

A peculiar problem has arisen in this connection. If the German vessels are used to carry food to the Entente nations in Europe, will the Germans persevere in their submarine warfare and attempt to sink their own boats?

BILLY SUNDAY DISCUSSES WAR

Billy Sunday, who is now conducting revival services in New York, said the other day in referring to recent interviews in which he had been quoted as wanting to wipe out various foreign countries:

"I never said either in private or in public that the German should be blotted off the map. What I did say and now repeat, is that German imperialism should be blotted off the map. For the German people I have nothing but love, nothing but sympathy, nothing but pity. In these days of conflict I believe you'll find no more loyal, brave or patriotic people beneath the Stars and Stripes than those with German blood in their veins.

"The German people have been blindly led. They have had the doctrine that might makes right and that the end justifies the means inculcated into them for generations. It was the salvation of the German people that led us to enter into this conflict. What we want is to see them set free from militarism that has enslaved them for for generations.

"Ghastly, hideous, infernal Prussian militarism, stand up and look at the women and children you have murdered as they climb the coral reefs from the haven of lost ships, weeping, holding out their hands towards the Stars and Stripes, crying, "Help, help, help."

"Look at bleeding, starved outraged Belgium, as she turns her weeping eyes over three thousand miles of ocean, her bleeding hands outstretched toward the Stars and Stripes, crying for help.

"Look at the millions of poor, tortured, outraged murdered women and children of Armenia, with their hands outstretched toward the Stars and Stripes, crying for help.

"If it were not for the brave men under the flag of Italy, under the tricolor of France, under the Union Jack of Britain, the Germans would be pounding at our doors. If it were not for the British Fleet under Admiral Jellicoe and Admiral Beatty New York would be now a heap of ruins, and you'd be paying the price. Now German militarism is doomed, and the guns of the United States will help dig its grave. We will destroy it or it will destroy the world."

Wit and Wisdom

Dableigh—There is one thing I don't understand.

Miss Keen—Oh, more than that, surely.

"Does your wife believe everything you tell her?" Yes. She believes everything I tell her is wrong.

Maud—Miss Oldun thinks that hotel clerk just lovely.

Ether—Why so?

Maude—She wrote opposite her name on the hotel register, suite 16.

"You say that Miss Oldstyle is suffering from severe mental shock? What caused it? "Why, she's been claiming that she's only twenty-eight years old, and then somebody found her name is on those 20-years Ago columns in the newspapers."

"How do you account for his failure?" "He proceeded on the theory that people had to buy goods at his store."

"Why don't you ever laugh at my jokes?" "Because I was brought up to respect old age and feebleness."

Mrs. Jinks—My husband was a confirmed smoker when I married him, but today he never smokes.

Mrs. Binks—Good! To break off a life-time habit like that requires a strong will.

Mrs. Jinks—Well, that's what I've got.

"Bobby, did you have a good time at the party?"

"Yes, mamma."

"Why didn't you stay until it was over?"

"What was the use? I couldn't eat any more."

COUNTY PLOWING MATCH

A meeting of the directors of the County of Peterboro Plowmen's Association was held Saturday afternoon, when it was decided to hold a special competition this year in addition to the regular plowing match. Five prizes will be offered for the best plowed field in stubble, of not less than five acres, and open to any make of plow. The competition will be open to any resident of the county who joins the association. It was also decided to make application to the township councils for grants of $5.00 each, which will be used in conducting this competition.

Entries for the special competition must be handed to the secretary (Mr. Charles Brown) by September 15th, and the plowing must be completed by October 15th. It is desired that the decision of the judges shall be ready for announcement at the time of holding of the County match. Further announcement about the competition will be made later.

ROMANCE OF AGRICULTURE

Persia First Recognized Plant 500 Years Before Christ

The story of alfalfa is one of the romances of agriculture. Five hundred years before Christ the plant was recognized in Persia, but it was not until a little over half a century ago that it first became generally known in North America.

In the interval between these periods the history of alfalfa is interwoven with the rise and fall of Empires and the movements of armed hosts. Alfalfa furnished fodder for the war horses of the Persians when Greece was invaded by the latter. Carried to northern Africa, possibly by one of the followers of the Queen of Sheba, it was later taken to Italy and still later the Moors left it in Spain as the one really beneficent legacy of the Arab conquest. When the Spaniards themselves became conquerors, in turn they took the plant with them to Mexico in North America and Chile in South America, and from Mexico it has spread, via California, all over the Western and Middle Western States, and from Chile it has crossed the Andes to feed the herds of Argentina.

To the Arabs we owe the origin of the name by which the plant is best known. To them it was alfacfaca, "the best fodder." To Italy we owe the plant's other name, lucerne. While the Spaniards are chiefly responsible for the introduction of alfalfa into the warmer States of the neighboring Union, the growing of the crop in Canada and the northern States appears to have been made possible by the introduction of seed from Germany. Alfalfa was first taken to Germany by the Spaniards, and in time it became hardened by its environment. From Germany Wendelin Grimm in 1857 brought a 20 pound package of this hardy seed to America, and from that 20 pound packet most of the alfalfa grown in Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana originated. About the same time another German brought to the Niagara district other hardy seed, and from this has sprung the Ontario variegated of to-day, a variety which has given as satisfactory results in Ontario as Grimm has given in Minnesota. But what a story! From Persia to Greece, from northern Africa to Spain, from Spain to Germany on one side and Mexico on the other, and then from Germany to Ontario and Minnesota.

SCIENCE OF BASEBALL

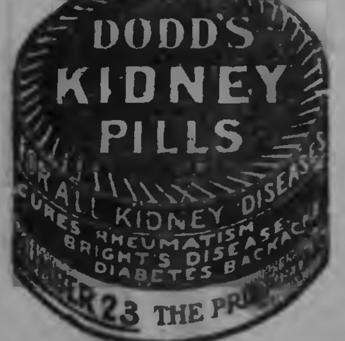
Distance Between Bases and Weight of Balls Not Result of Accident

The fathers of baseball builded better than they knew when they laid out the first diamond and decided upon the weight and size of balls and bats. The popularity of the game as a spectacle depends largely upon its uncertainty, and its uncertainty depends entirely upon the relation between the distances between bags and the plate, the distance a ball can be batted and thrown, and the time required to make the ball travel, whether propelled by arm or bat.

As every "fan" knows, the bases are 90 feet apart. The fastest time ever made about the bases from home to home was 13 4-5 seconds, and this not during a game. Fifteen seconds about the bases is fast time, or 3 3-4 seconds between bases with a running start for all except first base. [illegible] base has been made from the plate on a bunt and run in 3 1-5 seconds, but the time is very unusual, four seconds flat being good time. Ask a "fan" how fast a ball batted so it strikes the ground in the infield before it is fielded goes on the average. He will guess anywhere from 30 to 300 miles an hour! But hold a stop-watch on all batted balls during a game and count only those which are infield grounders, and you will find that they average about the speed of a fast express train—say 66 miles an hour, or 88 feet per second.

The shortstop will play from 110 to 135 feet from the plate. Suppose he gets an infield grounder 125 feet from the plate. At 88 feet a second, it has taken 1.4 seconds to reach him. Allowing 1.7 seconds for the throw to first base, he has 0.9 of a second only in which to make the catch, draw his arm back, and make his throw. Yet more men are thrown out at first base on ground balls fielded by the shortstop than ever beat the throw to the first station! The play is almost always close—so close that one of the differences between a good and a poor first baseman is that the good one will reach far forward to get a ball, knowing that the time it takes the ball to travel the five feet he can reach may make the difference between "safe" and "out!"

It is because of this delicate balance between time of batted ball and throw, and the ability of a man to run 90 feet, that the baseball authorities are so rigid in their requirements of the structure, size, and weight of a baseball, and why major league players can play with none but major league balls made by one of two great firms. They know, these baseball Solons, that a fraction of an ounce difference in weight, a fraction of an inch difference in size, may weigh down the balance in favor either of the fielder or the batter—and the balance (and so the uncertainty) must be kept as perfect as possible.



THE PERKINS ROW

Fallacy of a Furnace Shown by Collected Statistics.

DOCTORED DATA GIVEN OUT.

Why the Head of the House Renounced His Intentions of Getting a Cellar Heater to Save Wife's Life. She Ignores All.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.]

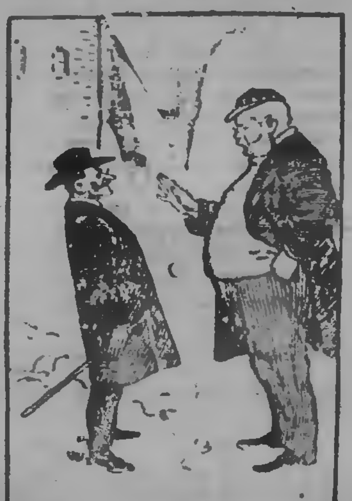
THE hour was 7 o'clock in the evening, and Mrs. Perkins sat darning one of her stockings, and Mr. Perkins was surrounding the coal stove and shivering now and then. By and by, after Mrs. Perkins had heard him growling to himself half a dozen times, she quietly observed:

"Mr. Perkins, you keep a diary. Please look it over for the first half of last December."

"Any particular object?" he queried.

"I want to find what you said about a hot air furnace on a certain evening."

"Um, um! Let me see. December. Here is the 1st, 5th, 10th. It is recorded here, my dear, that the evening of Dec. 10 was a stinger. We had this old stove red hot and were shivering at that. Yes; it was zero and below."



PERKINS ADVISED TO SHUNT A FURNACE.

"And isn't it recorded that you made any observations?"

"Yes, it is. On the evening in question I said that I would have a furnace in this house if I lived to the 1st of May. Do you wish to make any remarks on that observation?"

"Just a few, Mr. Perkins. May came and went."

"It surely did."

"And the summer came and went."

"I won't dispute it."

"And the winter is gone."

"Yes, Mrs. Perkins."

"And the furnace is not in yet. You are hugging that stove, while shivers go up and down your back. I do not ask for explanations. I am simply referring to the Perkins way of doing things."

"I see the point. I could see it even if I weren't hugging the stove. You wish for no explanation, but I beg the privilege of making a few. I seem to have been remiss. I seem to have usurped the functions of the furnace and given out the hot air myself."

"Oh, you will wriggle out of it, of course," said Mrs. Perkins in her lofty way. "When you bring what you call your philosophy to bear nothing can stand before it."

Philosophy on the Subject.

"Um, um! Mrs. Perkins, I was a widower and you a widow. I brought so called philosophy to bear, and here we are as a consequence. Why not bring the same to bear on the question of a furnace? In the first place, it was early in December. The man who won't in December promise himself a hot air furnace for a year ahead is a shortsighted person."

"Oh, it was just a promise, was it?"

"In good faith, madam—in the best of faith. In fact, as recorded here in the diary, it was only four days later that I met Gilian, who has a furnace in his home. I spoke of my intentions to him, and he took me by the hand, and in the most earnest and solemn manner he replied:

"'Perkins, don't do it. Hot air furnaces are killing off more people than tuberculosis. You are breathing baked air half the time. You are inhaling dust and cinders into your lungs. You are wantonly wasting money for coal. You are tempting the coal man to give you 1,800 pounds for a ton and thereby losing his soul.'

"He said that to me, Mrs. Perkins, with tears rolling down his cheeks, and could I call him a liar? What kind of a husband would I have been not to determine to investigate further? Having married you only two years ago, was I to fill your lungs with dust and cinders and kill you off?"

"Nonsense!" she snapped.

"And so, having met Swift and knowing he had had a furnace for years, I asked him if he had any objections to them. He turned and answered me:

"'Mr. Perkins, at this very minute men are in my cellar removing my furnace. It has aged me and my wife by twenty years. It has sowed the seeds of consumption in my children. Out it goes, and I shall return to coal stoves. Beware of the hot air furnace, Perkins—beware! The dear Mrs. Perkins will be a dead woman a month after you have put in one.'

"Those are the words he said as near as I can recollect them, and what was I to do? Put yourself in my place, Mrs. Perkins."

"You should have called him an idiot and got the furnace. Land knows, there's cinders and dust and dirt and ashes enough about an old coal stove."

Stove Men Gets In His Work.

"And then I made it a point to go to Merriweather. He is in the stove and furnace business, you know. It is his business to sell them, but he is a truthful man. When I asked him if a hot air furnace was a good thing he looked at me with pitying eyes for a long minute and then replied:

"'Perkins, do you want to kill off Mrs. Perkins in order to marry a third? If you do then get a furnace. Why, man, the dust and cinders they throw out are killing tens of thousands of people every winter. Haven't you read of that experiment in Germany where a furnace introduced in a stable killed a strong bull in six weeks? Is that dear Mrs. Perkins stronger than a bull?'

"That's what Merriweather said, and could I say that he was lying to me? Take the case as it is, Mrs. Perkins."

"I do, Mr. Perkins, and I think those men made a fool of you. In another year you'll need a guardian."

"But I wasn't quite satisfied yet," he continued. "I had promised you a hot air furnace, and I wished to keep my promise. I wished to keep it even if you had to go around with a rag tied over your mouth to keep the cinders out of your lungs. I made it my business to call on Dr. Cuddy. He received me with a smile, but the moment I mentioned furnace to him he grew serious and said:

"'None o' that, Perkins. If you want to kill off your wife do it with an ax like a man. You shall not kill her by slow degrees. If you put a hot air furnace in your house I shall have you arrested for contemplating murder.'

"That's what he said, Mrs. Perkins, and when I had satisfied him that I really had no murderous intentions against you he showed me some of the hot air statistics he had compiled."

"He doesn't know enough to doctor a sick cat!"

Figures on Furnace Failures.

"And those statistics, my love, showed that hot air furnaces give out dust, ashes, dirt, gases, smoke and certain acids.

"Each year they make liars out of 50,000 coal dealers.

"The coal got in for the furnace may explode any moment, and any moment it may take fire through spontaneous combustion.

"The furnace is out one half of the time, and the other half it is giving out its poisonous gases.

"You can snug up to a coal stove and feel that you have a loving wife and a cozy home, but a furnace repulses you.

"You can burn up your old corsets and overcoats in a coal stove and not affect the atmosphere. Those things heaved into a furnace mean another victim for the grave.

"Living over a hot air furnace, the same as riding in an auto, inclines people to lie.

"You put half a ton of coal into a furnace and where is it? You put a scuttleful into a coal stove and the house is immediately warm clear to the garret.

"These are not half the statistics the doctor had, but after the information I had got on all sides could I carry out my promise to put in a furnace? You must see that it was impossible. You must [illegible], my dear Mrs. Perkins—

"Hello, she's gone out!"

And so had the fire in the coal stove.

"Something new?"

"At a woman's lunch—yes. In addition to the fruit salads and macaroons, she provided a few ham sandwiches."

Homemade Jewel Buttons.

This is how to make these buttons, like those they have on blouses sold in the smartest shops: Have a button mold the size desired, cover with material of blouse; then string small sized beads (a combination of Persian colors is striking), coil the beads on top of button to cover it, tack each one in place, and you will be surprised to see what an ornamental button you have, with little expense.

Try hemming chiffon or georgette crape this way: Run two or four small stitches, then make a buttonhole stitch; draw this last one firmly and then make three or four small stitches again. Continue this till the hem is done; then you will find the hem is formed by tiny scallops, very ornamental for a dainty collar or front of blouse.

A Garter Purse.

If you are addicted to the bad habit of carrying your valuables and money with you wherever you go you should provide yourself with one of the new garter purses. They are made of two pockets, one large for jewels, the other small for money, and both attached to straps to buckle tightly around the leg below the knee. They come in all shades of satin.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

NOT LIKE AN EXPLOSION

Eye troubles do not come all of a sudden, like an unexpected explosion; they come on so gradually that you do not notice it till it gets so bad that the knowledge of the weakness is forced upon you. The best way is to let Dr. Fowler test the eyes, and you will then know exactly their condition, as his scientific testing apparatus is absolutely correct. Do not wait till the trouble gets bad let Dr. Fowler give you expert advice.

RULED EIGHT TRIBES

Late Hon. Francis Ogletree of Portage Was a Pioneer

The death took place at the family residence of Hon. Francis Ogletree one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Portage la Prairie, and one of the pioneers of Manitoba. The late Mr Ogletree came to Canada in 1821 living in the eastern provinces until the spring of 1869, when he started for Manitoba. This journey was made with T. W. Boddy under very trying circumstances, there being no railroad then into Winnipeg. Mr Ogletree took up land in Portage district and three months later went to Ontario and brought out his wife and family. On March 10, 1871, the first Legislative Council of Manitoba was formed and Mr. Ogletree was one of the members and remained in the Council until its abolition six years later.

Some time after he was appointed to the position of Indian agent which he filled for 20 years. Although his term extended over a troublous period including the second Riel Rebellion, he never had any trouble with the eight tribes under his jurisdiction. During the years since his settlement in Portage Mr Ogletree was one of the greatest and most dominating forces in the upbuilding and development of Manitoba.

If you are suffering from dyspepsia, indigestion or sour stomach you should try a mixture of Salou Pepsis and Iridin.

This is said to be the formula of Dr. Banta's famous prescription which gave him a world-wide reputation.

SECOND YEAR MUSICAL COMEDY SUCCESS
"THE MILLION DOLLAR DOLL"
BY LOUIS WESLYN

A pretty dance number in the big musical comedy success "The Million Dollar Doll," which comes to The Grand to-morrow (Saturday) for matinee at 2:30 and evening 8:15.

"CIRCUS" AT THE GRAND

Mr Joseph Wearing, silk hatted, Prince Albert coated, white vested and with all the other requisite equipments of the professional ringmaster, acted in that capacity at the Y. M. C. A. Circus at the Grand Opera House last night. Stepping to the front of the stage, he announced that the performance was about to begin, which it did with the grand entry of the 125 actors who took part. Piper Robt. G. Yeaman provided the music for the march, and the Shetland pony and the elephant, without which no circus parade is complete, were not lacking.

The program was a long one, but it proceeded smoothly from beginning to end. There were one or two delays, but these will be avoided when the entertainment is repeated tonight. Physical Director Roper, of the Y. M. C. A., Mr. M. B. Cowan, and others who trained the boys for special acts, have every reason to feel gratified at he showing made by their pupils. Mr. Cowan had boys who gave dazzling exhibitions of skill with the flying rings, something in which their trainer is himself an expert. Tom Pogue and Sumner Lee were among the heroes of the evening in their evolutions on the horizontal bars. Messrs. Jones, Walton, Flowers and Parsons formed a quartette armed with saxaphones from which they drew weird music. "Hear them twice and you are sure to die," said the program, with reference to this feature. Fortunately for the audience, when the quartette were encored, they abandoned their instruments and responded with a less excruciating vocal selection.

Gordon Yeaman, son of the sturdy piper, was the director of the Dutch and Highland Fling dances, in both of which the performers were in costume. The Dutch "belles" who took part acted the feminine role so naturally that some in the audience believed them to be members of the fair sex, but it was a clear case of personation.

Harry Carte, Charles Elliot and Kell Harstone, as clowns, demonstrated that there are professional jobs ready for them in case necessity for a change of occupation arises.

The famous Charlie Chaplin was personated by Hugh Austin, whose misfortune was that there was no camera working to preserve his performance for an admiring public.

The "elephant" fresh from the jungles of India was trained and handled by Gordon Webb in native costume, who in good Anglo-Saxon, declared he could not understand a word of the language of the country in which he found himself.

The managers of the circus promise that the entertainment will be better than ever tonight, and that should be sufficient to assure a large attendance. Every act put on last night was generously applauded, and if the performers had answered every recall the show would have lasted until morning.

USES FOR BORAX.

To brighten your old, faded carpets, rub with warm water and ammonia to which a tablespoonful of borax has been added.

Add to the last rinsing water to make your clothes white.

Use powdered borax to get rid of cockroaches and beetles.

For freckles, add a quarter of a drachm of powdered borax to one ounce of lemon juice and half a drachm of sugar; mix; let it stand for three days, and rub on the face occasionally.

A teaspoonful added to a gallon of hard water will make it soft.

To clean your hairbrush, add a tablespoon of borax and a tablespoonful of soda to a basin of water. Dip the brush up and down in this and then rinse and dry.

Thinking Men Favor "Cressman Clothes"

By thinking men we mean those pensive, calculating fellows who look before they leap, "like the man in the illustration below," who first select the clothier and then the garment. Why? Because they want to deal with a clothier who knows when he says "it's all wool and a yard wide." That's why "Cressman Clothes" have come to the fore—they're all wool and a yard wide, and depend on it when a Cressman salesman says so.

Convenor.

An interesting comparison may be made between the shipments of the first three months of 1917 and the total shipments for last year. During the whole of 1916 153 cases were shipped as compared with 133 cases for the past three months. The contents of the cases for the year 1915-1916 were as follows:

83 dressing gowns, 477 day shirts, 380 pyjamas, 2,200 pairs socks, 795 sheets, 5,948 towels, 854 pillow cases.

This year, during January, February and March there have been shipped 207 dressing gowns, 425 day shirts, 909 pyjamas, 1,656 pairs of socks, 777 sheets, 4,164 towels, and 839 pillow cases.

A study of these reports should be convincing proof that the work of the local Red Cross Society has not lagged but that untiring and persistent efforts are being put forth from day to day and week to week to try and meet the ever-increasing demand for supplies.

As numerous reports have reached the department as to anti-recruiting sentiments of speakers of this cult, this action is deemed advisable at this time.

CITY HAS DUST BUT NO CLAMOR

MAYOR KYLIE OF LINDSAY TOOK NOTE OF LOCAL CONDITIONS.

His Worship Mayor Kylie of Lindsay was in this city recently, and when he returned home, asked if he noted anything of public interest, said:

"While in Peterborough the dust particles were floating around in profusion, just the same as in this town, but no person seemed to clamor about it. Those conditions brought about through meterological phenomena were accepted complacently, and the water sprinkler was not called upon to alleviate the nuisance."

"The sprinkling of paved streets is not conducive to the life of a pavement," said his Worship, "and in weather of uneven temperature, such as we have experienced in the past, the Mayor thinks it is better to put up with a little dust, and merchants should keep their goods indoors until the water can be put on without fear of frost coming in a few hours afterwards.
